SOVIET ARMY INVADES CHINA

HOOVER TELLS FISHING JOYS OF A PRESIDENT

Talks to 5,000 Near Virginia Camp.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Va., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—President Hoover gave this hamlet the largest day of its history today, when he participated in a celebration in recognition of his selection of a summer retreat in the Blue Ridge mountains. Motoring down from his camp at the headwaters of the Rapidan river, the President addressed a crowd of probably 5,000. This is considerably more than reside in Madison county.

The President took the occasion to reveal how fishing, which was the lure that attracted him to the Rapidan, brings him refreshment of mind.

"I have discovered the reason why Presidents take to fishing, the silent sport, said President Hoover. "Apparently the only opportunity for refreshment of one's soul and clarification of one's thoughts by solitude to Presidents lies through fishing.

Prayer and Fishing.

"It is generally realized and accepted that prayer is the most personal of all human relationships. On such occasions as that, men and women are entitled to be alone and undisturbed. Next to prayer fishing is the most personal relationship of man and of more important than the fact itself, everybody concedes that the fish will not bite in the presence of the public.

"Fishing seems to be the sole avenue left to presidents through which they may escape to their own thoughts and may live in their own imaginings and find relief from the pneumatic hammer of constant personal contacts and refreshment of mind in the babble of rippling brooks.

"Moreover, it is a constant reminder of the democracy of life, of humility and of human frailty—for all men are equal before fish. And it is desirable that the President of the United States should be periodically reminded of this fundamental fact—that the forces of nature discriminate for no man."

Blimp Hovers Overhead.

Today's celebration was more than a local affair. Gov. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia was being present to extend the greetings of the state to the President. The governor arrived in an army blimp which hovered overhead while the speechmaking was in progress.

Famous military units of Virginia, the Richmond Blues, the Monticello Guards of Charlottesville, and an artillery company from Fredericksburg, added a touch of color. Bands accompanied the military detachments playing martial music.

The President arrived shortly before noon accompanied by Mrs. Hoover and their week-end guests. They departed as soon as the speeches were over. The crowd remained for an old fashioned barbecue.

Loud speakers carried the Hoover speech to all parts of the crowd, which applauded the Republican president heartily. It happens that this congressional district went Republican last fall, helping to swing the state of Virginia into the Hoover column.

President Hails Neighbors.

The President addressed the crowd as "Fellow citizens of Madison county," which evoked cheers.

"Both Mrs. Hoover and I feel greatly honored," he continued, "by the generous reception you have extended us today. It is a welcome as one of your neighbors, and it is as a neighbor that I participate with you."

"In the early years of our republic Virginia was the home of presidents, and it would seem appropriate that with the changing years, the president should at least have a week-end camp in Virginia. There are other sound reasons why such a connection should be maintained between the presidents and Virginia. The fact is that those strong Virginians who selected the site for our national capital were apparently impervious to heat and humidity, or at least they were unaware of how much pavements and modern buildings can contribute to raise the temperature. But Virginia herself now offers an antidote in the wonderful mountains which you have dedicated to the new Shenandoah national park and the access to it that you have protected by your newly improved roads."

Even President Must Play.

"It has become a habit and a necessity for our government officials who have the major anxieties in national affairs to seek some other place from which to conduct their work for prolonged periods in the summer time.

10,000 TROOPS MARCH ON; MANY REPORTED SLAIN

War Imminent as Forces Clash.

BULLETIN.

MUKDEN, Aug. 18.—(Sunday.)—(AP)—Fighting between Chinese and soviet troops in the Dalainor region still was proceeding early today with Chinese losses officially reported at more than 60 killed and many missing. Reinforcements were being rushed to the battle area all day yesterday by China.

Marshal Chang Hsue Hliang denied that White Russian and Chinese troops have invaded Russian territory.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—(AP)—The first military operations on a major scale along the Manchurian-Siberian border, where armies of soviet Russia and China have been facing each other for some weeks, were reported today from Mukden and purported to be based on an official announcement.

An army of 10,000 Russians equipped with machine guns and 30 field guns was said to have penetrated western Manchuria both north and south of Manchouli. It was believed that their objective was Dalai Nor.

Wage 3 Hour Conflict.

Peiping reported what was apparently an incident in this general advance. Twelve Russians and four Chinese, according to this version, were killed near Dalai Nor when a troop of 700 soviet cavairymen engaged Chinese soldiers in a three hour conflict.

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Tokio, the commander of the Chinese railway guards in the Manchouli district announces China's casualties as 27 dead and 31 wounded. He believed the Russian losses also were considerable. The terrified civilian population of the region fled into Harbin, the dispatch adds.

From Japanese sources came other reports of minor border clashes such as have been rumored almost daily for more than a week. Even before these latest and more serious invasions it was said that China had drawn attention to the signatories of the Kellogg anti-war pact to its infraction by Russia.

Situation Reaches Crisis.

This notification was cited in Moscow today as evidence of Chinese insincerity and that China had been made "the tool of capitalistic powers." The soviet leaders charged that the seizure of the Chinese eastern railway and the dismissal of soviet employés was a well calculated step in a scheme to draw Russia into war.

They contended that the soviet union had adopted only strict measures of resistance in the face of "the most unprecedented provocation." With the official charges and counter charges from both sides and the paucity of direct information the actual situation around Manchouli was in some doubt tonight.

Soviets Repel Invaders.

MOSCOW, Russia, Aug. 17.—(AP)—A detachment of Chinese and Russian White guards tonight were alleged to have crossed the soviet border at the village of Poltavskaya and to have surrounded a soviet outpost nearly two miles from the border in the direction of Nikolsk-Ussurilsk. They opened fire with machine guns but were repulsed by soviet troops.

Moscow Denies Invasion.

MOSCOW, Aug. 17.—[U. P.]—Denial was made in authoritative quarters today that soviet troops have invaded Manchuria. Official comment on that and other phases of the dispute arising from China's seizure of the partly Russian-owned Chinese eastern railway was expected soon.

China Admits Parley Failure.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HARBIN, Manchuria, Aug. 17.—The complete futility of the Chinese attempt to open negotiations with the soviet Russian delegates was admitted yesterday by Lu Yung-kwan, president of the Chinese Eastern railway. As a result of the Russian refusal to negotiate, all the Chinese delegates returned here yesterday.

War Lord Calls Conference.

MANCHOULI, Manchuria, Aug. 17.—[U. P.]—Gen. Chang Hsueh-liang, war lord of Manchuria and in command of the Chinese troops summoned a military conference to cope with new developments on the soviet frontiers. Following the clash yesterday between soviet and Chinese troops, Gen. Chang telegraphed Gen. Wang Fu-lin to dispatch 500 additional cavalry to the frontier from Tuitsihar.

BOY, 11, KILLS FATHER TO PROTECT MOTHER IN FAMILY QUARREL

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Frank S. Howard, wealthy automobile dealer, was shot dead by his 11 year old son today during a quarrel with his wife, Irene.

Detectives who investigated said they learned Howard had returned home intoxicated and began abusing his wife. The son, Richard, remonstrated with his father, and then, detectives said, ran from the room, returned with a pistol, and shot his father. The boy is held at a police station.

ACTORS' STRIKE IN HOLLYWOOD IS CALLED OFF

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 17.—(AP)—The battle of the Actors' Equity association to enforce closed shop in the motion picture industry in Hollywood was suspended indefinitely tonight.

President Frank Gillmore of Equity announced at a closed meeting of members that the order of the equity council forbidding equity members signing regulation contracts of the Motion Picture Producers, Inc., had been withdrawn temporarily. The equity action will allow all members to return to work in Hollywood studios under the contract which Equity had been attempting to outlaw.

Gillmore said that William Canavan, head of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employés and chairman of the joint committee of the five big theatrical brotherhoods, had requested that he, or Paul Turner, equity chief counsel, return to New York to work in connection with the unions. Gillmore said he expected to depart for New York shortly.

CAT GIVES ALARM; GIRLS' SCREAMS CHASE BURGLAR

The screams of three girls early yesterday routed a burglar in the home of Edward Meeker, at 803 Milburn street, Evanston.

Miss Cecile McDonnell, 19 years old, 815 Milburn street, and Miss Dorothy Ball, 20, daughter of a Northwestern university professor, were sleeping on the second floor when a cat ran upstairs and leaped on their bed. Miss McDonnell awoke and listened. A few minutes later a prowler entered.

She screamed, waking Miss Ball and Miss Pamela Meeker, 19 years old, who was in an adjoining room. The burglar ran downstairs, with the girls in pursuit. Miss Meeker, who was hurt in an automobile accident five weeks ago and wore a cast, made her first trip downstairs in the chase.

With his revolver pointed at the girls, the burglar fled.

Let Me Out of Jail, Sinclair Asks Hoover

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil operator, has appealed to President Hoover for commutation of the sentence he is serving in the District of Columbia jail for contempt of the District Supreme court, it became known today. He pleads ill health and mental despondency as a result of confinement.

His application for clemency was laid personally before President Hoover last Thursday by Sinclair's close friend, Harry H. Rogers, Tulsa, Okla., banker. It was submitted to Attorney General Mitchell on the same day. Rogers, prominent in Oklahoma Republican politics and a former president of Rotary International, visited the White House Thursday and was closeted with the President about five minutes, but declined at the time to reveal what had brought him there.

It is generally believed that Rogers was given no encouragement to hope that the President would interfere.

In Jail Since May 6.

Sinclair entered the jail on May 6 to begin service of his first term of three months for contempt of the senate's Teapot Dome committee. Within a few weeks after he entered the jail the United States Supreme court upheld another sentence of six months imposed on Sinclair by Justice Frederick L. Siddons in connection with the activities of private detectives engaged by the oil man to shadow the jury during his Teapot Dome conspiracy trial. Service of the six months' sentence was ordered to begin immediately upon expiration of the first sentence and it is the latter that Sinclair seeks to have commuted.

Periodical reports from the jail have been that the oil magnate was in excellent health. Reporters who saw him in the jail yesterday declared he seemed to be in good spirits. Jail officials were surprised when told sponsors of Sinclair's appeal have depicted him as liable to "jump out of a window or otherwise make away with himself."

Health Good, Says Jailer.

"So far as I can observe—and I see him every day—he's neither physically ill nor mentally despondant," declared Maj. William Peak, superintendent of the district jail, under whose direction Sinclair has acted as assistant to the jail pharmacist. "He has done his work in the pharmacy regularly and without complaint. His appetite has been O. K. and his color, I think, is better than when he came in."

The application for commutation is in the hands of District Attorney Leo Rover, to whom it was referred for the recommendations of Justice Siddons and Justice Peyton Gordon, who, lay, as Mr. Rover's predecessor, prosecuted the jury tampering charges against Sinclair. The application, with the recommendations attached, will be forwarded to James A. Finch, department of justice attorney in charge of pardons, who will review and forward the file with his recommendation to Attorney General Mitchell. The latter in turn will recommend approval or rejection by the President.

A clemency application for Henry Mason Day, Sinclair's associate, also has been presented to the President. Day is serving a four month sentence in the district jail for complicity in the jury shadowing activities of Sinclair.

WIFE BEATER, IN JAIL, WINS FIFTY "THOU" ON RACES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Aug. 17.—Fate in the opinion of Frederick Propinchuck, 36 year old Roumanian, is teasing. On Monday Frederick, who had beaten his wife, appeared before Magistrate J. C. Massie charged with assault. He was sentenced to a week in jail and ten strokes of the strap.

Last night Frederick sat in the county jail in Welland. A warden appeared and handed Frederick a telegram. He reached inside and drew out the small yellow slip, and laboriously translated his message. Suddenly his eyes bulged, he stood up and emitted a blood-curdling whoop.

The telegram informed Frederick that his ticket in a recent British sweepstakes had been a winner and he would receive $50,000 without de-

Baraboo, Wis., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—The suspicion directed at James Parrillo turned to pure gold today. All the circumstances that had been regarded with skepticism and distrust turned to establish his tragic heroism.

With the recovery of Parrillo's body from Devil's lake this afternoon it was discovered that the young attaché of the Field museum of Chicago must have gone to the bottom in a vain, heroic attempt to save his bride of two weeks.

As the boating tragedy of Aug. 8 was reconstructed in the light of all that is known now, Parrillo, who was 22 years old, must have leaped into fifty-three feet of water, trying to rescue his wife, Philomena, who had fallen overboard. Mrs. Parrillo's body was taken from the lake yesterday.

County Officials Disconcerted.

Sheriff Ernest C. Miller, Coroner F. E. Tryon, a physician, and District Attorney Frank B. Moss of Sauk county were disconcerted by the developments. Their consternation began when Dr. Frank Weeks, assistant state pathologist at Madison, following an autopsy on the body of the 21 year old bride, reported that she had not died of a fracture of the skull as they had reported, but that her lungs were full of water and that she had been drowned.

Dr. Weeks said further that although the Sauk county officials had stated Mrs. Parrillo was approaching motherhood she was not in that condition at all.

The authorities' consternation was complete when, within two hours after Dr. Weeks had reported the findings of his postmortem examination, the body of Parrillo floated to the surface of Devil's lake while they were still expounding other theories.

Rent Boat and Disappear.

Parrillo and his bride arrived in Baraboo on Aug. 7. On the following day they went to Devil's lake, four miles south, rented a boat, and during the forenoon went rowing. They did not reappear, and the next day their boat, containing some of their clothing and a camera, floated ashore. It was concluded they had met with an accident and were drowned.

That theory held good until Mrs. Parrillo's body was found in the water on Friday. The authorities took it ashore, and to Baraboo. Within a few hours they said Dr. Tryon had examined it, found there was no water in the lungs, that the young woman had died of a fractured skull and was to have become a mother shortly. Dr. Tryon was reported to have found other marks of violence on the body besides the skull fracture.

Camera Helps Tell Story.

Now, with all those supposed facts refuted by scientific examination, it is the camera found in the boat that has furnished the evidence out of which the story of Parrillo's heroism is reconstructed.

The camera contained a roll of film on which six pictures had been taken. The last of the six, taken presumably just before the tragedy, early in the afternoon, was a photograph of the bride sitting at the oars. It was a picture taken from the stern of the boat, with the young woman wielding the oars and looking into the lens.

The theory is that immediately after this picture was taken the couple changed seats in the rocking flat bottomed craft and that Mrs. Parrillo, in passing her husband, lost her balance and fell into the water.

Since the boat did not overturn, there was left only the supposition that the young husband leaped into the water after her.

REPORTED SEEN OVER EASTERN SIBERIAN CITY

Keeps Up 60 Mile an Hour Average.

BULLETIN.

[Copyright: 1929: By the New York Times.]

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany (Sunday), Aug. 18.—The Graf Zeppelin reported her position at 7 o'clock a. m. Berlin time (12 a. m. Chicago time) as latitude 62 degrees N. longitude 123.20 E.

This would show the Zeppelin continuing her southward swing toward Tokio, some 2,000 miles away.

BULLETIN.

IRKUTSK, Siberia, Aug. 17.—(U.P.)—Reports reaching here at 6 a. m. (approximately 6 p. m., Saturday, E. S. T.), today said that the dirigible Graf Zeppelin had been sighted over Yakutsk, East Siberia.

BULLETIN.

TOKIO, Aug. 18.—(Sunday)—(AP)—The Central wireless station here picked up a message from the Graf Zeppelin at 7:15 a. m. (5:15 p. m. Saturday, Chicago daylight saving time), in which the dirigible reported its position as 62 degrees north latitude and 120 degrees east longitude.

The position would place the airship over the Viliuisk mountains, due west of Yakutsk. The message indicated that Dr. Eckener was slowly swinging the nose of the Zeppelin southward again in conformance with the great circle course.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—(U. P.)—The Graf Zeppelin's position at 11 a. m. Chicago daylight saving time was latitude 63 north, longitude 115 east, according to a dispatch from the Pacific fleet received at the navy department today. Navy officials placed this position as 2,100 miles from Tokio. The flagship Pittsburgh of the Asiatic squadron gave the Zeppelin weather reports today, the navy announced.

TOKIO, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Thrilling the imaginations of the ancient orient and eating up the miles over the wilds of Siberia, the air liner Graf Zeppelin today for the first time got into touch with the goal of her perilous flight from Friedrichshafen to Tokio.

Powerful Japanese wireless stations at 3:40 p. m. tonight (7:40 a. m. Chicago daylight saving time) picked up the position of the dirigible in the heart of Siberia, rushing on to Tokio with a following wind which enabled Dr. Eckener to cruise with three motors.

At that time the Graf was estimated to be roughly 2,700 miles from Tokio, or three-fifths of her total run. She could cover this distance in 48 hours by maintaining a speed of 60 miles an hour. If she meets favorable weather, she should make it easily, as Dr. Eckener has kept well above an average of 60 miles on the voyage hitherto.

750 Miles from Yakutsk.

At 9:40 p. m. the Graf reported to the government wireless station at Ochiishi, Hokkaido, that she was in 63.30 latitude north and 107.30 longitude east.

This was about 750 miles from Yakutsk, Siberia, over which Dr. Eckener was expected to pass on his course to Tokio. From Yakutsk to the northern tip of Hondo island, the principal part of Japan, by the western end of the Sea of Okhotsk and the island of Sakhallen, is roughly 1,500 miles. From the tip of Hondo to Tokio is about 370 miles.

In the Air Fifty-six Hours.

At the time she reported her position to the government wireless station, the Graf had traveled for a shade more than 56 hours from Friedrichshafen, over a distance of 2,160 miles. She left Friedrichshafen at 4:34 a. m. Thursday (10:30 p. m. Chicago daylight saving time Wednesday).

Her course toward Tokio beyond Yakutsk, which is the chief city of the Lena gold fields region, lay over the Stanovoi range toward the western end of the Sea of Okhotsk. There is a frequented trade route from Yakutsk over the mountains to Ayan, clearing port on the sea of Okhotsk for the gold fields.

Thence Dr. Eckener could pass over the Tartar straits and the island of Sakhalien to avoid the troubled district of Manchuria, where Russian and Chinese troops are facing one another across the frontier.

The Zeppelin's approach promised thrills hitherto unknown to the eastern world and the Japanese public was wildly excited tonight over her visit.

Officials at Kasumigauru naval air base, where the Graf is expected to land, announced that all was ready to receive her. Complete stores, apparatus and mechanical assistance had been prepared for the next stage of the flight around the world, across the Pacific ocean.

Rehearse for Landing.

Final tests of landing and refueling apparatus were made today and a landing crew of 500 Japanese bluejackets was ordered to rehearse tomorrow morning.

Kasumigauru airport is 41 miles northeast of Tokio, where an arm of the Pacific forms placid lagoons. Officials announced they would admit only the bearers of special passes when the great crowds from Tokio come out to see the landing, until the Zeppelin has been safely moored.

American, German and Japanese engineers in charge of the preparations for grooming the dirigible said the refueling could be completed within thirty hours after her arrival. This would permit the Graf to start out over the Pacific Thursday or Friday.

Fair Weather Forecast.

The central meteorological observatory tonight promised fair weather when the Zeppelin should reach Japan since a typhoon has passed over Japan and vanished southward. Another typhoon is reported moving today over Corea, but it was not believed it would cross the path of the Zeppelin.

Will Arrive Tomorrow.

HAMBURG, Germany, Aug. 16.—(AP)—The Hamburg American line received a wireless message from the Graf Zeppelin this afternoon stating that Dr. Hugo Eckener expected to arrive in Tokio Monday night mid-European time, or presumably some time Monday afternoon Chicago daylight saving time.

Dr. Eckener informed the station he was using only three of his five motors because of the favorable winds blowing over Siberia.

ZEPPELIN SWINGS SOUTH TOWARD TOKIO

The Graf Zeppelin last night was racing across the last stages of its long trip across Siberia to Tokio, the second leg of its flight around the world. Zooming along at an average speed of better than 60 miles an hour, the big German dirigible for the first time got into touch with Japanese radio stations. The big ship reported itself in 63:30 latitude north and 107:30 longitude east, or about 750 miles from Yakutsk, Siberia.

At 6 p. m., Chicago time, the dirigible was reported sighted over Yakutsk. From there Dr. Eckener intended to lay a course southward to the northern tip of Hondo island, the principal part of Japan, by the western end of the Sea of Okhotsk and the island of Sakhalin.

The Zeppelin was expected to arrive over Tokio some time tomorrow.

DISCLOSE $50,000 DEFICIT IN MAINE TOWNSHIP FUNDS

Officials Accused by Farmers' Group.

The misappropriation of $50,000 in Maine township roads funds and the illegal sale of township property at public auction was exposed last night at a meeting of the board of directors of the Cook County Truck Gardeners' and Farmers' association at the Hotel Sherman.

Details of the shortage in road funds will be laid before the entire association at a massmeeting next Thursday night at the Mathews school on Milwaukee avenue near Ballard road. It was announced that a committee which has been investigating the disposition of the funds allocated for roads and bridges of the township for the last three months will make its formal report then and reveal the names of the township officers who are charged with responsibility for the deficit.

Part of Deficit Repaid.

August Geweke, president of the association, announced that the deficit of $50,000 extended over the last year and that, through the efforts of the association's investigating committee, two men had repaid part of the deficit. One of these, he said, had returned all except the interest on his share of the deficit, while the other had refunded $1,300.

The committee's investigation showed that one of the officials had obtained unlawfully $13,250 of the township funds through overcharges for labor and by other means. The fraud covered a period of seven years, Mr. Geweke said.

All but one of the office holders of Maine township involved in the deficit have been removed from office, according to Mr. Geweke, either through defeat at the polls in the last election or through the efforts of the association's committee.

Other Townships Interested.

One of the duties of the farmers' association is to watch over the disposition of funds appropriated for building bridges and highways within the various townships. Twenty other townships in the county are interested in the findings of the committee. Investigation of conditions in other townships may follow the report at Thursday's massmeeting, Mr. Geweke said.

In its investigation of the use of road funds the committee uncovered the alleged illegal land sale, involving seven and one-half acres, according to Mr. Geweke. The committee report is expected to say that the township officials involved in the deal profited directly by selling the land at less than the appraised value.

N. Y. SPEAKEASIES PAY $32,000,000 GRAFT, SAYS DRY

New York, Aug. 17.—[Special.]—William M. Bennett, dry candidate for the Republican nomination for mayor, said tonight that speakeasy owners are paying at least $32,000,000 a year in graft and that New York rapidly is succeeding Chicago as the racketeering center of the world.

"That is why I am a candidate for the Republican nomination," continued Mr. Bennett. "Who is getting this enormous graft? That is the question that strikes at the heart of our city government. The eighteenth amendment is not the issue at all in my campaign. The speakeasy, as the breeding place of the criminal and the racketer, is the real issue in this city. There are 32,000 speakeasies in this city and everybody knows they are paying at least $1,000 a year each. Some pay more.

"I like Mr. La Guardia. I believe him to be honest. But when he says he cannot close the speakeasies I feel the Republican party must have a candidate who will close them up. I can close them and I will."

ANNOUNCE FIRST LOS ANGELES-N. Y. AVIATION SERVICE

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Announcement was made here today of what was termed the first transcontinental air line, furnishing transportation between Los Angeles and New York City. The route is to be known as the Great Southern Airways, Inc.

Charles M. Hatch, Pasadena, president of the company, and John Borden Miller, Los Angeles, vice president, came to Cincinnati by airplane and signed a contract with the Metal Aircraft company to furnish planes for the new line. Mr. Hatch left later for New York, where he said arrangements would be concluded for a landing field.

Officials said the western division of the line would be put in operation on Oct. 1, when the first four Flamingo planes are to be delivered. Only four stops are to be made on this division—Los Angeles, Phoenix, El Paso and Dallas, according to the announcement. The eastern division will extend from Dallas to New York City, with stops at Richmond, Va., Washington and Philadelphia.

Nobody Wants Boy Babies, Grey Nuns of Montreal Find

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 17.—Nobody wants a baby boy. That is the experience of the Grey nuns in charge of the Crèche d'Youville, on the outskirts of Montreal, the largest institution of its kind in Canada and probably the largest on the continent. Abandoned babies left there are brought up until adopted by families. There are always more than 700 babies at the crèche seeking foster parents. There is a preponderance of boys now. The Grey nuns report that foster parents do not want boys but invariably ask for a girl.

LABOR'S STAND ON INJUNCTION IS MODIFIED

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—A new phase in the forty year struggle of the American federation of labor to limit the use of injunctions in labor disputes was entered today in the draft bill to be submitted to the next congress.

According to the members of the executive council, who spent the last week here in preparing the new bill, the American federation of labor has abandoned the Shipstead bill, which attempted to exempt labor disputes from all injunctions. The federation now accepts the theory proposed by the United States senate, that labor should be protected by regulating the injunction and not by abolishing it.

Mrs. Thomas I. Tutt, 7831 Kingston avenue, used the vacuum cleaner for two hours yesterday on six orential rugs, valued at $2,300. Then she went shopping.

When she returned late in the afternoon, her apartment doors were open and the floors were bare. Some one had taken the six rugs she had cleaned. The Grand Crossing police found no one who saw the rugs carried out of the apartment.

'SUN GOD' FLIES EASTWARD WITH GAS TANKS FULL

Endurance Flyers Head for Ohio from Nebraska.

North Platte, Neb., Aug. 17.—(AP)—The endurance plane Spokane Sun God left here at 8:15 p. m. [central standard time] for Cleveland after taking on a final supply of 50 gallons of gasoline. Pilots Nick Mamer and Art Walker planned to make Cleveland without further refueling, flying by way of Omaha and Chicago.

Four refueling contacts were made here and the Sun God had a full load of approximately 400 gallons of gasoline as it resumed its eastward journey.

The pilots expected to arrive over Cleveland by daybreak.

Supply Ship Going to St. Paul.

Pilots Vernon Bookwalter and Neil O'Connell of the refueling plane will remain in North Platte overnight, taking off tomorrow morning for St. Paul, Minn., where they plan to await the return of the Sun God on its round trip transcontinental flight.

Difficulties encountered in refueling the endurance ship at high altitude over Wyoming were not experienced here. The altitude at North Platte is approximately 2,000 feet lower than at Cheyenne.

In a late note dropped at the field the pilots urgently requested some eye wash.

Delayed in Wyoming.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 17.—(AP)—The coast to coast endurance plane, Spokane Sun God, left Wyoming today after a series of disheartening experiences that resulted in more than fifteen hours' delay and threatened to disrupt the morale of the flyers.

Evidently fearing rough weather between Rock Springs and Cheyenne, Wyo., Nick Mamer and Art Walker, piloting the Sun God, soared over Rock Springs for approximately eleven and a half hours following their arrival there last night.

Busy with refueling attempts, the aviators failed to receive radio messages from Denver assuring them that weather conditions were favorable in Wyoming. Nine refueling contacts were tried at Rock Springs and five were successful, 165 gallons or gasoline being transferred.

Arriving in Cheyenne at 9:11 o'clock this morning, Mamer circled the airport until 11:30 a. m., during two refueling operations. In that time, only 70 gallons of gasoline and eight gallons of oil were gotten aboard. The plane left then for North Platte, Neb.

BRITAIN AGREES TO RECONSIDER NEW DEBT PLAN

Allies Appease Snowden; Breakdown Averted.

Meet Tomorrow

THE HAGUE, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Chancellor of the exchequer, Philip Snowden, late tonight accepted a proposal of France, Italy, Belgium, and Japan that experts of all five of the principal reparations creditors examine the previous proposal by the four powers for increasing the British share. The experts would attempt to agree upon what is the actual money value of the new offer of division. The experts will begin their work on Monday morning.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THE HAGUE, Holland, Aug. 17.—Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, today rejected point blank the compromise reparations offer the four powers, France, Italy, Belgium and Japan, submitted yesterday and reiterated the demands of Great Britain for "justice in the distribution of the German reparations annuities."

The chancellor refuted point by point the terms of the four power memorandum and set forward unequivocally the requirements of Great Britain.

He took a savage thrust at Italy for pleading for extremely low terms when it funded the war debt with Great Britain on the ground that it was entitled to practically no German reparations, whereas during the Paris conference of the Young experts Rome obtained nearly all of the allocations arbitrarily taken away from England.

Powers Put Pressure on Rome.

The success or rupture of the conference now admittedly hangs on the attitude of Italy. Alberto Pirelli left this morning for Milan to meet Premier Mussolini to discuss what attitude the Fascist leader intends to take.

In addition to Mr. Snowden's specific attack on Rome for its allegedly rapacious demands and unconciliatory attitude here, the other three powers, France, Belgium, and Japan, are also reported to have brought strong pressure on the black shirts to concede something in order to make a last final effort to placate Great Britain.

It is said that Belgium has agreed to surrender a considerable portion of its advantages under the Young plan, and that France has offered to subscribe its Spa ratio of 52 per cent in order to satisfy Mr. Snowden. Italy alone remains obdurate, declining to give up anything.

Calls Offer "Not Serious."

Regarding the French note, containing an offer from France, Italy, Belgium and Japan, Mr. Snowden said:

"The British government cannot for a moment accept it. It is not a serious effort to meet our requirements. While France says its offer is equivalent to 80 per cent of what we ask, our experts say it is only 20 to 30 per cent.

"All we want is justice.

"The French memorandum states the sale of sequestered German property produced $119,000,000 which Great Britain kept instead of throwing into a common pool with the allies. In reality the proceeds amount to less than nothing.

"We have a note from former Premier Poincaré to former Chancellor of the Exchequer Winston Churchill, saying that France would not change the Spa percentages. We want to know if France intends to honor M. Poincaré's signature.

"Other powers want Great Britain to buy their assistance in the pacification of Europe. It is not so much the actual money loss that inspires our attitude as the feeling that, after all the sacrifices Great Britain has made, the time has come to call a halt. Fresh concessions to the powers in the matter of money would be used as a wedge to demand fresh sacrifices."

Says He Is No Sphinx.

Mr. Snowden insisted that he is not the sphinxlike figure he is reported to be and never refused to meet and discuss the problem with the heads of other delegations.

"The fact that I agreed to an adjournment of today's meeting of the financial commission indicates my desire for a satisfactory settlement," he said. "It would be almost criminal on my part if I refused to negotiate as long as there was any prospect of obtaining results.

"No concessions or sacrifices whatever were made by the four powers in their memorandum. What they offer in most cases was taken from smaller nations. We are not prepared to buy concessions to Great Britain by sacrificing the rights of smaller creditors."

Summarizes Four Powers Note.

Mr. Snowden gave a résumé of the four power memorandum. First, the memorandum said, the Young plan must be accepted entirely or it cannot be reopened, and it pointed out the alleged British advantages over the Dawes plan compensating for losses suffered under the modifications of percentages.

"It asserts," he continued, "that during the next ten years Great Britain receives more than it would under existing agreements. Regarding deliveries in kind they offer nothing definite, but suggest that some arrangement can be made.

"It states the four powers can not agree to change the distribution of German annuities, but are ready to offer concessions on other points.

"They offer Great Britain the large surplus created by the five months overlapping of the Dawes plan and the Young plan of this year after the war debts are covered for the period. They further offer to attribute to Great Britain part of the annual sum available by diminution of the Dawes plan loan charges."

Give Britain's Reply.

Great Britain's reply contains a covering letter Mr. Snowden said which points out that the four other creditors only repeat vaguely suggestions already discussed and rejected by the chancellor and his colleagues as "quite inadequate."

"If the conference is to succeed it is essential that a further and more serious effort be made to meet the British position," he said. "There must be justice to Great Britain either by annual payments or an equivalent to the capital sum of $12,000,000 which it loses under the Young plan distribution, and we must be assured that Great Britain's share approximates, if not fully equivalent, to its due percentages of unconditional annuities."

The British memorandum today states:

First, the Young conference experts were independent. All Great Britain desires is to bring the distribution into conformity with the existing agreements which are binding to the governments who signed them.

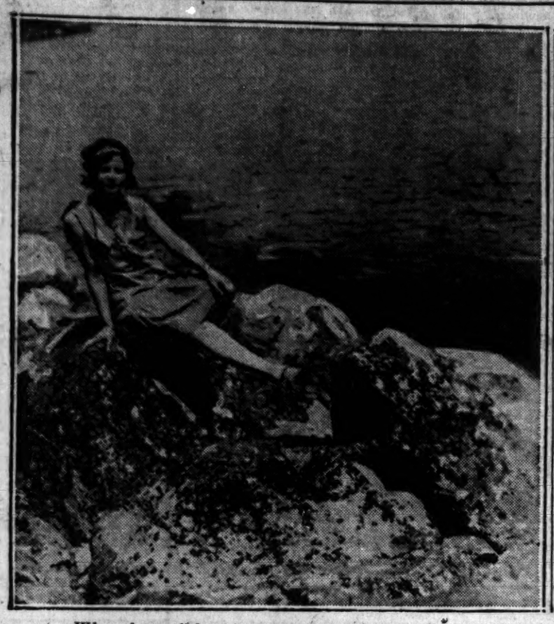
"According to British experts," said Mr. Snowden, "we should receive $11,424,000."

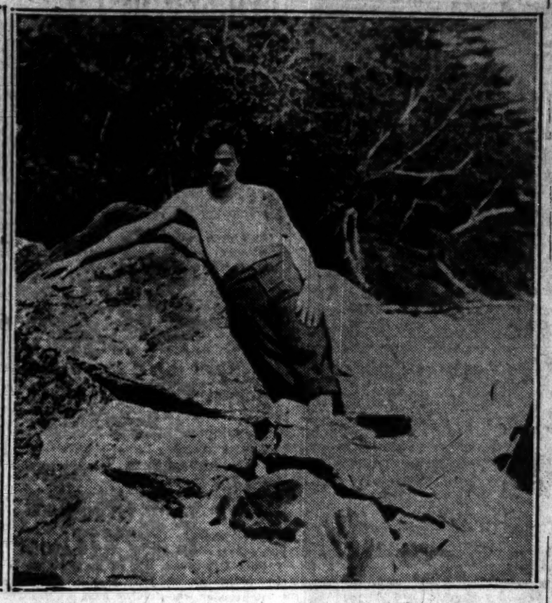
Attacks French Share.

Second, regarding the distribution of unconditional auunities the British government finds it impossible to reconcile the fact that France receives no less than $119,000,000 out of the $138,040,000 available, with specific assurances given Mr. Churchill by M. Poincare in October, 1928, that France would not seek special privileges or priority regarding mobilization of reparations, and with a note from the French government confirming this saying that France seeks no fresh advantages.

Premier Henri Jaspar of Belgium, as spokesman for France, Italy, and Japan, also tonight delivered a verbal reply to Mr. Snowden regarding the British memorandum answering their proposals.

SNAPSHOTS TAKEN BEFORE DOUBLE HONEYMOON TRAGEDY





When the small boat in which Mr. and Mrs. James Parrillo of Chicago were honeymooning at Devil's Lake, Wis., drifted ashore these pictures were found in their camera, still resting in the bottom of the craft. Mrs. Parrillo is shown sitting on rocks at edge of the lake. It was near this point that her body was recovered. The husband was snapped by the bride in the next film. His body was recovered from the lake yesterday. Authorities believe he died in a vain effort to save his wife. (Story on page 1.)

FIND RICH GIRL BOUND TO CHAIR, DEAD FROM GAS

Note Says 'If I Can't Love You No One Else Can.'

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—The death puzzle left by Mary Frances Morgan, 19, daughter of a wealthy widow, when she was found asphyxiated, strapped to a chair before the flowing gas jets of the kitchen range in her suburban home, near here, may never be solved.

Detectives admitted this tonight when, after sifting all the evidence in the strange case, they were unable to pronounce the mystery either murder or suicide.

Did Selfish Love Kill.

There is evidence that the selfish love that killed when it could not win drove a spurned suitor to murder. But there is a possibility that the girl may have committed suicide. Here are the facts:

Mary Frances, who studied at French and Italian convents abroad until about six years ago, lived alone with her widowed mother, Mrs. Clarence L. Morgan in their arbor-screened home in Narberth, a smart suburb.

Because she scorned conventional modes of education, Miss Morgan refused to enter Bryn Mawr, the fashionable girls' school to which her wealth and position pointed her. She preferred to read and study at home. She loved the more artistic phases of housework, too—cooking and sewing. That was why her mother asked her to remain at home yesterday afternoon and cook the evening meal. Mary Frances consented when her mother left on a shopping tour with an aunt.

Find All Doors Locked.

When the mother and aunt returned they found all the doors locked. When they entered the house it was filled with gas. They opened windows and doors and rushed to the kitchen. There they found the girl strapped to a chair in front of the range with one hand bound to the back of the chair. The oven door was open and gas was flowing from all jets.

There was a note on the floor. It was printed and read:

"If I can't have you, nobody else will. T. B."

FASCIST EMBLEM BIRTHMARK ON NEW BORN BABE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Aug. 17.—A curious case of pre-natal influence is reported today from Ancona, where a woman, Amalia Maiolini, gave birth to a daughter whose side bears a birthmark in the perfect shape of the Fascist fraternal emblem of an ax with rods.

Previous to the child's birth the mother told how she had frequently watched a large electric sign in the form of the Fascist emblem, which adorns the main piazza of Ancona.

BELGIAN RED LEADER CRIES "UNCLEAN" AT SNOWDEN DEBT STAND

BRUSSELS, Aug. 17.—Rumors that the "porcupine maneuvers" of Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, at The Hague are the death knell of the socialist internationale and that the British Labor party will be excluded from the red world ring spread like wildfire here tonight. Emile Vandervelde, Belgian Labor leader and president of the socialist internationale, denounced Mr. Snowden and the British labor party for breach of promises made before the red executive a year ago.

M. Vandervelde in a severe statement published tonight said: "Mr. Snowden's claims are contrary to both the resolutions of the internationale made last August in Zurich. We have voted repeatedly in favor of annulment of interallied debts and restriction of German payments to straight reparations for damages done."

He stressed the fact that the French labor leader, Leon Blum, yesterday publicly disavowed Mr. Snowden. A statute in the Red internationale's constitution provides for the exclusion of any national party detected in flagrant violation of the socialist program. The British case is said to be just such a one.

DRYS RE-VISIT EAST CHICAGO; RAID 3 PLACES

Prohibition raiders visited East Chicago, Ind., again last night after making more than 100 arrests there last Wednesday, when they took Mayor Raleigh P. Hale and Police Chief James W. Regan into custody. Last night three alleged speakeasies were raided and a number of prisoners taken to Hammond.

Seven federal agents from South Bend and a number of deputy marshals, under the leadership of Deputy United States Marshal H. E. Miner, took part in last night's raids, which were directed chiefly against those whose places had reopened since the previous raid. Among those arrested was Demeter Szilagyi, wealthy Twin City laundry operator and property owner, charged with having permitted liquor to be sold in one of his buildings. Szilagyi furnished bonds for four of those arrested last Wednesday, listing his property as worth $250,000.

Byron Goodall, inspector of the federal immigration bureau, announced that ten of the prisoners taken last Wednesday were aliens who had entered this country illegally. He said his investigation corroborated reports of an "underground railway" from Canada to Lake county, Ind., for smuggling aliens into this country. In one instance, he said, an alien who lives in Gary, Ind., and who is suspected of being a liquor racketeer, obtained the entry of his brother by the payment of $5,000 to a man prominent in business and in politics.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS PARLEY CLOSES; PRISONS FLAYED

University, Va., Aug. 17.—(AP)—The third session of the Institute of Public Affairs came to a close today at the University of Virginia.

Officials announced that 1,334 members attended, from 34 states, the District of Columbia, Porto Rico, Philippine Islands, and eight foreign countries.

Frank Tannenbaum, nationally known penologist of the Brockings institution, speaking today at a law enforcement round table, declared American prisons fail completely in their duty to return prisoners to society as better men.

He advocated turning the prisoner over to representatives of the departments of education and health.

BOWLER FLYERS HOME WITH NEW ARCTIC AIR-LORE

Bring Data Valuable to Aviation's Future.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

On July 3 the 'Untin' Bowler took off from Chicago on an attempted round trip flight to Berlin. Ten days later the ship was blown from its moorings and sank in Hudson strait off Cape Chidley, Labrador. Although the flight ended short of its goal it resulted in the discovery of valuable information regarding flying conditions in that wild unknown territory that stretches east and north from James Bay to the Atlantic.

First and of greatest value to the future of aviation, the expedition showed that the Hudson Bay region, for all its ruggedness and trackless wasteland, offers few natural hazards to flying. Secondly, it showed that the northern tip of Labrador, the nestling place for thick arctic fogs, gales and storms, is a place to be shunned by airplanes.

Ice and Tide Defeat Flight.

It may be said generally that the defeat of the Bowler's flight was due to conditions on the ground and not in the air. Had there been an adequate air base at Port Burwell, Cape Chidley, where the ship could have been put out of the water and free from the tide and ice, the Bowler might have waited there, safe from damage, for clear weather for the flight to Greenland.

Flying the Sikorsky air yacht over the 1,500 miles from Chicago to Ungava Bay was a comparatively simple task, the pilots, Bob Gast and Parker Cramer, agree. There are plenty of land marks to follow and there are no high mountains to hurdle. The route flown by the Bowler missed the Labrador mountains on the Atlantic coast. The highest hills on the route were not more than 1,000 feet in altitude.

No Place for Land Planes.

To have flown a land plane over the northern route would have been courting suicide. From the moment the Bowler left Chicago until it reached Chidley it found no level, clear land where a plane could have alighted. Over the whole route the ground was covered with thick timber growth, sprinkled with lakes and rivers. Farther north beyond the timber line there were only rocky hills. Because the Bowler was a flying boat it was seldom out of reach of safe landing spots.

From Chicago the Bowler followed Lake Michigan to the Canadian Soo and from there across country to Remi lake over a chain of lakes. From Remi like up the Hanna Bay the lakes were less in number but frequent enough for safety in a multi-motored plane. From that point up to Great Whale, the shore line of James Bay and Hudson Bay formed a good land mark to follow. It came in handy when the Bowler approached Great Whale, ran into fog, turned around and flew low, keeping the shore in sight as it sped back to Rupert House.

Find Large Uncharted Lakes.

On the flight inland from Hudson bay the Bowler found innumerable large lakes, many of which are not noted on the maps of the region. Only a small portion of the country has been crossed by white men and much of the charting has been largely guess work. Much of the white man's knowledge of the interior has been gained from the Indians who follow the rivers inland to trap the fur bearing animals.

From Great Whale to Ungava bay the Bowler followed the Great Whale river, cut across uncharted territory to the larger Clearwater and Upper Seal lakes and flew a general compass course along the Stillwater, Larch, and Koksoak rivers.

Fort Chimo, a Hudson Bay post which the ship passed over some 40 miles inland from Ungava bay, offers good facilities for an air base. The Koksoak river is bordered by a wide beach where seaplanes would be able to rest out of the water free from the tide. Ice breaks and clears from the river before other waters in the region are clear.

Future Possibilities Seen.

The Chicago to Fort Chimo section of a possible future commercial air route to Europe could be established with little difficulty. The conditions over that section, which is approximately one-third of the distance from here to Berlin, have been observed by the Bowler crew and found to be favorable to flying.

Such a route would, of course, be operated in the same manner as the present mail routes are operated today with planes flying certain sections between bases located at 300 and 400 mile intervals. With the bases equipped with radio to collect and circulate weather reports the dangers of flying in the unsettled territory would be diminished. In case of forced landings the planes would be able to radio for relief. During the frozen months the planes could be equipped with skis for landing.

The greatest obstacle met by the 'Untin' Bowler—an obstacle which must be overcome before the northern route can be attempted as a commercial line—is the severity of weather conditions around the point of land between Ungava bay and the Atlantic. Here the ice laden waters of Hudson strait, Davis strait and the Atlantic meet and cause fog and strong winds.

The proper route may be northward along the eastern shore of Hudson bay to Nottingham Island, located in the outlet of Hudson straits into the bay. While Nottingham island has the advantage of a protected cove and a wide beach and a radio station, it is several hundred miles out of the great circle route.

Another Possible Base.

Cape Hope's Advance, directly across Ungava bay from Cape Chidley, may be a possible base, but from what could be learned during the trip of the Bowler crew the weather is seldom better there than at Cape Chidley. Aside from the operators of a government radio station the cape is uninhabited.

With a base at Fort Chimo it would be possible to land at this point, communicate with stations at Port Burwell and along the Greenland coast for weather reports, and wait for clear weather before attempting a hop over Cape Chidley.

As far as actual flying is concerned the Bowler crew found little danger around the cape because of many inlets opening off from Ungava bay. Meeting fog, the Bowler landed in two of these inlets to wait for the clouds to lift.

Ice Always on the Move.

Ice conditions around the cape are ever changing, the floes drifting into the harbors and fiords with the wind so that they are never entirely clear. A communication from Port Burwell before the departure of the Bowler said that the ice was out of one harbor. When the ship flew over the cape ice entirely surrounded it and the harbor was free of ice only because the tide had momentarily carried it out.

Flyers in the service of the Canadian air force were hindered by the severe elements during a year and a half that the air force maintained a base at Port Burwell to observe ice conditions. In eighteen months the three planes had only 35 hours of flying, because of the infrequency of clear flying days. During the three weeks' stay of the Bowler crew at Burnell fog was observed on every day but one.

TWO DIE, FOUR INJURED IN TWO AUTO ACCIDENTS

Three Nuns Hurt in Crash Near Kenosha.

Two men were killed, a man and a woman were probably fatally injured, and two other persons hurt in two automobile accidents near Chicago yesterday. These deaths with two others resulting from injuries in automobile accidents earlier in the week raised the 1929 Cook county motor toll to 529. Yesterday's dead:

F. H. Schroeder, 32 years old, 2212 Sedgwick street.

Edward Keenan, 22 years old, 15020 South Paulina street, Harvey.

The injured:

Ernest Walker, 36, of 15227 South Paulina street, Harvey. Possible skull fracture.

Carl Deichman, 30, of 2208 Clifton avenue.

Schroeder was driving east on Rand road at a high rate of speed and swerved into the culvert of a roadway leading to a farm near the state road. The car ran off the road, overturned and burst into flames. Schroeder and Deichman were pinned beneath the machine and the two women were flung thirty feet.

Highway police removed the injured to the Palatine hospital. The women said that they had been driving all night, and believed that Schroeder fell asleep at the wheel of the car.

Auto Plunges Over Bank.

Keenan was killed when the automobile he was driving overturned at Ridgeland avenue and 147th street, near Tinley Park. The machine plunged over an embankment into a ditch at the side of the road. Walker was taken to the Ingalls Memorial hospital where his condition was said to be critical. A third man, who is believed to have been in the car, left the scene apparently uninjured.

The other automobile victims who died yesterday were:

Jacob Hommling, 70 years old, 163 Martha avenue, Lombard. Died in the Oak Park hospital of injuries received last Thursday when he was crushed between a truck and a stone post while at work in Oak Park.

Anton Petrousky, 39 years old, 3312 South Lincoln street. Died of injuries received Wednesday when he was struck by an automobile at 58th street and South Western avenue.

Three Nuns Injured.

Three nuns were seriously injured, two perhaps fatally, and four other persons received lesser injuries last night in a head on automobile collision on U. S. highway 41, seven miles west of Kenosha, Wis.

Sister Raymond and Sister Cararia of the Roman Catholic Academy of Our Lady, 95th and Throop streets, may die from severe head wounds. Sister Cararia's optic nerve was cut and she will be blind if she survives. With Sister Lucy, of the same convent, they were taken to St. Catherine's hospital in Kenosha.

They were riding to Milwaukee in a car driven by Lee Saffran, with his wife, Elizabeth, and their 3 year old son, James. Gottlieb M. Myworth of Danville, who was driving to Chicago, lost control of his car when it struck a bump on a railway crossing and the crash followed.

None of the Saffrans received serious injuries. Myworth's nose was broken and he was taken to the Kenosha hospital.

Arnold Fisher, 22 years old, 1540 West 46th street, a fireman, and two other men were injured last night when a Parmelee Transfer company truck collided with fire department engine No. 1 at 13th street and Michigan boulevard as the engine was speeding to a blaze at 1460 South Michigan. The others hurt are William J. Ambroise, 34 years old, 2733 Elston avenue, driver of the Parmelee truck, and Harold Vovee, 28, of 4545 Oakenwald avenue. All were taken to St. Luke's hospital. The fire caused damage estimated at $2,000 to a two story vacant building.

Auto Fatalities Decline.

Traffic fatalities in Chicago during the first seven months of the year show a 20.4 per cent decrease over the same period of 1928, according to statistics released by the Chicago Motor club. The deaths in the city for 1929 totaled 337 as against 469 in the corresponding period of last year.

Charles M. Hayes, president of the club, declared that he believed the reduction to be the result of intensive safety education.

POLICEMAN'S SON, CAUGHT IN CHASE, IS HELD AS THIEF

Joseph Murphy, 18 years old, 1233 South Tudor avenue, son of Policeman Cornelius Murphy of the Town Hall station, was held to the grand jury in $10,000 bonds yesterday when he was arraigned in Oak Park on a charge of automobile theft.

Motorcycle Policeman William Schumacher said he encountered Murphy speeding on Gage road, near Riverside, and chased him for several blocks. Then Murphy, he said, drove into a private driveway, jumped from the car, leaving it to crash into the house, and leaped through a basement window. The youth was caught in the basement after Schumacher fired one shot, wounding him in the leg.

According to the police, Murphy admitted he and a partner, whose name he refused to reveal, had tried to rob a store a few moments before his arrest. The automobile he was driving is owned by Miss Helen Conrad, 1115 Home avenue, Oak Park, who had reported it stolen.

JITNEY MEN ATTACK NEW ORLEANS POLICE RESTRICTION IN COURT

New Orleans, La., Aug. 17.—(AP)—The court fight over operation of jitneys during the strike of union street car men overshadowed all else today in the controversy which has led to violence twice since July 2.

To test the legality of police action against operation of "courtesy" jitneys with a tip, counsel for Charles S. Upton, a driver, obtained an order from Judge Mark M. Boatner in Civil District court citing city officials to appear next Tuesday and show cause why the jitneys should not continue. Acting Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley and Superintendent of Police Theodore Ray were cited.

The "free" jitney men claim they were not charging fares for service and were being prosecuted illegally for pickups under the city ordinance regulating jitneys.

TELLS OF $50,000 OFFERED HIM TO SET CAPONE FREE

Prosecutor Says He Was Approached.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 17.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Inquirer will say tomorrow, in an interview with District Attorney John Monaghan, that the prosecutor reveals for the first time that he was offered $50,000 to get Al Capone, Chicago gangster, out of jail. Capone is serving a year in prison here for carrying a pistol.

Commenting on the Capone case in connection with the activities of his office during the last few months, the Inquirer quoted the district attorney as follows:

"Then there was the Capone case. Here was a millionaire gangster who had beaten the law for years. He was arrested here one night and the next day was on his way to prison.

"Few can realize the conniving that was done in that case. Capone's friends were ready to spend any amount of money to get him out.

"I have not told this before, but one prominent figure from Chicago went to a friend of mine and tried to sound him out as to whether $50,000 would interest me.

"That's going pretty far, when they try to reach into the district attorney's office. The Chicago mobsmen couldn't understand why nobody was interested in taking their money for such a slight favor as getting Capone out of jail."

Held for Passing $16,000 in Worthless Checks

Racine, Wis., Aug. 17.—Raymond Fox, son of Conrad Fox, wealthy ice and coal dealer, is being held by Minneapolis police charged with passing numerous worthless checks, officials here learned today. The money acquired through the checks included presents for a girl, purchases of a $12,000 automobile, $3,000 worth of furniture for an apartment, and clothing and jewelry to the amount of $1,000. Young Fox recently served a term for vagrancy in Milwaukee. His father has refused to come to his aid.

HEATH TO BE CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER, SAYS U. S. ATTORNEY

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—A manslaughter charge will be placed against John Heath in connection with the death of Richard J. Sandlands, federal prohibition agent, and a charge of assault and battery against him will be dropped United States District Attorney John R. Watkins, announced today. Whether Heath will be tried in the Federal or Circuit court has not been decided.

A number of Detroit yachtsmen and boat owners, including several prominent citizens have started a collection to defray expenses of Heath's trial, believing him innocent.

Sandlands was last seen alive aboard Heath's yacht on the Detroit river two weeks ago when he and another prohibition agent boarded it to search for liquor. The second agent went ashore to phone his superior. When he returned, the yacht was gone. Sandlands' body was found floating in the river two days later.

Heath's story is that Sandlands failed to identify himself, a fight started, both men fell overboard, and Sandlands was drowned.

14 Firemen Hurt as Blast Wrecks 2 Story Apartment

New York, Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Fourteen firemen were knocked unconscious, five of them being critically injured, when two explosions wrecked a two-story Brooklyn building during a fire in the basement today. During the excitement a policeman found Isadore Goldberg, caretaker of the building, his wife and their three small children helpless from the fumes in their apartment on the second floor and rescued them.

NEXT TWO WEEKS MAY DECIDE FATE OF TRANSIT DEAL

Hearings on Financing to Start Tuesday.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The next two weeks will probably determine whether there will be a transit settlement with the present surface and elevated lines. It is expected there will be a decision to agree or disagree on the return to be made to investors in the transit lines.

The hearings of the special committee, headed by Prof. Charles M. Thompson of the University of Illinois, are scheduled to begin Tuesday morning, preceded by a general session Monday afternoon. This committee is supposed to give its opinion in the city's and companies' contention on the rate of return. The city asks for an agreed return on the present investment, an allowance of cost only on new money used for extensions and other improvements, plus a reward for economy and efficiency in operation. The companies want a "just and reasonable return" on the entire investment, the rate to be fixed by the local transit commission.

Views Widely Different.

At the base of those two contentions lie two entirely different lines of thought. The city conveys the impression that a transit system, such as proposed, will be highly profitable, while the companies seek to have the public believe there is a narrow margin between gross income and net profits. Which, if either, is correct has not been demonstrated. The city and companies' representatives appear to have accomplished the impossible. For three weeks they have talked about money without discussing figures. They have debated "basic principles" and "fundamentals," as they phrase it.

Every one concerned in the transit matter assumes that the new committee will get down to figures to show how much right and wrong may be in the positions of the city and companies. The city had suggested that all new money be acquired by the sale of bonds and that the return to the company be sufficient to cover the interest charge and discount on the bonds.

Committee to Decide Cost.

What that cost would be is a task for the new committee to determine. If they recommend what is best for the carriers, they will be forced to decide whether that plan presents a higher or lower cost than a combination of stocks and bonds for new money.

Some data on the bond discounts is supplied by Moody's Manual, which is generally recognized as an authority in its field.

While the sale of bonds may have certain distinct advantages, Moody shows that the price at which electric railway bonds are sold is much lower than the price at which electric power, gas or phone bonds are disposed of. Last year electric railway bonds sold 20 points below the price obtained for three utilities. Moody's Manual shows the average bond prices over a period of eleven years as follows:

1928	107.7	104.1	105.4	82.9
1927	106.4	103.2	102.8	82.8
1926	104.3	101.5	101.4	80.1
1925	101.9	99.4	98.9	79.9
1924	98.6	96.2	95.9	71.8
1922	95.9	92.6	94.7	75.6
1921	93.5	79.6	86.9	62.7
1920	79.5	78.3	80.5	59.6

In those eleven years electric railway bonds have sold an average of 20 points below the price obtained fo bonds of the other three utilities. If it may be assumed that all four utilities issue 5 per cent bonds, it is apparent that the cost to the phone, gas and electric power utilities would be about 5 per cent, while to the electric railways the cost would be about 6¼ per cent.

Average Earnings 4.1 Per Cent.

These figures relate to the utilities as a whole throughout the nation, not to Chicago. The electric railways last year earned an average of 4.1 per cent on its investment, while the gas industry averaged 7.1 per cent, the telephones 7 per cent and electric light and power 7.2 per cent.

It was impracticable for the electric railways of the country to borrow money where the discount was the equivalent of 6.25 per cent while the earnings were only 4.1 per cent. The result was that they did not borrow. They have less trackage now than five years ago. The electric railway stock outstanding is seven-tenths of one per cent less in 1927 than in 1922. In the same period the bonds outstanding increased less than 1.5 per cent.

Interest Rate Is Factor.

There may be advantages in financing electric railway extensions by bonds which offset the average bond discounts, and therefore the city's plan may be more desirable than the company's plan. However, discount on bonds is only one part of the cost of money by the issuance of bonds. The interest rate is another feature. If that is higher than is required for electric power, gas and phone bonds, then the difference in cost will be more than has been indicated by the average discounts compiled by Moody's Manual.

The new committee is expected to use the figures of other authorities and arrive at a satisfactory conclusion.

Eastern Evidence Hunted in Diploma Mill Inquiry

Assistant State's Attorney Charles A. Bellows, who has been conducting the investigation into the diploma and license mill, left yesterday for a trip to New York and the east to question witnesses in preparation for the case now pending against W. H. H. Miller, former head of the state department of registration and education, and others named in the conspiracy charges. Many eastern medical school students, who were unable to make the grades in their own states, are reported to have secured licenses through the Illinois manipulators of licenses and diplomas.

Official War Against Weeds Urged.

With golden rod blooming at the roadsides and ragweed flourishing in vacant lots, some 70,000 Chicagoans once more are sniffing an irritating breeze laden with pollen. Their eyes water; they sneeze and develop a hard, dry cough. Unless they can afford a vacation in the mountains or at the sea shore, their annual 60 day siege of hay fever has begun.

Back on April 27 when the frost was barely gone, a group of forward looking pathologists, botanists, and civic leaders, who knew the distress of hay fever, met at the Chicago Woman's club to form a council of defense. Statistics were quoted and a campaign launched to banish noxious weeds from the metropolitan area before the World's Fair of 1933.

Scouts and Pupils Enlisted.

Mrs. W. D. Richardson, elected chairman of a strategy committee, enlisted Boy Scouts and public school pupils in the cause, there having been estimates that 1,200 tons of pollen would be wafted over town by the mid-August winds unless steps were taken. By the last of June Mrs. Richardson was able to report that sneeze conscious pupils of the Shakespeare school had uprooted 26 bushels of weeds in the vicinity of the school at 41st street and Lake Park avenue, but vacation came on and Mrs. Richardson has released no war bulletins since then.

The correspondence of Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, indicates that much remains to be done. Mrs. William N. Upham, 534 North Ashland avenue, La Grange, in a letter to Dr. Evans, proposes the addition of a "weed commissioner" to the mayor's cabinet or to the sanitary district staff, with authority in the whole Chicago metropolitan area.

Asks a Sufferer to Lead War.

"If I were not tied down by young children, I'd join actively in the campaign myself," said Mrs. Upham, adding that her husband is a chronic sufferer.

"If a commissioner could be appointed to lead those women who want to clear Chicago of its weeds, he would reach the height of fame," Mrs. Upham declared. "But the only sure way to get complete cooperation would be to appoint a commissioner who himself suffers hay fever."

Something in the line of Mrs. Upham's suggestion was started on May 3, a week after the meeting at the Woman's club, when Ald. Terence F. Moran [16th] summoned a meeting of the city council's health committee. Public hearings were to be called and a billboard and radio campaign was proposed to spur the public to weed extermination—but nothing developed. Ald. Moran, it was learned, is not afflicted with hay fever.

Flee Weed or Destroy It.

Generally speaking there is no cure for hay fever, said Dr. Evans. Vaccination has proved successful, but only in instances where the patient was inoculated at least two weeks before the sneezing started. The only remedy is to flee the weed or destroy it, according to Dr. Evans.

Hay fever is hereditary in about one-third of all cases, according to medical authorities. Sufferers may find a mite of satisfaction in the claim that the fever is an aristocratic disease, afflicting educated and nervously sensitive persons more often than those of dull sensibilities.

MALONE STARTS PERSONALTY TAX "FIXING" INQUIRY

Experts to Study System; Only 15% Paid, Claim.

A nonpolitical committee of tax experts will be appointed tomorrow by William H. Malone, chairman of the state tax commission, to make a study of the personal property taxing system in Cook county. This was announced yesterday after the present situation had been assailed as a 'criminal farce" at a conference of leaders in the movement which resulted in the real estate reassessment.

Mr. Malone declared that less than 15 per cent of the present personal property tax bills are paid, even though the appraisals are low. He blamed this on wholesale fixing, weakness of related laws, and public feeling against the tax.

Calls System a Joke.

"The situation now is a huge joke," he said. "It would be uproariously funny if it did not have its serious side. Precinct captains and politicians higher up fix schedules that get on the books so that only one out of ten is paid, and the majority of these by large corporations. Almost any one can fix a schedule.

"The question is not one for the state commission as the laws now stand. It is up to the assessors. The appointment of a committee of experts to throw light on the question will force public opinion for or against a reassessment of personal property.

Cuts into Savings.

"Despite the bellowings of demagogues posing as benefactors of the public I will proceed cautiously on the question. The average man hates the personal property tax, although he wishes to contribute a fair share to government in taxes. If this man is made to pay personal property tax on his savings, as the courts have held that these are personal property, he will lose a portion of what little interest he gets.

"Applying the reassessment yardstick to personal property would bring a lot of money into the coffers of spending bodies. They are dissatisfied because the reassessment will bring them only what they got before, although it has reduced taxes for the individual through equalization. The spenders anticipated an orgy of spending on increased valuation. When the 37 per cent factor was adopted they put up a howl because they were kept within reasonable bounds. They may cry as much as they please, but the public knows that without such disgraceful extravagance as evinced in the sanitary district things will run smoothly enough."

Names Two Professors.

Mr. Malone said that he will appoint Prof. Simeon Leland of the University of Chicago and Prof. Herbert Simpson of Northwestern as two of eight members of the committee. He declared that he will be guided by their findings, pointing out that the appointment of the group was not an indication that he will order a reassessment of personal property.

The conference was called to consider a resolution by President Cermak of the county board asking a reassessment of railroads' personal property and the capital stock of corporations. President Cermak was unable to attend and asked that a second conference be called for Tuesday.

REPAIRS AND WIND DELAY TEST FLIGHT OF NAVY'S RACING PLANE

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Crossed ignition wires, causing a short circuit in the engine of his racing plane, the Mercury, today prevented Lieut. Al Williams from making his first flight test. While repairs were being rushed it was found that the flash from the short circuit had burned some wires and would cause a delay of a few hours. By the time the ship was ready again a fresh wind had blown up and made the waters of the bay too choppy to taxi.

Williams announced he would try again tomorrow. Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, visited the dock today to inspect progress and help arrange sailing details of the ship should it be sent to England for the Schneider races, Sept. 6 and 7.

U. S. NAVY AIR ARMADA STARTS EASTWARD TODAY

San Diego, Cal., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Intensive training of several months completed, more than a score of the finest planes in the United States navy will soar eastward tomorrow and Monday to the national air races at Cleveland.

The "navyation" maneuvers here closed today with a spectacular review above San Diego bay of 140 navy planes-bombers, pursuit planes, combat planes and observation planes. Included in the review were the "nine high hats," stunt aviators who have perfected a loop the loop in formation. The trick is done in groups of threes, each group being connected by 40 foot ropes.

The planes leaving for the east will be commanded by Lieutenant Commander H. G. Wick. Three Sikorsky amphibions will take off tomorrow, carrying mechanics for the 18 single seated combat planes, declared by navy men the greatest fighting unit ever sent across the country. The single seaters will start for Cleveland before sunrise Monday.

MOSHIEK AND BOGOLOWSKI FREE.

Morris Bogolowski and Aaron Moshiek, convicted forgers, and two companions, Dave Ostran and Michael Epstein, picked up for questioning Friday in the loop, were discharged yesterday by Judge Fetzer in the South State street court.

19 COAST GUARD LAKE CUTTERS TO KEEP BIG GUNS

But Can't Be Fired Near Shore, Lowman Says.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—With the exception of nineteen 75 foot coast guard cutters, all vessels of the rum armada operating on the great lakes will be armed only with navy rifles and army revolvers, treasury officials announced today.

The large cutters which operate a considerable distance from the shore line will carry machine guns, rifles, revolvers, and one pounders, described by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour Lowman to be used as signal guns for warning rum runners or rum running craft.

Lowman Changes Statement.

Mr. Lowman announced he has tabooed the use of machine guns on the smaller coast guard and customs craft which operate along the Detroit river and close to the shore line in order to minimize the danger of injuring citizens on land.

He stated also that all rum chasing craft have been cautioned against firing rifles or machine guns when such firing would endanger the lives of persons on shore.

Although Mr. Lowman last night said that all heavy ordnance would be removed from the lake rum chasers, cutting their offensive armament down to revolvers, rifles, and machine guns in the case of the larger boats, and revolvers and rifles for the smaller craft, the treasury official today stated the nineteen 75 foot craft will be permitted to carry their one pounder "signal guns."

Officers Misconstrue Order.

Capt. B. M. Chiswell, assistant commandant of the coast guard, said that only ordnance heavier than the one-pounder had been or would be removed from coast guard craft used on the lakes. He said that 3-inch and 5-inch guns mounted on the Seminole, a cruising launch sent to the lakes, had been removed and stored in order to comply with the old Rush-Bagot agreement with Canada.

"Our orders directing the stripping of heavy ordnance from boats on lake duty was misconstrued by some of the officers in the field," Captain Chiswell said. "In some cases steps were taken to remove machine guns and all ordnance from coast guard boats. Those orders have been rescinded. The big boats will keep their one-pounders and machine guns. The smaller craft will carry rifles and revolvers."

METHODIST PAPER ASSAILS POMP OF POPE PIUS' EXIT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Aug. 17.—The Methodist Episcopal church organization in Italy has gotten into sectarian hot water with Catholicism again over a description of Pope Pius' exit from the Vatican into St. Peter's square on July 25, which appeared in the Methodist publication Evangelista, issued weekly in Rome.

The Evangelista, using the privilege of free religious discussion guaranteed under the Lateran concordat, wrote that the pope's regal procession in pomp and glitter was inconsistent with the doctrines of the founder of the church and deplored the ceremony of the pope carrying the eucharist in the ostensorium and maintaining it to be the real presence of Christ.

The article drew fire and invective from G. Menara, writing in the Catholic press today.

BOOZE DROUGHT ON IN CHICAGO, DRY CHIEF SAYS

Less liquor is being sold in Chicago now than at any time since prohibition went into effect. This was the opinion yesterday of James M. Doran, United States commissioner of prohibition, who dropped in for a brief visit with E. C. Yellowley, in charge of enforcement forces in this district.

Commissioner Doran said he was on his way to California for a series of conferences with grape growers and wine producers. He said his department will launch a drastic campaign against bootleg wine and he wants to solicit the coöperation of the growers and the legitimate wine interests.

Speaking of what he regarded as an almost arid condition in Chicago, Commissioner Doran praised the administration of Mr. Yellowley.

"So effective has our work been recently that the big bootlegger is almost extinct in the middle west," he said. "And the situation in other sections of the country has greatly improved."

Liquor importations from Canada also have been cut down materially the last year, Mr. Doran asserted. He said that, according to estimates, 160,000 cases were smuggled across the Detroit river during June, 1928, while only 40,000 cases found their way across during June, 1929.

"The department is just beginning a drive against the illicit wine dealers," he said. "It's our purpose to break up the bootleggers while offering every protection to the legitimate dealer who sells medicinal wine to the government. During the month I will talk to many dealers in the Fresno, Cal., territory, to get their ideas about what can be done to prevent illicit wine from reaching the market."

Commissioner Doran said the internal revenue laws regulating the sale of wine were written in 1916 and need revision to conform to prohibition conditions. He will seek to have these statutes recodified.

AL JOLSON AND THE "NEW" BRUNSWICK RADIO . . .

YOU'LL hear Al Jolson doing his newest numbers. You'll laugh at him, you'll cry with him. For he gives everything he's got to introduce the NEW Brunswick Radio.

And it's worthy of his greatest effort—a beautiful instrument—a remarkable value—but more, the NEW Brunswick is the first and only radio that completely fills the function of a radio—and that is to receive programs with "Studio Quality" Radio Reception.

This simply means that through the NEW Brunswick you hear programs just as if you were listening to them in the Broadcasting Station and not through a radio. There is no loss of quality.

The Proof

Great critics attested to this fact at 12:11 midnight, May 4th last, in New York City, when, using the facilities of Station WABC, Brunswick made the most sensational and dramatic test for Tone and Reception ever conceived.

Every Brunswick dealer will and can re-create this test for you in his own store. You can hear the exact broadcast Brunswick sent over the air on May 4th last, just as though you had been in the studio when it was made. At the same time you can listen to the same broadcast as it was received through a stock model of the NEW Brunswick and so, prove to yourself, conclusively, by this comparison, that Brunswick can claim with full justification, "Studio Quality" Radio Reception.

And you can hear Jolson at home whenever you wish—start with his newest and greatest

SUSPECTED CHIEF OF KIDNAPERS TO FACE RANIERI BOY

Seek to Link Festante with Witness' Murder.

Witnesses of several crimes were summoned to the detective bureau last night to see if they could identify Vittorio Festante, arrested as the leader of an Italian extortion ring. Police are investigating the possibility that Festante may have had some connection with the murder of Ole Scully, an important state's witness in the Billy Ranieri kidnaping case; with the kidnaping of the Ranieri boy for ransom, and with several other killings.

Deputy Police Commissioner Stege had Festante under observation for a week, after police had received a letter accusing Festante of three murders. Stege was seeking evidence against the suspect when R. Don Bleau, investigator for State's Attorney T. R. Johnson of Kankakee, came here with a warrant charging Festante with the attempted extortion of $2,000 from Vito Marchese, president of the Kankakee branch of the Italian-American society.

Find Dynamite in Home.

Lieut. George Barker of the bomb squad arrested Festante for Bleau and in the prisoner's home at 2022 Ogden avenue, found four sticks of dynamite, several percussion caps, and extortion notes similar in content to those mailed to Marchese in Kankakee. He found also a list of names of wealthy Chicago Italians.

The detectives were led to believe that Festante was an assistant to Angelo Petitti, instigator of the Ranieri kidnaping, and the go-between who induced Andrew Cappellano of Kankakee to hold Billy Ranieri prisoner while Petitti negotiated for ransom.

Billy to View Prisoner.

The boy, who was rescued from the kidnapers and who testified at the trial in which Petitti and Cappellano were sentenced to 25 years' imprisonment, is to look at Festante to determine if he was one of the actual kidnapers.

Scully was killed the day before he was to have testified against Petitti. The police expect that by today all the witnesses will have seen Festante and his connection with various crimes will have been established. His activities as a bomber are also under investigation.

LUGGAGE SEIZED

MARGARET SHOTWELL.

New York, Aug. 17.—[Special.]—The luggage of Margaret Shotwell, piano prodigy of Omaha, Neb., which she had not declared, was seized by customs officers upon her arrival on the Aquitania. The question of duty will be thrashed out Tuesday morning when she will appear before George W. Brewer, assistant solicitor of the port.

Miss Shotwell had sixteen pieces of baggage, much of it containing costumes in which she played at the Salzburg musical festival and before the queen of Spain at a tea in Paris. She originated the custom of changing costumes in accordance with the number to be played.

BRITISH TREATY WITH EGYPT CUTS FORCES TO 4,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 17.—While no definite decision has as yet been made regarding the strength of the forces to be maintained in Egypt under the new Anglo-Egyptian treaty, it is reported that there will be a reduction of three-fifths of the present garrison, leaving about 4,000 men to defend the Suez canal. The Cairo infantry brigade will probably be ordered home, while the cavalry brigade will be reduced to a single regiment. That will leave one cavalry regiment and one brigade of infantry with auxiliary units for the canal zone.

At present the Cairo infantry brigade consists of the first battalion of Welsh Guards, the first battalion of South Wales Borderers and the first battalion of the Gloucestershire regiment. The cavalry brigade consists of the Royal Dragoons, the 10th Hussars and the 12th Lancers.

The South Wales Borderers and the Gloucestershire regiment were slated to go to China after completing their allotted service in Egypt, while the Royal Dragoons were destined for India. Under the new arrangement either of these regiments or those which they displace will probably return to England.

FLOOD DESTROYS 60 VILLAGES.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—[U.P.]—Sixty villages are under water in southern Khairpur and upper Sind as a result of the most devastating flood recorded in western India in years, according to Daily Mail dispatches from Karachi. It was believed many natives perished. Hundreds of miles of the countryside were submerged.

ASK BIDS TO OPEN WASHINGTON BLD. IN RIVER FOREST

Pavement Break Closes Link of Half Mile.

Cook county pays for ONE-HALF and gets ONE-TWENTY-FIFTH of the state's highways.

BY HAL FOUST.

River Forest this week expects to advertise for bids for paving the half mile of Washington boulevard in the village which has been closed since early spring due to a complete breakdown of the pavement.

This will be one step in the opening of Washington boulevard through to Elmhurst. Gov. Emmerson's committee has recommended that the street be extended to Butterfield road out of the state's share of the gasoline tax.

County Gets Right of Way.

The county last week completed its condemnation proceedings for the right of way from the present terminus of the boulevard, at 25th avenue, to the Mannheim road, a distance of one mile. This stretch, on the north side of the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin and the Chicago Great Western railroad, will be paved forty feet wide by the state this fall, if the recommendations of the advisory commission are followed.

Condemnation proceedings are pending for the right of way for Washington boulevard from Mannheim road to Butterfield road, about half a mile. The court will probably dispose of this case during the winter, making it possible for the entire project to be completed early next spring.

Plan Grade Separation.

A grade separation at Hillside, just south of the junction between Butterfield road and the projected Washington boulevard extension, is on the program for use of the state's revenue from the fuel levy. This will permit traffic off Washington to pass under the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin, and the Chicago Great Western on its route to the west.

The Butterfield road and Washington boulevard route is being pushed so it will be completed in time to serve as a detour for traffic to Chicago from Glen Ellyn, Wheaton, and Geneva while the east end of Roosevelt road is undergoing extensive improvements.

Madison Street Hits Snags.

The extension of Madison street to Butterfield road is also under way, but it is meeting difficulties. The villages of Hillside and Bellwood are handling the job with county aid, independent of the state. Some paving has been laid this year, but the project has been delayed by the problem of crossing the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin, the Chicago Great Western and the Indiana Harbor Belt tracks.

Washington boulevard, in River Forest, has been closed periodically for a year. The barricades have remained in place since about last May. The delay in replacing the pavement was due to financial difficulties.

Not on County Program.

The boulevard, through the village, is not a state aid or state bond issue road. And it was not on the county bond issue program of two years ago because its pavement at that time was in good condition.

The break in the pavement was not anticipated by the county engineers. After it happened, the village did not feel that it should bear the full expense of new pavement because a large part of the traffic it serves is through traffic.

The Chicago Regional Plan association proposed that the county use some of its bond money for the work, notwithstanding the fact that it was not on the program as approved by referendum.

"It is an irregular procedure," said Robert Kingery, manager of the plan commission, "but we recommend it as necessary to meet an emergency. The county would borrow from its road bond fund and later replace the money with gas tax revenue.

"Such a plan seems to have met general approval, and the village of River Forest will advertise for bids this week on a contract which provides that the county will share the cost with the municipality. The paving will, in all probability, be completed in October."

Seattle, Aug. 17.—(AP)—After anxious days and nights when the forest fire situation in the Pacific northwest and western Canada seemed to be growing steadily more critical, and federal troops were ordered to assist if necessary, late reports from the flaming fronts gave encouragement to forest service officials today as 2,000 battled the fire.

Search for Douglas C. Ingraham, Portland, federal grazing inspector, and Ermannie St. Luise, Chelan youth, believed trapped by fire at McFarland creek in the Chelan national forest in Washington, continued today but virtually no hope for their safety remained. Searchers reported escape of the two men had been cut off and that they would have been found by this time if alive.

District Forester C. M. Granger of Portland, who flew over the fire area yesterday reported a slight improvement in the entire central Washington area. Only heavy rains will quench the flames but they were expected to be confined to their present limits.

HUNT 3 VICTIMS OF SIGHTSEEING, SPEEDBOAT CRASH

Alexandria Bay, N. Y., Aug. 17.—[U. P.]—Search today failed to reveal any trace of Charles Lipe of Syracuse, N. Y., who, with his wife and Ford Dodge, were drowned last night when their speedboat collided with a sightseeing steamer in the St. Lawrence river and sank to the bottom.

Sixty-five passengers on the pleasure boat Thousand Islander either were rescued or swam to safety.

Lipe, a wealthy manufacturer, apparently was driving his speedboat Giggle at a terrific speed. The collision occurred near Cherry island, with the two craft going in opposite directions.

SAMUEL KATZ AND MAURICE'S WIDOW MARRY

Theater Man Weds Dancer in Connecticut.

Stamford, Conn., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Mrs. Eleanora Ambrose Maurice, widow of Maurice, the dancer, was married here this morning at the Hotel Davenport to Samuel Katz, president of the Publix Theaters corporation of New York. The ceremony was performed by Justice of the Peace Peter T. Dondlinger.

Hailing respectively from Kansas and Chicago, bath are celebrities on Broadway.

Reporters Find Both "Out."

Some time before noon reporters called at the Ambassador and found that Mrs. Maurice, wearing a huge orchid corsage, had departed in a limousine. She left no hint of her destination. They also found that Mr. Katz had disappeared. The logical conclusion was that the two had vanished together. As a matter of fact they had come here for the marriage ceremony.

The Paramount theater in New York is the largest of 1,100 theaters that Mr. Katz directs as president of the Publix theaters. A recent gift to the bride-to-be was a ring set with a diamond "almost as large," according to the exaggerated report, "as the globe atop the Paramount building."

Met at Theater.

Maurice Mouvet was the real name of the dancer to whom Mrs. Maurice was married, in Paris, in 1926, but he dropped the family name in professional life. He died in Lausanne, Switzerland, on May 18, 1927.

Mrs. Maurice and Mr. Katz met at a performance in the Paramount theater, when the woman he is to marry today was on the bill as a star in a dancing specialty. Mr. Katz' former wife died in 1923 in Chicago.

Mrs. Maurice is 27 years old and Mr. Katz is 37.

MRS. ANNABELLE CLARKE.

Mrs. Annabelle Clarke, 2451 Trumbull avenue, yesterday filed a bill for divorce in the Superior court against her husband, Edmund P. Clarke, a salesman. The bill, drawn by Attorney Victor Frohlich charges cruelty. The Clarkes were married on Nov. 25, 1928, and separated on Aug. 1, 1929. Mrs. Clarke alleges that on various occasions her husband threw an alarm clock, a mirror, a cat, and a floor lamp at her.

VENEZUELA CITY REPORTED SEIZED BY INSURGENTS

1,500 Troops Close In on Port of Cumana.

BY GERALD MARTIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CUMANA, Venezuela, Aug. 17.—This town and port are still in the hands of rebels, who are holding out against vigorous land, sea, and air attacks by government troops.

A Venezuelan gunboat loaded with troops was unable to approach the pier or shores owing to the heavy machine gun fire of the revolting batteries placed along the shore and under the cover of rocks, while others are planted in the neighboring hills. It is planned to proclaim Cumana the official rebel capital.

[The foregoing was the first intimation that Cumana had been captured by rebels. A large force recently attacked the city, but was reported to have been driven off by airplanes, which dropped bombs on the insurgents and raked them with machine gun fire.]

Report Transport Sunk.

The former German steamer Falke, which arrived from Dantzig and was joined by two barques from Tampico with numerous Mexicans aboard, is roaming the coast on the lookout for government ships. It is reported a government transport was sunk.

Margarita island and Carupano are in the hands of the revolutionists. They have ammunition and food supplies sufficient to last a week.

1,500 Troops Close In.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CARACAS, Venezuela, Aug. 17.—The government is recruiting heavily here. A transport with 500 aboard was dispatched to Barcelona, Venezuela. It is planned to attack Cumana from that direction. While the officials here are silent, it is believed that more than 1,500 troops are nearing the enemy entrenchments around Cumana and other coastal towns.

A member of the cabinet when pressed as to whether Cumana was in the hands of the enemy, admitted that it was "partly." Telegraphic and telephonic communications with Cumana have been cut.

Guns recently captured from the rebels were of German make.

Bomb Dutch Steamer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PUERTO CABELLO, Venezuela, Aug. 17.—The Dutch steamer Mirdas, with a cargo of shells, arrived at Cumana last Sunday morning and when entering the harbor during the first battle at that point it was bombed by a government plane. Later it hoisted the Dutch flag and quit the harbor. The captain intimated on arrival here today that the high seas were best for him.

Deny Capture of Island.

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Rumors that the island of Margarita and the port of Carupano were in the hands of Venezuelan revolutionists were denied today in official Venezuelan government reports.

Plan $4,000,000 Hotel on Historic Site in Havana

HAVANA, Aug. 17.—(AP)—A $4,000,000 contract for the erection of an American managed hotel on the site of historic Santa Clara battery was signed today by government officials and a British contracting firm. Free use of the grounds for 60 years was granted, after which the property will revert to the Cuban government. The Hotel Plaza Operating company of New York will operate the hotel.

BRITISH COTTON STRIKE ARBITERS ARE SELECTED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 17.—In addition to Sir Rugby Swift, who last night was announced as the head of the arbitration board of the cotton industry disputes, the ministry of labor tonight announced the other four members of the committee.

They are Sir Arthur Balfour, who has served on many industrial committees, such as the coal industry commission in 1919; C. T. Cramp, identified with the workers' movements, particularly railroading; Sir Archibald Ross, prominent in engineering and shipbuilding circles, and A. G. Walkden, identified with the railway workers.

Although the predicted principle of calling two representatives of the cotton employers and two of the employés was not followed, the balance was maintained by the appointment of two men in the employers' class and two of the employés' group outside the cotton industry. The mills will reopen on the old wage schedules Monday and the board of arbitration will hold its first meeting Wednesday.

Policeman's Dog Saves Him from Bullet of a Suspect

New York, Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Shep, a collie dog belonging to Policeman Leo Williams of Brooklyn, was credited with the capture of a bandit suspect today. The prisoner, a young man giving the name of Thomas Lonergan, is accused of a delicatessen store holdup. He was chased into an alley by Williams and was about to fire at the policeman when the dog leaped, closing his teeth on the fugitive's arm and knocking the revolver from his hand. Lonergan said he had been out of work for six months.

TRAIN KILLS DENVER MAN HERE.

Bernard Dulaney, 21 years old, of Denver, Colo., was killed yesterday when he was struck by a westbound Illinois Central train near 4500 West 35th street.

WOMEN BATHERS WARNED TO KEEP THEIR STRAPS UP

Women devotees of the sun tan fashion at Clarendon, Chicago's largest municipal beach, who formed the habit of slipping off the shoulder straps of their bathing suits to expose a larger area, were warned by the authorities yesterday to discontinue the practice. The men, set an example by the junior lifeguards who parade a torso darkened to the belt line, are to be unmolested.

"Few of the men, mostly those who can exhibit an athletic physique, are addicted to the fashion of appearing only in trunks," said James McGrath, beach manager. "These usually retire to a quiet spot and repose on the sand for their sunning, but if they move around we do not intend to bother them. The women are another problem and they are compelled to conform with the regulations and keep the shoulder straps up."

The orders have gone out to the six policemen and twenty-six lifeguards stationed at the beach. Little trouble has resulted, according to Mr. McGrath, but other observers say that some of the women incline to the practice of hastily pulling up the straps when a guard appears. Their backs, however, do not come under the ban.

COLLAPSES IN HOME; DIES.

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses with or without undersstraps, as they all are where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom if ever larger than a dime or 5c piece (no matter the size of the lump), and all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil.

"The Spermatic Shield—Complex in combination with the Retainer-Simplex (Patent No. 7472247 and other patents pending)—a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Being a vast advancement over all former methods—exemplifying instantaneous effects immediately appreciable and withstanding any strain or position no matter the size or location. Large or difficult cases, or incisional ruptures (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injections, medical treatments or prescriptions, with distinguished personal patrons of all nations."

Theater Man's Aid Held for Investigation.

Los Angeles, Aug. 17.—(AP)—After filing a formal information charging Alexander Pantages, 54 year old theater magnate, with a criminal attack on Eunice Pringle, 17 year old dancer, District Attorney Buron Fitts today announced that Roy Keene, an executive of the Pantages Theater system, had been taken into custody as a material witness in an alleged attempt to bribe witnesses to alter their testimony in the case.

Fitts said that Keene had made a statement that "puts the theater magnate right on the spot." Keene was ordered held in jail pending investigation. He was named today by Fred Wise, a witness at Pantages' preliminary hearing, which closed yesterday, as the man Wise saw in Pantages' private office shortly after the alleged attack there on Miss Pringle.

Tried to Keep Him Out.

Wise said Keene tried to bar him from the room where Wise had gone when he heard the girl scream.

Keene was taken into custody shortly after Fitts had announced that two of the state's principal witnesses during Pantages' preliminary hearing had filed signed statements with him that "certain parties" had attempted to bribe them to change their testimony. They said large sums of money had been offered.

All the state's witnesses in the case were ordered placed under guard today and Fitts declared he would "stand for no foolishness." These included Miss Pringle and her mother, Mrs. Irene Pringle; Fred Wise, W. L. Gordon, and W. C. Hale.

At Liberty in $25,000 Bond.

Pantages was held for trial in Superior court after his hearing yesterday. He is at liberty under $25,000 bail. His arraignment is set for 10 a. m., Monday, at which time he is to plead to two charges of criminally attacking Miss Pringle.

Miss Pringle alleges that when she called on the theater owner in a private office to get him to reinstate a dance act, he attacked her and tried to prevent her escape afterward. Physicians who examined the girl substantiated her assertions.

Pantages has vigorously denied the accusation and said he is the victim of a "frame up."

DR. MICHELSON FINISHES LIGHT TESTS FOR YEAR

Pasadena, Calif., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Dr. Albert A. Michelson, Chicago physicist and Nobel prize winner, has discontinued work on the measurements used in his previous light experiments for this year and is returning to Chicago to carry on other research.

Three months spent here did not affect materially any of his important contributions to light measurement and to enable him to complete his experiment he has ordered constructed a vacuum tube one yard in diameter, which will be placed on the Hervine ranch near here. Dr. Michelson will return to California next spring to continue his experiments with this tube.

Sixteen Killed in Polish Coal Mine Explosion

[Copyright: 1929: By the New York Times.]

WARSAW, Aug. 17.—Sixteen men found death in a coal mine disaster in Hildebrand colliery, near Kattowisks, today. The coal powder exploded when only a few men were at work in the pit. Access to the pit is difficult and only nine bodies have been recovered. Seven other men are missing, doubtless victims of suffocation.

Bank Messenger Waylaid; Loses $3,000 to Bandits

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 17.—(AP)—A Northwestern National bank messenger today was held up and robbed of several hundred dollars in cash and notes, and checks amounting to at least $3,000 by two bandits. The messenger, Harold Granning, 25, was waylaid as he was about to enter the Produce State bank downtown.

Confesses $1,185 Holdup.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 17.—(AP)—H. L. Closson, 62 year old nursery stock salesman, confessed this afternoon, according to State Sheriff Condit, to holding up the Bank of Lushton last Thursday for $1,185. "My credit had about reached its limit," Closson explained, said the sheriff. He had got the idea about three weeks ago. Lushton is 75 miles from his home at Columbus.

U. S. Envoy Morrow and Family Start on Vacation

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 17.—(AP)—A party of more than 100 friends and members of the embassy staff today bade farewell to Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, Mrs. Morrow and their daughter, Miss Constance, who left for the United States, where the American envoy to Mexico will spend an extended vacation. Ambassador Morrow's private car is due in New York next Wednesday afternoon.

BURY GIRL VICTIM OF STRANGLER; HE'S NOT FOUND

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Following funeral services today for Dorothy Aune, 13 year old victim of a strangler, police tonight apparently were far from solution of the crime.

Thousands of persons crowded the streets near the Lutheran Church of Our Redeemer as Rev. Haldor Hodne conducted the services. A score of detectives mingled with the crowd in the hope that the slayer might haunt the scene.

Police were questioning two workmen who had been engaged in remodeling a store last Tuesday when the girl was kidnaped, attacked and slain, and who still were at work when police took them into custody today. The store is a short distance from the girl's home.

Five men still were held in jail tonight, including Albert Mollenhauer, a cobbler whose shop is located a few blocks from the Aune home. Mollenhauer sought his release today in a writ of habeas corpus, but the writ was dismissed after charges of assault were filed against him on complaint of an 11 year old girl. Mollenhauer's two brothers, arrested with him, were given their liberty.

SUSPECT DIES IN CELL.

John Boyle, 40 years old, arrested Thursday as a suspected shoplifter, died of heart disease in his cell at the South State street police station early yesterday.

AFTER you have visited the showings of all the "new models" then compare them with Auburn. If the Auburn is not more exclusive and more distinctive—and if it does not sell itself because of its superior construction, finer performance and greater value, then you will not be asked to buy. DR. LITTLE GIVES UP ALL HE OWNS IN DIVORCE SUIT

Plans $100,000 Fund for Wife He's Leaving.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Dr. Clarence Cook Little, resigned president of the University of Michigan, has turned all his property, estimated at $100,000, into a trust fund for the benefit of his estranged wife and their three children, he testified today at the hearing of his divorce action against Katherine Day Little.

The hearing took place before Circuit Judge George W. Sample in the Washtenaw county Circuit court shortly before noon. It occupied only six minutes. The only ones to testify were Dr. Little and Mrs. Mattie L. Candage, housekeeper at the Little home during the family's four year stay in Ann Arbor.

Testifies to "Legal Desertion."

Dr. Little testified that Mrs. Little had "legally" deserted him 14 years ago, and that the desertion was against his will.

His testimony relative to the trust fund was merely that it has been established. It is understood that the fund will provide Mrs. Little and the three children an income of from $8,000 to $12,000 annually. Dr. Little also testified that Mrs. Little was to have custody of Robert A. and Louise, the two children who have not yet reached the age of 16 years. Whom Edward, the oldest son, will choose to remain with was not disclosed.

Mrs. Candage testified that she had known the Littles for about six years, and that she had lived here as their housekeeper for the last four years. Dr. Little and Mrs. Little lived apart during all of that time, she said.

Wife's Counsel Agrees.

J. O. Murfin, regent of the university and counsel for Mrs. Little, offered no witnesses and stated that he was satisfied to accept the decree.

The court is expected to sign the decree in thirty days, the time usually given in the local court for the filing of additional information.

The fact that Dr. Little had instituted suit for divorce came to light last June 25 in spite of strenuous efforts of both parties to the case to conceal it.

The case attracted much attention as it occurred at a time when Dr. Little was leaving his post as president here. Few people knew of any strife in the Little family and none suspected that a divorce was contemplated. Shortly after filing the divorce bill Dr. Little left for his new post at Mount Desert, Me., where he is conducting research work. He came here from Maine for the hearing.

BANK ROBBERY LAID TO KILLER FREE ON PAROLE

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—A former university student, Gene Alger, 21, recently released from the state reformatory by special parole, where he was serving a two to twenty-one year sentence for murder of an Indianapolis policeman, today was being sought for bank robbery.

A warrant for his arrest was sworn to by the Jennings county prosecutor in Vernon on complaint of state police, who alleged Alger, with one companion, held up the State Bank at Paris Crossing, late Thursday and obtained $750.

The license number of the bandits' automobile was traced to Josephine Miller, daughter of a police sergeant in Jeffersonville, who married Alger in July. She met him during his trial for murder in Danville, Ind., in January, 1927. She then was a student at Central Normal college in Danville. He was a student at Butler university. Indianapolis. A revolver was found late Friday in the apartment from which Alger and his bride had been evicted shortly before.

BRAND MOTHER PUT ON BABY 14 YEARS AGO REUNITES THEM

New York, Aug. 17.—(AP)—The brand which a frantic mother placed on the shoulder of her baby son in 1915 when the Christians were being driven out of Asia Minor brought Loris Vernian, now a young man, to New York today on the last lap of a 9,000 mile journey for a reunion with his mother in Fresno, Cal.

Ordered deported from Silicia in 1915, the mother, fearing she would be separated from her son, slashed the boy's shoulder with a knife before starting the long trek over the snow capped Taurus mountains to the coast.

Her fears were realized and she and the boy were separated. She came to America, but never gave up hope of finding her son and told the Near East Relief of the mark she had placed upon his body. In an orphanage in Syria the boy was found.

HOOVER TELLS FISHING JOYS OF A PRESIDENT

Addresses 5,000 Near Summer Camp.

But the press of public business and its execution in the national capitol is so necessary that we must face the fact that these periods must gradually be shortened. Therefore I have thought it appropriate to accept the hospitality of your citizens and your mountains for one or two days each week and thereby combine both relief and work without cost to either.

"And I have discovered that even the work of government can be improved by leisurely discussions of its problems out under the trees, where no bells ring or callers jar ones thoughts from the channels of urbanity.

"You have demonstrated yourselves good hosts and good neighbors, with that fine courtesy for which Virginia is known to the whole nation. I often think the test of good neighbors is whether one can always be sure when the family meets in emergency it can cheerfully borrow a half dozen eggs or a few extra dishes.

Thanks for the Fishing.

"In this emergency you have proved this sentiment of neighborliness by lending me a part of your park, by improving a road, by securing the fishing rights on a beautiful mountain stream and even providing me with fishing tackle. I, on my side, am glad to lend my services as a good neighbor to you by acting as a sort of sign post to the country of the fine reality of your proposed new national park.

"I fear that the summer camp we have established on the Rapidan has the reputation of being devoted solely to fishing. That is not the case, for the fishing season lasts but a short time in the spring. It is a place for week-end rest—but fishing is an excuse and a valid reason of the widest range of usefulness for temporary retreat from our busy world. In this case it is the excuse for return to the woods and streams with their retouch of the simpler life of the frontier from which every American springs.

Fishing and the Presidency.

"Moreover, I have learned that fishing has an important implication and even sounder foundation of such an excuse from the presidential point of view. I find that many presidents have joined the ranks of fishermen only after their inauguration as President, although I can claim over 45 years of apprenticeship—that is, in fishing, not the presidency."

The President then referred to the refreshments of mind found in fishing as quoted above.

"But to become more serious," the President said in conclusion, "I wish again to thank you on behalf of Mrs. Hoover and myself for your generous and cordial welcome to Madison county. We hope to be good neighbors and we know from experience already that you will be."

Byrd Thanks President.

Gov. Byrd in his remarks expressed the appreciation of the people of the state both for President Hoover's selection of the Rapidan camp site for his own recreation, but also for his donation of the land and facilities to the Shenandoah National Park commission as a future summer home for presidents.

Representative Garber described it as a "happy day for Madison county." The President's selection of a camp site in this region, he said, was recognition of "the spirit of tranquility and inspiration" pervading the Blue Ridge mountains.

The President's week-end guests at this camp, all of whom occupied platform seats at the Madison celebration, included Henry P. Fletcher, who has just resigned as ambassador to Italy; Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ernest Lee Jahncke, Assistant Secretary of Commerce William P. McCracken, Representative Franklin Fort [Rep., N. J.], secretary of the Republican national committee, and Col. James Logan of New York.

Camp in Secluded Spot.

Early in the day Washington newspaper correspondents were given their first glimpse of the President's camp, which is so inaccessible that none except specially invited guests and workmen ever has been able to get within sight of it. Photographers also were permitted to enter the camp for the first time since its completion.

While Rapidan camp is only a little more than 100 miles from Washington, and the President is able to journey to it in about three hours, the last ten miles present difficulties which motorists are usually glad to avoid.

The camp is about 18 miles from Madison, up in the Blue Ridge peaks. It is about ten miles beyond the last town on the road, the village of Criglersville. Until the president selected the camp site, the mountain trail was considered almost impassable, early in the spring construction of roads was commenced by Virginia authorities and army engineers. The road is now passable, but is still rough and dangerous in wet weather.

Cut in Side of Mountain.

For a stretch of five or six miles the newly built road, cut in the side of the mountain, follows a tortuous path upward, so narrow as to require traffic to be routed alternately one way or the other. One edge of this road forms a cliff, which drops sharply down the mountain side.

Eventually the road is to form one of the entrances to the Shenandoah National Park. This park has been authorized by congress and acquisition of the land is in progress.

President Hoover personally purchased 164 acres of land forming the camp site which he has now deeded over to the park commission. The President's representatives are negotiating for additional land, and he expects to purchase altogether from 800 to 900 acres.

The President personally paid for materials used in the erection of cottages at the camp and for a considerable amount of other work done. The cottages were erected by marines.

Camp 2,500 Feet High.

The President's camp is at an elevation of 2,500 feet. Just beyond it is Fork mountain, the second highest peak in the Blue Ridge mountains, 3,853 feet high. The camp is in a thickly wooded area. The terrain is rocky and hilly. Horseback trails wind further up the mountains. The elevation, together with the thick shade and the moisture from mountain brooks, keeps the camp cool these days when the thermometer in Washington reaches 95 or above.

The President's own cottage is at the exact headwaters of the Rapidan river. Converging from two sides of the cottage are what are known as Mill Prong and Laurel Prong, two small streams which form the Rapidan. The Rapidan drops noisily down the mountainside, the sound of its water reaching the President's ears as he goes to sleep. It is said that he especially requested a camp where he could be stilled to sleep by the sound of water.

Houses Built of Pine.

The president's cottage, as well as other buildings, are of pine stained with a dark color. In his own cottage is a living room 20 by 50 feet, a sleeping porch 20 by 20, a bedroom 20 by 20, two baths, a screened porch 20 by 20, and two open porches, each 20 by 40.

Other cottages are scattered among the trees, spacious enough to accommodate twenty-four guests. Electricity is brought by a high tension line from Madison. Water is obtained from mountain springs. The main dining hall is large enough to accommodate all the guests. The kitchen is equipped with electric ranges and refrigeration. A building described as a civic center and assembly room is in process of erection.

The servants include Filipino mess boys from the navy who formerly were on the Mayflower, the President's yacht.

One of the popular sports at the camp is horse shoe pitching. There are regular week end tournaments, Col. Lindbergh having won the honors a week ago.

Completed by New Year.

A regular form of exercise which the men guests usually indulge in under the leadership of the President is the building of dams in the Rapidan. Several of these dams, formed of rocks and placed in position under the engineering supervision of Mr. Hoover, have already been built, forming trout pools.

Work is constantly going on and by next summer it is expected the President will have an ideal week-end resort. The presidential party came from Washington yesterday and will remain until Monday morning.

Two guests arriving late today were Senator James E. Watson [Rep., Ind.], majority leader of the senate and a member of the tariff making finance committee, and Senator Frederick Sackett [Rep., Ky.], also a member of the finance committee. It is assumed that they discussed the tariff with the President.

LAD CATCHES 2 MORE 'POSSUMS TO DELIVER TO PRESIDENT'S CAMP

Criglersville, Va., Aug. 17.—(AP)—William McKinley Burracker, Virginia "Hill Billy" lad who "allows President Hoover was right well taken with the 'possum" he left at the President's mountain camp last Sunday, is going there again tomorrow—this time with two opossums instead of one.

The boy spent the last week combing Big Stone mountain, which overlooks Mr. Hoover's camp on the Rapidan river. He caught two big 'possums, for which the President has promised to pay $5 each. The boy has them caged on the mountain in a soap box.

Ray will appear tomorrow in more formal clothes than he wore on the last visit, when he was attired in everyday overalls. Taking the $5 the President gave him, Ray trudged down to the Luray mission school yesterday and attended the "sale," a rummage affair held every so often there. Details of his purchases, however, have been kept a dark secret.

Army Engineers Sail for Canal Survey Oct. 15

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Secretary of War Good today ordered a battalion of engineer troops to sail for Nicaragua Oct. 15 to aid in the survey of the proposed Nicaraguan canal. The group will consist of 17 officers and 103 enlisted men from Fort Humphreys, Va., and Fort Dupont, Del. They will be joined by 110 men from the 11th engineers in the Canal Zone. The battalion, when organized, will be under the command of Maj. C. P. Gross. Maj. Dan I. Sultan will be commanding officer for the survey project.

U. OF W. STUDENT MISSING; SEARCH IN TWO STATES

Chicago police yesterday were asked by Milwaukee authorities to join in a search for Eugene Vinograd, 18 years old, son of Fred Vinograd, 1103 47th street, Milwaukee, a real estate dealer. The elder Vinograd who came to Chicago to aid in the search, said that his son, a sophomore student at the University of Wisconsin, disappeared unaccountably on Aug. 10 from his home. He said he feared the boy, who was interested in music and dramatics, had met with foul play. When he vanished he was known to have only $9 in his possession.

3 HELD AFTER GUN BATTLE; 2 NEGROES KILLED

A Negro man and woman and a white man were held in police custody yesterday pending an investigation of an attack upon two detectives by six persons whom they had placed under arrest in an alleged vice resort at 4340 South Park way. Two of the attackers were slain and three others wounded in the gun battle. An inquest into the two deaths was continued by a coroner's jury to Aug. 20.

According to the reports received by Commissioner of Police Russell, the detectives, William Simpson and George Mankowsky, were accosted by Fred Haymaker, colored, who took them to the flat. Confident that the place was a vice resort, they arrested the occupants. Haymaker then fired at Mankowsky.

The policemen returned the fire, killing Haymaker and Charles Powell, also colored, and wounding George Gilmore, 6126 Sangamon street; George Thomas, colored, and Rose Allen, said to be Haymaker's common law wife. Florence Powell, colored, escaped.

THE EUROPEAN MATERIALISTS.

A Budapest story from Jay Allen of the Tribune Press Service told of a village in which 98 men had been killed by the procuring of their wives, arsenic or other poisons having been given them by two crones who acted as midwives, magic workers and dealers in the supernatural. The crimes were bits of the dark ages and the village priest was quoted as saying that the habits of his charges were his despair; that the peasants thought of money as the only comfort and had no spirituality.

Abroad there is a curious valuation of America as materialistic. It is used as a reproach applicable particularly to Americans among all the people of occidental civilization. They, it is assumed, have failed to produce a culture worthy of their origins and derivations. In this they are represented as indicating a lapse. The American society has remained at low levels or has sought new low levels, content with material achievements, gross wealth, unesthetic activities, pursuits and accomplishments. Keyserling is a museum piece as an exponent of this appraisal of life in the United States.

It is American observation of European life that it has attenuated at the top in leisure, intellectuality, elegance of manner, culture, scholarship and aristocratic irregularity, but that basically it has not been raised much since the time of Luther. The base of the European pyramid is formed by peoples who have not improved their conditions much since the days of Otto the Great and none since the French revolution. They live in the days of the feudal lords about as much as the Chinese farmer still lives in the day of the Tartar khans.

They are sturdy, primitive and stolid. They produce food stuffs and form a reservoir of soldiers who under discipline from the top are good soldiers. They have not been brought into the present century and are not to be brought into it. They are materialistic because their appetites must be their chief concern, containing their chief rewards. The possession of a little wealth, what would be regarded in their communities as a little wealth, is the sole ambition because it is the only attainable one.

There is no place in the world where a dollar has more importance, where more will be done for it and where it will be hoarded more affectionately and more desperately than in continental Europe, from the leisured top of which the American people are regarded as materialistic.

The inability of great masses of people at the bottom of European society to make any use of the centuries into which generation after generation has disappeared is one of the astonishing social facts of all history. The production of a livelihood or what must pass as a livelihood must wholly engross them and in this they are only in degree and not in desire distinguished from the people of leisure and refinement at the top, who value a piece of money as they do their right eyes and who, in many cases, would get it by means not admitted in American competition for money.

America has many simple people, credulous and victimized by magic makers, deluded by fakers and by their superstitions, but the whole mass of American life bears a relation to the century in which the people who have advantages are living. Democracy here has at least done that. The reproach of materialism cast at the United States is so superficial as to be puerile. It is an opinion which no intelligence could hold or respect.

The whole structure of Europe is grossly materialistic. All society has to be occupied with material things, but European society has made this a gross preoccupation for centuries of acquisitive wars and struggle for place, of peonage and villenage, of profligacy at the top and stolid plodding at the bottom with a culture, a scholarship and a civilization which has not had much meaning for the masses of the people in several hundred years.

That's materialism packed down and solidified.

CONSERVATION AND SMALL TOWNS.

Mr. Seth E. Gordon, conservation director for the Izaak Walton league, reports, with cases, a wholesome activity among small towns in conservation work. The accomplishments consisted of the removal of pollution from lakes and streams, establishment of fish and game preserves and the stocking of them, and the conduct of outdoor campaigns.

The destiny of our resources in beauty and recreation, we think, depends upon just this appreciation of them by the small communities. National, state, and even county interest in conservation is likely to suffer from political control, but the sympathetic cultivating of the immediate neighborhood by small communities produces the best results. A small town is probably the largest unit in which every one shares in the value of an improvement, and when a desire for that improvement is created it will be faithfully and enthusiastically promoted.

The small communities in the United States have taken their surroundings too much for granted and have waited for their picturesqueness and recreational features to be discovered by tourists. If the Izaak Walton league is successful in exciting the imagination of the small towns we are sure that the improvements suggested by the awakened appreciation will be carried on to the infinite perfection of our countryside.

THE CRIME OF DRUG ADDICTION.

A committee of which United States District Attorney Charles Tuttle of New York was chairman has reported that, of 1,563 narcotic addicts whose cases were studied, 43 per cent were led to the use of the drugs through sickness. Another 17 per cent were suffering from mental strains of one sort or another when they turned to narcotics for relief.

These facts were reported to President Hoover's law enforcement commission. If the New York figures may be regarded as typical, we may conclude that 60 per cent of the addicts of this country came to the use of drugs through sickness, physical or mental. Nevertheless, drug addiction in this country is widely regarded as a crime to be punished with severity. It was officially stated in Washington only a few days ago, on the authority of the President, that 33 per cent of the population of the Leavenworth and Atlanta penitentiaries were imprisoned for violation of the narcotic laws. Thousands of men and women in county and state prisons throughout the country are being punished for drug addiction.

Some drug addicts are criminals, but most drug addicts, it is safe to say, are not criminals and most criminals are not drug addicts. The country has allowed itself to be misled regarding narcotic drugs. The anti-narcotic movement is in the hands of zealots who have convinced themselves that narcotics are an unmitigated evil and that habitual users must have the devils driven out of them by rigorous punishment. The narcotic menace, as it is called, is made the excuse for widespread solicitation of funds by racketeers of the uplift. If the zealots continue to have their way as they have had it until now, physicians before long will be forbidden to administer narcotics even to those suffering agonising pain. Physicians in many states today may not administer whisky when in their opinion its use is indicated; a refusal to permit physicians to prescribe opiates might be expected to follow as a matter of course.

The dangers of drug addiction are real enough, but they should not blind the people and their legislators to the fact that narcotic drugs are one of the greatest blessings mankind has ever received. They have relieved far more suffering in the western world than they have produced. Only a minute proportion of all those who have been spared suffering through drugs have become habitual users of them.

Drug addiction is not per se a crime to be punished, but rather a misfortune to be remedied if possible by considerate care and treatment. The advice of self-seeking zealots in this matter is of the sort which hanged harmless old women as witches and sought to cure the insane with irons and the lash.

PRAISE FOR CRAFTSMANSHIP.

The plan to reward fine craftsmanship, proposed by the Associated Builders of Chicago, is an enlightened one which we hope will be realized. The Associated Builders wish to recognize in some formal way and stimulate that pride of workmanship which we are told animated the craftsmen of the middle ages, before the days of mechanized, huge scale industry. Ruskin and Morris, poets, artists and craftsmen themselves, bewailed the modern loss of the craftsman's joy in his skill and the work of his hands and tried to restore the individual industry of the past age. It was a well intentioned crusade and had some results, but it was futile in the main, for it could not turn back the course of industrial development. An effort like that of the Builders' association, though it may be modest in its first appearance, is better advised, for it accepts the conditions of modern industry and seeks to introduce into it something of the inspiration which is said to have belonged to the better class of craftsmen in past time.

To say that the machine has abolished personality in workmanship and pride in good work is superficial and, we think, mistaken. It is a pessimistic generalization which a great deal of present day craftsmanship disproves. The element of beauty, and there can be no beauty without spirited skill, is more and more sought in American manufacture and building. The automobile is outstanding evidence of the successful search for grace, proportion and beauty of color in all types from the most costly to the least. In fact, there are among the least expensive cars design and color which are not surpassed by those of the costliest cars.

The American craftsman today is sitting pretty well on the top of the world. He has means and he has leisure, and he will have more if our prosperity continues. He is in a condition to appreciate and be inspired by recognition of the higher aspect of labor and craftsmanship.

Editorial of the Day

SOMEBODY HAS BEEN MISSING PUTTS.

[New York Herald-Tribune.]

The idea that putting is a contemptible part of golf seems to underlie the current suggestion that the cup be enlarged from four and one-quarter inches to six inches in diameter. A high handicap player may be a good putter and thus hold his own with a real golfer when he reaches the green. So the department of golf that most vexes the expert ought to be made easier for him. The fine approach shot is supposed to be the perfection of skill, but the humble putt, likened to croquet, is so unmanly that it ought to be made even more like child's play. That appears to be the argument for the larger hole.

On that theory the cup might as well be magnified to the size of a washtub and have done with it. The reform would prevent such a superb croquet player as Bobby Jones from winning tournaments on the putting green. The amateur and open champion owns that he gives more hours to putting practice than to driving. But he does not whine about the ignominy of making a player who can drive three hundred yards down the middle of the fairway aim at a little hole in the ground ten feet away and miss it more often than not.

"Read, Mark, Learn, and Inwardly Digest Them"

The twenty-fifth chapter of St. Matthew's gospel, which is today's reading, consists entirely of some of Jesus of Nazareth's best known parables. In reading the entire chapter, one instantly observes a very definite sequence and relationship of ideas. The parables deal consecutively with the need of personal preparation, as illustrated by the wise and foolish virgins. Then follows Jesus' teaching on the use of personal talents and his understanding of the judgment. The reading is taken from the American standard version of the Bible. J. E.

WISDOM AND FOLLY

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, who took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom. And five of them were foolish, and five were wise. For the foolish, when they took their lamps, took no oil with them; but the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. Now, while the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept. But at midnight there is a cry, 'Behold, the bridegroom! Come ye forth to meet him.'

"Then all those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps. And the foolish said unto the wise, 'Give us of your oil, for our lamps are going out.' But the wise answered, 'Peradventure there will not be enough for us and you; go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves.' And while they went away to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went with him to the marriage feast; and the door was shut. Afterward come also the other virgins, saying, 'Lord, Lord, open to us.' But he answered and said, 'Verily I say unto you, I know you not.' Watch, therefore; for ye know not the day nor the hour.

"For it is as when a man, going into another country, called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, to another one; to each according to his several ability; and he went on his journey. Straightway he that received the five talents went and traded with them, and made other five talents. In like manner he also that received the two gained another two. But he that received the one went away and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.

"Now, after a long time, the lord of those servants cometh, and maketh a reckoning with them. And he that received the five talents came, and brought other five talents, saying, 'Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents; lo, I have gained other five talents.' His lord said unto him, 'Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will set thee over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy lord.' And he also that received the two talents came and said, 'Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents; lo, I have gained other two talents.' His lord said unto him, 'Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will set thee over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy lord.'

"And he also that had received the one talent came and said, 'Lord, I knew thee that thou art a hard man, reaping where thou didst not sow, and gathering where thou didst not scatter; and I was afraid, and went away and hid thy talent in the earth; lo, thou hast thine own.' But his lord answered and said uno him, 'Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I did not scatter; thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the bankers, and at my coming I should have received back mine own with interest. Take ye away therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him that hath the ten talents. For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but from him that hath not, even that which he hath shall be taken away. And cast ye out the unprofitable servant into the outer darkness; there shall be the weeping and the gnashing of teeth.'

"But when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all the nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as the shepherd separateth the sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, 'Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for I was hungry, and ye gave me to eat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me.'

"Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, 'Lord, when saw we thee hungry, and fed thee? Or athirst, and gave thee drink? And when saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? Or naked, and clothed thee? And when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?' And the King shall answer and say unto them, 'Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me.'

"Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, 'Depart from me, ye cursed, into the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels; for I was hungry, and ye did not give me to eat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not.' Then shall they also answer, saying, 'Lord, when saw we thee hungry, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee?' Then shall he answer them, saying, 'Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, ye did it not unto me.' And these shall go away into eternal punishment; but the righteous into eternal life."

PATRIOTIC SONGS

FLAG OF THE FREE.

Arr. from Wagner.

Flag of the Free! fairest to see!
Borne thro' the strife and the thunder of war,
Banner so bright with starry light,
Float ever proudly from mountain to shore.

Flag of the Free, all hail to thee!
Floating the fairest on ocean or shore,
Loud ring the cry, ne'er let it die,
"Union and Liberty now evermore!"

Sages of old thy coming foresaw,
Empire of justice, empire of law;
Flag of our fathers! 'round all the world
Blest of the millions wherever unfurled;
Terror to tyrants, hope to the slave,
Spread thy fair folds to shield and to save.

Flag of the Free, all turn to thee,
Golden thy stars in the blue of their sky!
Flag of the brave! foes, let them rave,
Crimson thy bars floating gayly on high!

Splendid thy story, mighty to save,
Matchless thy beauty on land or wave,
Heroes have borne thee aloft in the fray,
Foemen who scorned thee have all passed away;
Pride of our country, hailed from afar,
Banner of Promise, lose not a star.

How to Keep Well

WEATHER AND HUMAN HEALTH.

THOSE who regard the weather as a factor in health and disease are having an inning. British scientists have always held winds, fogs, rains, and cold responsible for the prevalence of disease. They have written volumes to prove that there is relationship. The weather of Great Britain is so abominably bad that it should be convicted and hanged on general principles, but criminal jurisprudence requires that the accused should be definitely charged.

A group of scientists, one in India, several in Great Britain, and some in this country, are trying to prove that influenza cannot prevail except when the weather is right for it. The most recent contribution on the subject is a study of weather in relation to the aches and pains of chronic rheumatic disorders, made by Drs. Rountree, Reutschler, and Van Zant of the Mayo clinic. Our forefathers contended that "rheumatiz" and pain in the "jints" were dependent on the weather. They predicted oncoming storms by the "miseries" in their backs. They were living barometers, instruments for recording electrical variations, even thermometers.

Dr. Rountree and his associates, by a prolonged careful study as scientific as such a study could be under the limitations, have proved that grandpa knew what he was talking about. The conditions of the atmosphere, storm conditions and such do influence the stiffness in the joints and the "miseries" and pains of the rheumatics. In a group of 387 such patients studied over a considerable time, while accurate record was kept of weather studies, it was found that ninety-three per cent reacted with the weather. Only seven per cent were unaffected. Some reacted one way and others another, but there was a definite recognizable reaction in nearly all.

More than ninety per cent of the storms were recorded either before or during the outbreak by complaints of increased pain and stiffness on the part of the rheumatics. When Dr. Rountree and his associates tried to analyze the matter further they were not able to arrive at conclusions. They could not prove that it was due to changes in the electric content of the air or its humidity, water content of fogs, or winds or changes in temperature.

They came nearer holding barometric reading responsible. They suspect that it may be due to some ingredient or some quality of the air about which we know nothing. Perhaps they did nothing more than prove that grandpa knew his onions when he judged the weather by the stiffness and "misery in his jints," but doing that was a help besides bringing honor to prophets who were without honor in their own country. The Mayo scientists say the pioneer in their line of investigation was Dr. Everett of Sterling, Ill., who wrote just fifty years ago. Another investigator who began a little later but who wrote in 1877 was Dr. Mitchell.

BETTER THAN MUSH POULTICE.

Reader writes: After having had about forty boils in five years I was told how to handle them. My boils were under my arm. I saturated cotton with alcohol and placed it over the boils like a poultice. I have had no boils for years.

REPLY:

Local applications of alcohol are undoubtedly superior to poultices of mush or slabs of fat meat.

A SMALL, FIBROUS TUMOR.

Mrs. J. A. K. writes: Please write about caruncle, the cause and the danger, if any, of developing cancer.

REPLY:

Caruncle is the name of a small, fibrous tumor. It may take on the appearance of a polyp or it may become adenomatous.

As a rule caruncles should be removed. They may be troublesome and a few of them are either cancerous from the beginning or become so.

WEIGHT DEPENDS ON BUILD.

E. H. W. writes: How much should a woman 32 years old, height 5 feet 6½ inches, weigh?

REPLY:

About 141 pounds. Something depends on build.

NO FUNDS FOR TRAFFIC SIGNAL.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—[Friend of the People.]—At the corner of Francisco avenue and Irving Park it is almost impossible to cross the street between the hours of three in the afternoon and twelve at night. Quite a few accidents have occurred. Francisco avenue is the only thoroughfare between Kedzie and Western. Isn't it possible for a "GO and STOP" sign to be put up. M. O.

Stop and go lights are paid for out of the funds received from sale of bonds passed upon by the voters for this purpose. Due to the fact that bond issues for this purpose have been defeated at the last several elections we are without funds to install this type of traffic control signal, therefore are unable to comply with your request for installation of stop and go lights at Francisco avenue and Irving Park.

Ward forces cut weeds back six feet from the alley line; park forces cut the weeds in the parkway on Sheridan road and along the edge of walk; notice served on owner of lot by the Department of Health to cut weeds on the remainder of the vacant lot.

THE DRY HARVEST

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

AUGUST 18, 1864.

PHILADELPHIA. — Advices from the Shenandoah valley state that the main body of Early's force is at Mount Jackson. Our pursuit of the rebels has been as rapid as possible, but they have got away uninjured with their plunder. Our loss has been very slight, as, with the exception of a slight skirmish at Opequan creek, there has been no fighting of any consequence. Sheridan's movement has been fully successful in forcing the retreat of Early beyond Strasburg. Prisoners state that Early expects large reinforcements to meet him at Mount Jackson, where he will turn upon Sheridan and show fight. That is what Sheridan has been trying to get him to do all the time.

WASHINGTON.—Late advices state that Gen. Sheridan has fallen back to Winchester, where he will fortify himself and act on the defensive.

WASHINGTON. — The flank movement on the north of Richmond was progressing finely yesterday. The enemy's flanks had been turned and they fell back on the 15th to a better position.

WASHINGTON.—Advices from Deep Bottom up to yesterday morning announce that Gen. Grant's lines have been advanced within seven miles of Richmond. There was considerable fighting during the day, in which the rebels were invariably driven back.

AUGUST 18, 1899.

RENNES.—At today's session of the Dreyfus court martial Gen. Roget continued his malignant vituperation of the prisoner, M. Bertulus, the eminent French jurist, and Col. Picquart, champion of Dreyfus, appeared as witnesses for the accused officer and did much in his behalf. Altogether it was a brighter day for Dreyfus.

TROMSOE, Norway.—Walter Wellman and the survivors of his polar expedition arrived on the Capella, having successfully completed their exploration in Franz Josef Land. Mr. Wellman discovered important new lands and many islands. No trace of Prof. Andree, the missing aeronaut, was found. The explorers bring a grim story of arctic tragedy in their experience since they left on their trip on June 26, 1898.

CHICAGO.—Richard Prendergast, former judge of the County court, died at the Chicago hospital at the age of 44. His sons, Richard and John, and his kinsman, Judge Edward F. Dunne, and his cousin, Miss Prendergast, were at his bedside. Anemia was the cause of death.

ASHLAND, O.—Mrs. P. S. Grosscup, wife of United States Judge Grosscup of Chicago, is lying at the point of death at the home of her husband's father. Judge Grosscup's mother died week before last.

AUGUST, 18, 1919.

CHICAGO.—Police and I. W. W. agitators attempting to foment a strike of lunchroom employés fought three battles in the loop last night, more than a score of revolver shots being exchanged.

NEW YORK.—Facing one of the most complete transportaton tieups in the history of the city, New York was compelled to walk today so far as the subway and elevated systems of the Interborough were concerned. Jitneys started running at daybreak and did a thriving business. The surface lines were unable to carry the crowds.

EL PASO, Tex.—An official statement from military headquarters, signed by Brig. Gen. James B. Erwin, district commander, announced Maj. L. A. Walton, commander of the aero unit at Fort Bliss, had received a message from Lieut. Paul H. Davis and Lieut. Harold G. Peterson, stating that they had been captured by Mexican bandits and were being held for $15,000 ransom, which must be paid by Aug. 18. The aviators have been missing a week. At a cowboy camp meeting at Marfa, Tex., $15,000 was secured in fifteen minutes to pay the ransom.

CHICAGO.—Announcement is made by Charles E. Reed of 4644 Sheridan road of the engagement of his daughter, Miss Gwendolyn Dempster Reed, to Marshall J. Duker, son of Mrs. Kathryn A. Duker, 4454 Washington boulevard.

ADVICE TO MR. WRIGLEY.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—If Mr. Wrigley will heed the wishes of the baseball fans in the coming world series between the Cubs and Athletics he will not permit the stretching of ropes or placing of any obstructions in the outfield so as to enlarge the seating capacity of the ball park. The ropes across the field make a farce of the game, as any kind of a fly ball into the crowd in the temporary obstruction is a two base hit, whereas ordinarily the outfielders would have an opportunity of catching the ball, which might produce a different result in the final score of the game.

There is nothing more thrilling at a game than to see a great catch made by an outfielder, whereas in a small playing field, such as will be the case if ropes are stretched across the outfield at the Cubs' park, the only catch the outfielders can make is of an ordinary fly ball. Of course, if this condition should prevail, what is fair for one team is fair for the other, but if the game is to be played under such circumstances it shows that the baseball magnates are not so desirous of winning the world series as they are for the money that will come in through the temporary arrangement of increasing the seating capacity.

Inasmuch as Chicago has waited for eleven years before it got a pennant winning team, it would be a calamity to have the chances of its team winning the world's series hampered by a small playing field. There are no greater fly chasers on any team in either league than Hack Wilson, Kiki Cuyler and Old Hoss Stephenson. Give them a chance to demonstrate their prowess. Chicago fans are all for the Cubs, and Mr. Wrigley can reward their loyalty by giving them an opportunity to see a real ball game with all the thrills attendant on a world series.
CHARLES PRISBIN.

WORLD SERIES ON SOUTH SIDE.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—I have just learned that Mr. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, has offered his park to Mr. Wrigley for the world series. That is just like the Old Roman—a real sportsman.

I hope that Mr. Wrigley will accept his offer. While the Sox fans are disappointed at the poor showing of their favorites, yet we are pulling to a man for the Cubs' success. We all want a pennant, Cubs and Sox fans alike. The south side park is just the place for the world series, as it holds at least sixty-five thousand people.
P. J. BROWNE.

A DANGEROUS CROSSING.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—The writer wishes to call your attention to the fact that the corner of Granville avenue and Clark street is one of the most dangerous in the city. There are on an average of five to six accidents per week on this corner. Clark street at this point is a very busy street, not only with automobiles but street cars as well, and Granville, running east and west, is busy with automobiles. The automobiles run by at the rate of from thirty to fifty miles per hour on Clark street and there are no stop and go lights there, nor any other lights indicating the danger of the corner.

A school is located half a block east of Clark on Granville and the children have to cross this busy corner. A policeman is stationed there only during the hours when school is opening and closing and if a child is late or sent home on account of illness or any other cause he must pass or cross the street without any assistance. It is very difficult for an adult to cross Clark street, let alone a small child.
H. L. GOODMAN.

OPERA TICKETS FOR PRIZES.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—The statement by Mr. Samuel Insull that if Chicago cannot maintain a first class opera the city has failed as a great business center, is absolutely correct.

The Civic Opera company is one of the best national advertisements Chicago has ever had, and, as Mr. Insull justly says, "Think of what the Civic Opera company is worth to Chicago, not only for its cultural value, but for its material side."

I would like to make a suggestion that the leading department stores purchase one hundred tickets each week during the season and offer the tickets as prizes to their sales force for the best records made for courtesy and service. This would aid in popularizing grand opera, prove a fine business investment and bring happiness and musical culture to the members of the sales forces of the principal retail establishments of Chicago.
HARRY EDWARD FREUND.

PERIL TO SPRINGS AND DISHES.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—There is a treacherous rift in the street in front of 2301 North Central Park avenue; this rift is getting larger after every rain, and nine out of every ten machines hit this hole with such force that the jar keeps the dishes rattling in the pantry.
ANTHONY L. BLACHOWSKI.

CHARITY FOR EGYPT.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—May I criticise your statement that "Cook county pays for one-half and gets one twenty-fifth of the state's highways"? What if it does? If Mr. Hal Foust had traveled outside of Cook county, down into southern Illinois where the roads are pure mud and impassable in wet weather, he would think that one twenty-fifth is a great deal too much for Cook county to have.

This past June while trying to get into Missouri from Anna, Ill., we were forced to go 200 miles out of our way because a ten mile stretch of Illinois road was impassable due to a hole in it of the depth of three feet.

Look at any road map of southern Illinois—think of the frequency that the Mississippi and tributaries overflow—think of the rain they have and then wonder how they manage to get about at all in that part.

One of the finest bridges ever built over the Mississippi river is not greatly used because it is unapproachable from the Illinois side.

Why not give our southern friends a little more attention? ELSIE STERN.

POLICE WHISTLES.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—I should like to raise my voice against the whistles used by the park police on the south side. We like to think of our parks as places to which we can repair after a day of turmoil to regain our composure and to soothe our nerves. The whistles blown by the traffic officers do much to defeat this purpose. Their melancholy wail makes the distraught mind more distraught and the aching body finds no relief. A. L. B.

PLOT TO POISON OIL MAN LINKED TO STOCK DEAL

Officers Claim Lawyer's Motive Revealed.

Ponca City, Okla., Aug. 7.—(AP)—Five hundred shares of oil stock which F. C. Hyde, 28 year old Ponca City attorney ordered for himself on the account maintained by Samuel S. Collins, wealthy oil man, with a New York broker, provided the motive for Hyde's alleged attempt on Collins' life, officers said today. The stock was found in mail turned over to authorities by the postmaster here.

Hyde ordered 500 shares of Continental Oil company stock, valued at over $17,000, through the New York broker, the mail revealed. A few days later after placing the order, the officers claim Hyde administered a poison to Collins in a soft drink.

Order Confirmed by Hyde.

When the New York broker sought, through his Tulsa branch, to confirm the order, he was informed that Collins was too ill to discuss business matters, and was referred to Hyde, who, officers say, confirmed the order.

The oil shares arrived in Ponca City Friday. Officers says it is their theory that the knowledge of the probable arrival of the stock spurred Hyde on to attempt to kidnap the oil man.

Hyde, who has been Collins' personal counsel since he was admitted to the bar a year ago, and who previously was the oil man's private secretary, was arraigned in county court at Newkirk this afternoon on a charge of administering poison to Collins in an attempt to kill him. Judge R. M. Parkhurst fixed bond at $5,000 and set preliminary hearing for Sept. 3.

The lawyer is accused of placing poison in a bottle of soda pop which he ordered delivered to Collins' office nearly two weeks ago. Collins became dangerously ill upon taking one swallow. The episode came to light yesterday, following the arrest of Hyde in an alleged attempt to kidnap Collins late Thursday night.

County Attorney Bruce Potter said formal charges have not been filed in connection with the alleged kidnaping attempt, but that several separate charges against Hyde probably will grow out of the episode.

Collins Regarded Him as a Son.

Hyde, in the county jail at Newkirk, refuses to talk.

Plainly shaken by the turn of events which seemingly reveal his personal counsel and former secretary as a Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde, Collins today expressed hope that Hyde will be found insane.

"It was a great shock to me," Collins said. "Hyde handled my personal affairs, kept my books and was my close personal friend until ten days ago. It is my earnest hope that we will find the boy's mind had been wandering. I had come to look on him almost as a son."

Poisoned Whisky Found.

About a week ago Sheriff Joe Cooper advised Collins that Hyde was plotting against his life.

Hyde was arrested Thursday night after walking into a trap which Collins himself helped to bait. Collins went so far as to allow himself to be blindfolded and shoved into an automobile in front of his home. At that juncture, officers who were in hiding stepped up and placed Hyde, who was seated at the steering wheel of the car, under arrest. In Hyde's possession were a quantity of a strong poison and a pint of whisky containing poison.

2 TONS OF DYNAMITE FOUND "INFERIOR"; IT ROCKS 2 TOWNS

New Albany, Ind., Aug. 17.—(AP)—A terrific blast today rocked this city and the west end of Louisville, Ky., across the river from here, shattering countless windows.

The explosion was caused by officials who sought to destroy two tons of dynamite that had been condemned.

Apparently no one was injured. Residents within a radius of five miles rushed out of their houses. The blast wrecked the home of Carlson Bell, 300 yards away, and windows in residences a mile away were shattered. No one was in the Bell home at the time.

A half dozen workmen and a government inspector had narrow escapes from death. The inspector had condemned the dynamite as unfit for use and was superintending its destruction.

A fire was built upon an empty lot and the dynamite placed upon it. The workmen then retired about 1,000 yards and waited. The blast hurled one of them over an automobile and knocked the others to the ground. They were bruised but not seriously injured.

BODIES OF U. S. WAR DEAD ARE FOUND IN RUSSIA

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 17.—(AP)—The bodies of 28 American soldiers, killed during the world war in north Russia, have been recovered by a commission of members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. This was announced today at national headquarters of the organization when a cable was received from Edwin S. Bettleheim Jr. of Washington, vice chairman of the commission now in Archangel, Russia.

When the American party left New York they hoped to locate and return to the United States the bodies of 128 American war dead. Twenty-nine of these bodies were believed to be in graves in the Archangel section The remainder of the bodies were buried in unmarked graves in the Dvina river valley. Surviving members of the United States force that campaigned against bolshevist troops have reported the approximate location of the unmarked graves. Most of the dead were soldiers from Michigan.

The veterans' organization is in charge of the work of returning the bodies to American soil by virtue of an agreement reached with the United States and the soviet republic.

POISON RUM KILLS GUEST; COURT ORDERS LIFE INSURANCE PAID

Richmond, Va., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Pursuant to its recorded judgment that the national prohibition law is not violated when a guest accepts and drinks contraband liquors in the home of his host, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the fourth circuit, today issued a mandate ordering insurance paid in a case tried here in which the insured had died of poisonous liquor.

The order of the court provides that insurance of $6,000 on the late Samuel Peyton Flickinger be paid to his mother and beneficiary, Mrs. S. A Flickinger of Norfolk, Va.

Flickinger, member of a prominent Norfolk family, died in Baltimore in December, 1927, after drinking, it was alleged, gin cocktails containing wood alcohol, served in the home of Edmund H. Murphy, in a fashionable Baltimore apartment house.

The occasion was a party given to Mr. Flickinger and his fiancée, Miss Katherine McDonald of New York. Miss McDonald and the host's wife also succumbed from drinking the poisonous drinks. Murphy recovered after hospital treatment.

Insurers of Flickinger refused to pay the claim and set up the defense that liability had ceased to exist when the insured violated the law.

SALLY'S GUESTS ENJOY PLAYS AT AERIAL THEATER

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

"Look at that airplane, Sally! We're almost as high as it is! Ain't it great to be up so high?"

"Say, look at those cars down there! They're just like specks on the street. It's like being up on a mountain!"

There were plenty more remarks like these, when we stepped onto the Sky Veranda of the Aerial Theater, where my hundred boy and girl guests and I were seeing the Jack and Jill Players yesterday afternoon. There we were—more than twenty stories above north-side Chicago, looking out over the loop, the Oak street beach, Lincoln park, and all the near north side—much higher than many of my little guests ever had been! Then three wonderful plays were given by the Jack and Jill Players!

"Baby Moon," by Frances Cavanah—what a delightfully clever visit to the clouds that proved to be! Then "The King's Cream"—the "inside" story of how ice cream was discovered, to satisfy the whims of a capricious king!

And "Tip-Top"—a real thriller of the old time west—done so well we could almost smell the sage brush and gun powder!

There was other fun, too—the piano solos by Anatole Rappaport between the plays, the fun we all had when I gave the girl and boy writing the best letters the autographed copies of "The Treasure of Belden Place," by Frances Cavanagh. And of course all my little guests were thinking of the chance offered by Agnes Marie Foley, founder and director of the Jack and Jill Players, to have a tryout and see if they could join and share in the training and fun. So it seemed hard when the last play was finished, and the time came to get back to earth from the Aerial theater.

LAWRENCE BUCK, ARCHITECTURAL ARTIST, DIES AT 64

Lawrence Buck, nationally known architectural artist and water color painter, died suddenly yesterday at his home on Marshman street, Ravinia, of a heart ailment, from which he had suffered for more than a year. He was 64 years old.

Born in New Orleans, Mr. Buck came to Chicago in his early twenties. He maintained a studio in the city until nine years ago, supplying architectural drawings and acting in a consulting capacity to other architects. Since he gave up his studio he had spent most of his time on his water color work.

Many of the beautiful homes in the north shore suburbs were designed by Mr. Buck, including that of the Cyrus McCormicks in Lake Forest. His latest building design was for the school building in Ravinia. He was a member of the Arts club.

His widow, a daughter, Miss Virginia Buck, and a sister, Miss Lena Buck of Evanston, survive. Funeral services will be held at 4:30 p. m. today in the undertaking rooms at 27 North Sheridan road, Highland Park. Burial will be in Graceland cemetery.

U. S. HANGS RUM PIRATE FOR TWO MURDERS AT SEA

James Alderman, Killer of Coast Guardsmen, Dies.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Within a stone's throw of the wharf where he was landed in shackles two years ago, after slaying three men in a bloody battle aboard a coast guard patrol boat at sea, James Horace Alderman, 50 year old rum pirate, today was hanged inside a metal seaplane hangar at the coast guard base here, for the murder of two members of the vessel's crew.

Displaying the same bravado that characterized his long rum running career, Alderman mounted the rough pine scaffolding in the hangar about 6 o'clock and a moment later the executioner sprung the trap. Fifteen minutes afterwards a physician pronounced him dead.

No Spectators Allowed.

Only necessary officials and a minister witnessed the execution, Judge Halstead L. Ritter, in signing the death warrant, having ordered that newspapermen and other persons not required for the hanging be barred from the death chamber.

Alderman was convicted in United States District court of the murder of Victor Lamby and Sidney Sanderlin, aboard a coast guard patrol boat, 35 miles off the Florida coast on Aug. 7, 1927. Robert Webster, a secret service operative, also was slain while Alderman was in command of the boat, on which he had been taken as a prisoner when the government men overhauled his rum laden craft.

Planned a Plank Walking.

After being taken aboard the coast guard boat, Alderman suddenly whipped out a pistol and shot Sanderlin as he stood at his radio preparing to report the capture. Lamby was shot down next. Alderman then herded the government men to the rail of the coast guard boat with the declaration that he was going to make them "walk the plank."

Webster rushed Alderman when he turned to instruct Robert E. Weech, an accomplice, who was aboard the rum boat, to sink his craft. Webster was killed, but other members of the crew overpowered Alderman in the melee. Weech turned state's evidence and was given a light sentence.

HUNT FOR DRIVER OF AUTO FOUND BURNING ON ROAD

Carlinville, Ill., Aug. 17.—[U.P.]—Officers here today asked surrounding communities' aid in their search for Merritt C. Johnson of St. Louis, who has been missing since his automobile was found burning on the highway near here yesterday.

A careful check of all hospitals, hotels, and other public places in this vicinity has failed to reveal any evidence of his whereabouts, and the burned wreckage of the car gave no clues.

St. Louis police say Johnson, caretaker of the Midland Valley Country club, left St. Louis for Springfield and several Indiana cities. The ruins of the car were taken to Gillespie, Ill.

U. S. GRABS STATE POWER WITH DRY LAWS, IRISH TOLD

The federal government is "grabbing the state's power" in its prohibition legislation, Dennis M. Mallory of Chicago, national president of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, told 350 delegates to the ninth annual convention yesterday at the Hotel Sherman.

"That is a state's affair," Mallory continued. "Why should some chap in Florida tell me up here in Illinois I can't drink? That is Illinois' right. This country will become a pure autocracy if folks don't wake up."

Eamon de Valera, who expected to attend the convention of the organization which he founded, sent a cable from Ireland saying he is starting a new Irish paper, The Irish Press, Ltd., in Dublin, of which he is editor. The paper, he said, is capitalized for $1,000,000, with half the stock to be sold in America.

ARREST 30 MEN IN A $1,500,000 COUNTERFEIT RING

New York, Aug. 17.—(Special.)—A daring counterfeiting band, whose members already have printed and placed in circulation more than $1,500,000 in spurious $5 and $20 bills, is being hunted through eastern cities by the United States secret service, it was learned tonight.

While federal authorities decline to comment on the report, it is whispered about the custom house that every available operative has been rushed here in an effort to stem the tide of worthless money.

More than 30 men have been taken into custody and 60 printing presses and 40 plates have been seized. Leaders of the gang, however, still are at liberty. Three supposed members were arraigned before United States Commissioner Francis A. O'Neill today. Each was held in $10,000 bail. They are Dominick Fusco, 20; Ernesto Valentino, 23, and George Rany, 25, all of New York.

BOY, 3, WANDERS TO "SEE BOATS"; LOST FOR 8 HOURS

After nearly eight hours of anxious searching, Mrs. Anna Nikowitz, 5455 Kenwood avenue, last night found her son, Walter, 3½ years old, who had wandered away from home to "see the boats in Jackson park." She found him in the Hyde Park police station, where he had been taken by Mrs. B. F. Enelow of the Shoreland hotel, and Mrs. B. Strasberg, who found him walking around the park before he had "seen the boats." To compensate him for spoiling his adventure they bought him a toy motorboat, so Walter went home well satisfied with his outing.

O'Brine Hurt and Plane Damaged in Landing

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 17.—(AP)—The St. Louis Robin, the plane which set a new endurance record of more than 420 hours, was damaged in landing at the Municipal airport here today. Forest O'Brine, the pilot, was slightly hurt.

TWO BONDSMEN ENTER FORBIDDEN AREA; GO TO JAIL

Two professional bondsmen who decided the recent drive against their class had died down last night ventured into the forbidden territory in the vicinity of the detective bureau at 11th and State streets and were promptly clapped into jail by Sergt. Peter Harlib, acting on orders of Deputy Commissioner Stege.

They gave their names as Robert Marcus, 4838½ Drexel boulevard, and Arthur Heyman, 4319 South St. Louis avenue. Marcus, police said, admitted he was a "tax fixer" as well as a bondsman, after a sheaf of tax receipts were found in his pockets.

In a package of checks carried by Marcus, Commissioner Stege found six made out to Michael O'Donnell of the automobile detail, signed by insurance companies and given him for returning stolen cars. The commissioner order O'Donnell's removal from the detail and transferred him to a uniformed post in the Burnside station.

BRITAIN AHEAD IN ANY CRUISER TONNAGE TREATY

Hoover Does Not Seek Displacement Parity.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Naval reduction along the lines visualized by Former President Calvin Coolidge at the three power Geneva conference in 1927, and in his Armistice day speech of last fall, now appears out of the question.

The Coolidge administration fought for exact mathematical tonnage equality with Great Britain, but all signs now indicate that the United States will have to spot Great Britain from 15 to 40 thousand tons of cruisers if a real cut in warship tonnages is to result from the conversations between Ambassador Dawes and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald.

So long as tonnage alone was the measuring stick for determining the comparative fighting strength of ships, the Coolidge administration steadfastly refused to accept anything else than equality in displacement.

Hoover Alters Attitude.

But now that President Hoover has suggested scrapping the tonnage measurement in favor of a system which would take in age, fire power and speed, as well as tonnage, in evaluating ships, the way has been opened for an agreement permitting Great Britain to have a greater total tonnage in cruisers than the United States.

As a result it is considered highly probable that in the event of an agreement, if the United States had 250,000 tons of cruisers, Great Britain might be given 300,000. Should the United States complete the fifteen cruisers now authorized, which would run the American cruiser tonnage to slightly more than 300,000, Great Britain's total might be as much as 350,000 tons, many of them being the smaller six-inch gun vessels.

The British Standpoint.

Great Britain's contention is that the small cruiser is worth as a fighting unit only about one-half as much as a big cruiser. The British view is that for every 10,000 ton 8 inch gun American cruiser, Great Britain should be allowed two 6,000 ton 6 inch gun cruisers. It is understood that President Hoover, as well as state and navy department officials, are inclined to yield some tonnage concession to Great Britain if the United States maintains more 10,000 ton ships than England.

The fact that several of the 6 inch gun British cruisers are ten years old or older probably would be taken into consideration and might contribute toward giving Great Britain a greater total tonnage.

The United States is completing eight 10,000 ton cruisers and would have to build at least seven more to attain parity in this size ship with Great Britain. Should Great Britain stop with fifteen 10,000 ton ships and the United States continue to build them, the question of permitting England a larger tonnage in smaller ships would arise.

Resignations Worry Navy.

Meanwhile navy department officials have another worry—the unusual number of resignations of officers. A total of 81 line officers of the navy have resigned since Jan. 1.

The department is so concerned that it has sent out a circular letter to all ships and stations, ordering every officer who leaves the service in the future to specify in his letter of resignation whether he believes his pay inadequate, his chances of promotion poor, "or the deprivation of home life too arduous."

BRITAIN'S VIEW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 17.—That a parity of naval strength between Great Britain and the United States can only be reached by the British gradually cutting down and diminishing replacements, while America be allowed to build up to a common level, is now generally accepted by the admiralty here.

Calculations of the present naval negotiations between the two countries, so far as the British are concerned, are based on the understanding that the United States will proceed to build every one of the 10,000 ton cruisers voted last year by congress.

British Idea of Cruiser Parity.

The British idea as to how cruiser parity could be obtained is as follows:

First: Great Britain is to scrap 15 old cruisers, all launched between 1913 and 1918, amounting to a tonnage of 70,000.

Second: America is to scrap 19 old cruisers, some of which, like the Rochester and the Olympia, were launched as long ago as 1891, and replace them with 15 new 10,000 ton cruisers.

After this has been carried out, the comparative strength of the cruisers of the two powers would be as follows:

Great Britain: 6 London and Dorset types, 10,000 tons each; 7 Kent types, 10,000 tons each; 4 Hawkins types, 9,800 tons each; 3 York types, 8,400 types each; 2 Emerald types, 7,500 tons each; 8 "D" types, 4,700 tons each; 10 Cares types and 3 Caledon types, 4,000 tons each and 2 Centaur types, 3,700 tons each.

United States: 15 new cruisers, 10,000 tons each; 6 Augusta types, 10,000 tons each; 2 Pensacola types, 10,000 tons each; 3 Salem types, 2,750 tons each; 10 Omaha types, 7,500 tons each.

These are the figures the admiralty experts are playing with now and they do not hide the uneasiness over the fact that if this program is adhered to Great Britain will still maintain a slight superiority in the number of vessels, but the United States has the preponderance of tonnage.

Judge Refuses Writs for Three Robbery Suspects

Writs of habeas corpus for three robbery suspects were denied yesterday by Judge Harry B. Miller in the Criminal court because the police have not had sufficient time to examine the men, who are believed by the police to be responsible for the holdup last Friday of the La Salle cafeteria, 324 North Michigan avenue. The suspects are George Grauer, Robert Arnold and Edward Weldon. The judge said he would give the police until this evening to show the suspects up to robbery victims.

MESSENGER IS ROBBED.

An armed bandit yesterday held up a messenger for the Metropolitan Life Insurance company at the entrance to the Howard Trust and Savings bank, 1550 Howard street, and escaped with $3,530 in currency and checks.

SNOOK MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL FLAYS PRAYER

Columbus, O., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—The bringing of Dr. James Snook to trial with such "unwarranted rapidity," when the populace was aroused to hostility, "passion and prejudice on the part of the trial judge," and "ineffectiveness of the sequestering of the jurors in the case," were among irregularities cited by the former university professor's attorneys in a motion for a new trial, filed today.

"The brutal antics" of John J. Chester Jr., prosecuting attorney, in reconstructing the crime in which Theora K. Hix, Ohio State university medical student, was murdered and the character of the statements made by the prosecutor in his closing appeal to the jury were cited in the motion.

Snook was found guilty and sentenced to death in 28 minutes by a jury.

The part of Chester's argument alluded to was:

"May you return a verdict that tell the parents of every child that Columbus is a safe place, that the university will be safe, that students will not meet any dirty dogs."

Exception to the action of the jurors in offering prayer upon their retirement to the jury room, "in substitution for deliberation on the merits of the case," also was taken.

The motion will be heard by Judge Henry L. Scarlett on Monday. Sentence will be passed in the event that the motion for a new trial is overruled and Dr. Snook immediately will be transferred to "death row" at the Ohio penitentiary.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS INVADE MILWAUKEE FOR SUPREME MEETING

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Knights of Columbus from every state in the union and from Mexico, Canada, Cuba, and Porto Rico began invading Milwaukee today for the annual supreme convention of the order here next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Although there will be preliminary events tomorrow and Monday, the official opening feature of the convention will be a pontifical high mass in the municipal Auditorium on Tuesday at 10 a. m., with the Rt. Rev. Paul P. Rhode, bishop of Green Bay, as the celebrant. A sermon will be given by the Most Rev. Henry J. O'Leary, archbishop of Edmonton, Alta., Canada. Following the mass an address of welcome is to be given by Gov. Walter J. Kohler.

The convention will close with a Holy Name rally in the Marquette university stadium, Thursday night, with 30,000 expected to attend. The address will be given by Quinn O'Brien, Chicago attorney and noted Catholic orator.

SEIZE L STATION ROBBER.

Finlay Hutton, 49 years old, 6018 Princeton avenue, a ticket agent at the 31st street elevated station, was slugged and robbed of $14 and a watch early yesterday. The loot was recovered a short time after from Joe Curtis, 5816 Calumet avenue, a Negro, who was arrested and identified as the robber.

FIND BODY OF HUNTER IN ICE AFTER 83 YEARS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

INNSBRUCK, Austria, Aug. 17.—Eighty-three years ago Norbert Mattersberger, 32, husband of Magda, and father of Franz Otto, failed to return to his cottage in the village of Kals one day from the woods, where he won his living hunting game. A rescue party from the village decided he had been caught in an avalanche of ice.

Today Mattersberger came home just as he left it that day in 1846. The glacier had given up its prey. Although clean shaven when he left he had a two inch beard when a party of hunters found him on the edge of the glacier. The body, clothes, and weapons were in a perfect state of preservation.

Bank Clerk and $40,000 Securities Are Missing

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Wilson B. Smith, 25, discount clerk of the Oakland Savings Trust company, and negotiable securities valued at $40,000, were reported missing today. Charles B. Aylesworth, president of the bank, said the securities were bonds with coupons payable to the bearer. Smith left the bank Thursday evening. His wife said he did not get home that night and that she has no trace of him. Yesterday an investigation was begun. Aylesworth said the bank is protected amply against loss.

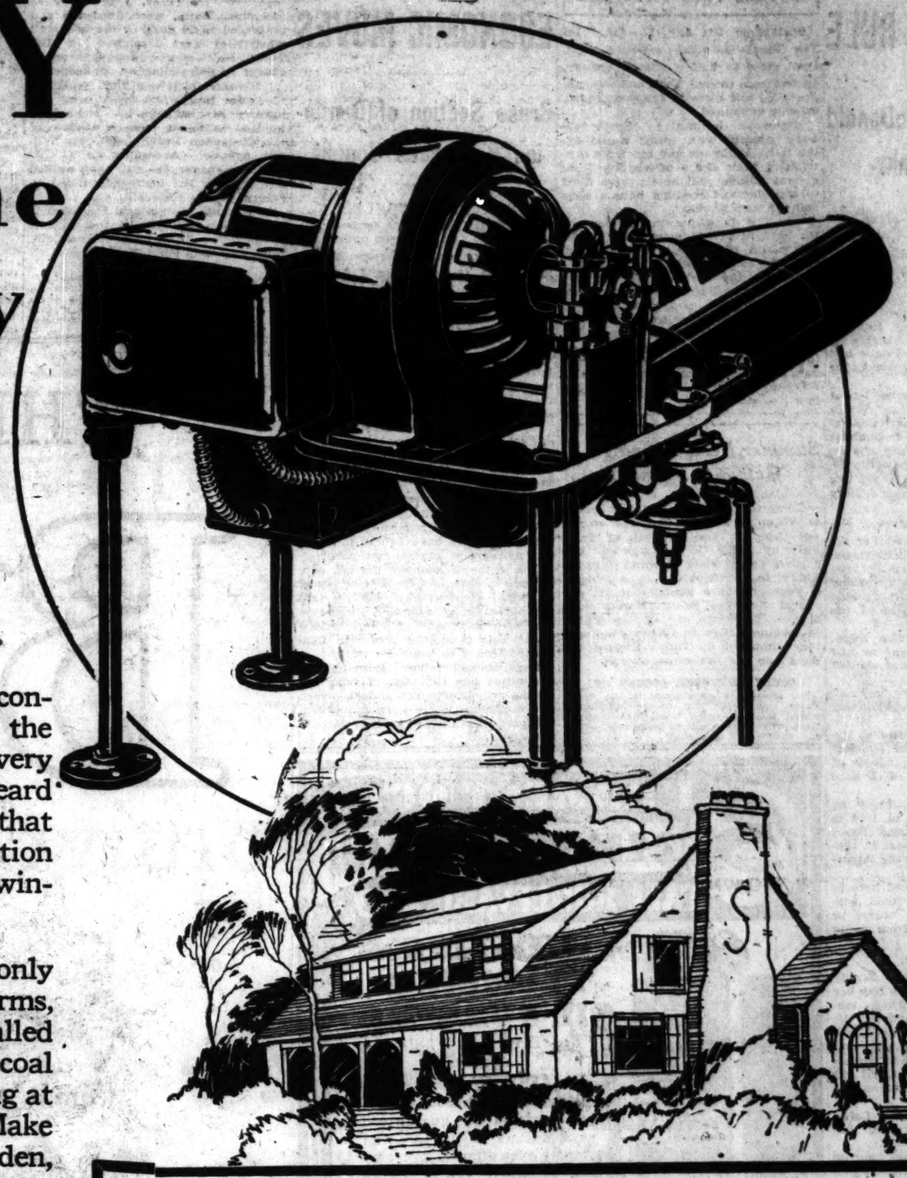
A SIX IN THE PRICE RANGE OF THE FOUR

The MORRISSEY can heat your home for $50 less yearly

Let These Fuel Economies Pay Part of Your Taxes



Two features explain how the remarkably quiet MORRISSEY performs its annual $50.00 savings:

1. The MORRISSEY burns an inexpensive grade of fuel, costing much less than fuel required for most other burners selling in the same price range.

The MORRISSEY, an oil burner selling under $400.00 is designed to use the 5¼c fuel. Let this difference pay part of your taxes.

2. The MORRISSEY perfected combustion principle gives utmost heat per gallon of fuel.

These are features found only in oil burners costing considerably more. They explain why THE MORRISSEY gives you everything that the highest priced oil burners on the market can offer in economy of operation—at a price that is the sensation of the industry.

Whether your heating plant is steam, furnace, hot water or vapor, you'll get the same excellent results with a MORRISSEY. Satisfactory installation is GUARANTEED. The MORRISSEY is simple and inexpensive to install. All work done under the supervision of a factory-trained engineer. Sound in design (so amazingly simple that there is only ONE moving element) and constructed of the finest materials with watch-like precision, it is as sure and quiet as a painted boat on a painted sea. The time-saving convenience and comfort features of the MORRISSEY are seen and felt in every room of the house, but it is never heard—even after the many years of use that are built into its sturdy construction have become memories of happy winter days.

For a small down payment and only $16.50 a month on convenient terms, you can have a MORRISSEY installed in your home. Do away with the coal pile and coal shovel, with janitoring at all hours of the day and night. Make your basement livable, with a den, workshop or children's playroom supplanting the old coal bin. The MORRISSEY provides perfect automatic control of temperature and is absolutely safe—fully guaranteed and is listed as standard equipment by Board of Fire Underwriters.

The last word in home-heat is oil heat—and the last word in oil heat is The MORRISSEY. Because it burns inexpensive grades of fuel, because it provides perfect combustion and complete firing, it costs $50 less a year to heat your home. Because it is simple and durably constructed, it is quiet, quiet, QUIET.

Let the Morrissey free you from heating cares—and do it economically. Get the facts.

BABIES BEFORE POLITICIANS, IS ISHBEL'S RULE

Daughter of MacDonald Tells Philosophy.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—[U. P.]—A serious young woman of 26 who would rather entertain babies than politicians is for the second time in her life one of the world's most important hostesses.

Ishbel MacDonald, dark eyed daughter of Britain's premier, J. Ramsay MacDonald, is again the mistress of No. 10 Downing street, where she had ruled the social life of the last Labor régime in 1924.

Just as no one knew whether Ishbel was glad to leave the English "White House" after the Labor party's downfall, no one knows how she feels about her return. Her friends say she no longer hopes to obtain a university degree, but they believe she would like to devote all her time to social welfare work.

Favorite of Queen Mary.

When, not yet 21, she left her domestic science course at King's college in 1924 to take charge of the prime minister's household society matrons held their thumbs but Ishbel made a great social success of the Labor administration.

Her reply to a woman who volunteered to help choose her gowns and give advice on court behavior showed characteristic independence.

"I have chosen my own gowns," she said, "and I think I shall know how to behave in court."

She soon became a favorite of the queen and so great was her popularity with the people that hundreds of baby girls in all parts of Britain were christened Ishbel.

A picture which alone adorned the living room of "No. 10" in 1924 is back in the same place today. It is a photograph of the garden seat in Lincoln Inn fields which bears the following inscription:

"This seat has been placed here in memory of Margaret MacDonald, who spent her life in helping others in need. She took no rest from doing good."

Like Her Mother.

Friends of the MacDonald family have said that Ishbel is much like her mother, a noted welfare worker. Ishbel has spent much time studying the problems of poverty, motherhood, and infant mortality. She chose a seat on the London county council in preference to one in parliament so that she could carry on her work among the poorer classes.

While campaigning for the Labor party, she concisely expressed her social philosophy in five points:

"I believe every mother should have the chance of bringing children into the world without impairing her own health in that natural function.

"Every family should have a decent house and healthy surroundings in which to live.

"Every child should have a good primary and secondary education.

"When large sums have been invested in developing good citizens they should be permitted to make use of their education for the benefit of themselves and their country instead of being asked to die for their country.

"I do not believe war is inevitable.

Ishbel has brown, wavy hair and a vivid, clear complexion. She plays hockey and golf, likes music but does not care for dancing. Her favorite author is George Eliot.

60,000 ATTEND FAIR AT SPRINGFIELD; ALL HOTELS ARE CROWDED

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 17.—[U. P.]—The Illinois state fair, expected to attract close to half a million visitors, opened here today. Excellent weather prevailed and close to 60,000 attended, officials estimated.

Highways leading to Springfield were jammed with traffic bound for the fair. Railroads and bus lines contributed their share of visitors from distant points. All hotels were filled to capacity and rooming houses were doing a big business.

The fair is a panoramic view of the agricultural, industrial and physical wealth of the state. The ripest corn, the richest butter, the thoroughbreds of the animal and poultry worlds; the products of the great factories and mills, and even the best Illinois babies were on display for the edification of the fair going public.

One of the early arrivals was Charles Burgess, of Wenona. Burgess has attended Illinois state fairs for forty-seven years without a miss. He is a live stock judge.

Al White, also of Park Falls, is serving a five to fifteen year sentence imposed by Judge Risjord ten days ago for the same offense.

BRITAIN TO WELD EMPIRE BY NEW ECONOMIC MOVES

Cross Section of Dominion Resources Sought.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 17.—It is understood that preliminary arrangements and discussions for next year's imperial conference to be held in London are well under way. The actual date has not yet been fixed, but it will depend chiefly on the wishes of the leading dominion statesmen.

New departures are likely to be introduced concerning economic questions affecting the empire, particularly the development of the empire's resources.

One new proposal is that the views of bankers, shippers, and industrialists on various subjects should be ascertained before meeting in conference. This course is to be followed both in England and the dominions in order that any action that the conference might decide upon regarding economic problems would have behind it a certain measure of general agreement.

One of the decisions of the last conference in 1926 was the setting up of a special committee to inquire into the operation of dominion legislation and also merchant shipping legislation. This committee meets in London on Oct. 8 to begin its work.

Regarding merchant shipping the committee has the task of reporting on the principles which should govern in the general interest the practice of shipping legislation in various parts of the empire.

JAIL 2 SISTERS FOR DEFRAUDING HOTEL BY RUSE

Georgia Johnson, 20 years old, and her sister Hilda, 18 years old, of Memphis, Tenn., were fined $25 and sentenced to 20 days in the bridewell when they were arraigned in the Town Hall court yesterday on a charge of defrauding an innkeeper.

"We thought it was fun," explained the elder girl, when asked why she lowered her baggage by means of knotted bedsheets from a window of the Clarendon Beach hotel, 821 Wilson avenue. According to G. A. White, manager, the pair then walked out through the lobby and failed to return to pay their bill.

The young women said their father in Memphis would send the amount of the fine. They lived at the hotel from Aug. 1 to Aug. 9.

PROWLER STEALS PURSE.

Without disturbing the sleeping family, a prowler early yesterday entered the home of Samuel P. Pershall, 1030 Maple avenue, Evanston, and stole a purse containing $10.

EX-PAY ROLLERS ORDERED SEIZED FOR GRAND JURY

The twenty or more former sanitary district pay rollers who have failed to respond to the subpoenas calling on them to appear before the grand jury to explain what work they performed for the salary received under the régime of former President T. J. Crowe will be arrested and forcibly taken to the state's attorney's office. First Assistant State's Attorney John E. Northup left this order with his assistants yesterday as he started on a short vacation of one week.

The inquiry probably will be temporarily halted until Northup returns. So far about 150 pay rollers have been called to the prosecutor's office and all but about 20 have appeared. The others have defied the authority of the prosecutor to issue subpoenas.

Before this branch of the inquiry is concluded some 4,000 men and women who were on the pay roll during the Crowe régime will be questioned. Later on will come the investigation into contracts.

REOPEN REALTY FRAUD HEARINGS HERE TOMORROW

Clyde I. Backus, who has charge of the Chicago office of the State Board of Registration and Education, said yesterday that the evidence thus far uncovered in the investigation of real estate frauds justifies the continuation of the inquiry and that he expects to expose illegal dealings of several real estate agents.

A number of the high pressure salesmen have been driven out of Chicago, Backus said, and their operations were then begun in the northern part of the state, principally at Waukegan and at Rockford.

The hearings will be resumed in Chicago tomorrow, Mr. Backus said, and those real estate agents who have fled will have their licenses revoked. Criminal prosecutions will follow wherever deliberate fraud is shown, he stated.

KILLED BY FALL IN HOME.

George Ferguson, 71 years old, 3619 South Keeler avenue, died in the county hospital yesterday from injuries received when he fell in his home last Wednesday.

THE New BUICK

The Greatest success in all Buick history

More people have purchased New Buicks during the past two weeks than in any similar period of any previous year

The New Buick with Body by Fisher has met with a veritable landslide of public demand. Many purchased before ever seeing the car—thousands of others placed their orders the first few days it was on display—other thousands have been taking demonstrations and then making Buick their choice.

More Buick owners have entered orders—more men and women who owned other cars have turned to Buick—more people who formerly paid from $1000 to $2000 higher for their automobiles have purchased Buicks—than ever before during a similar period in Buick's twenty-six year history.

The total demand during these two weeks is from three to five times as great as that for any other automobile priced above $1200.

Popularity so overwhelming carries an unmistakable message to every prospective motor car buyer: See the new Buick—drive it—compare it—and you'll quickly discover that it's the greatest dollar-for-dollar value in the entire quality field.

CHILDREN OF DUKE OF MANCHESTER TO GET ESTATE

Court Rules They Must Receive Money Direct.

New York, Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Supreme Court Justice Alfred Frankenthaler today decided that the full income from the 50,000 pound trust fund set up under the will of the late Dowager Duchess of Manchester for the benefit of her son, the present duke and his children, should now be paid directly to the beneficiaries by the trustees of the American estate of the Dowager Duchess.

Justice Frankenthaler, who had been asked to construe the ambiguous terms of the dowager duchess's will, held against the trustees, who contended the income from the trust fund should be paid to them for distribution.

Beneficiaries of Will.

The beneficiaries of the will named as defendants in the action brought by the general trustees are the Duke of Manchester, his wife, the former Miss Helena Zimmerman of Cincinnati; their sond and heir, Viscount Mandeville; Lady Mary Alice Montagu, Lord Edward Montagu, Lady Millicent Montagu, Lord Ponsonby, the Earl of Bessborough and Edward Lee Rowcliffe.

The Dowager Duchess of Manchester, formerly Miss Consuelo Yznaga of New York, died in 1909. Her will, a lengthy document, left most of her estate to her son, the duke, with various provisions which prevented him disposing of it.

Benefit of Children.

The 50,000 pound trust fund established under the jurisdiction of the American trustees was for the benefit of the duke's children, infants when the dowager duchess died. During their infancy the income was paid by the American trustees to the general trustees, but now that all of the children are of age, Justice Frankenthaler has decided they are to receive the income directly from the American trustees.

Park Commissioner Back Home from European Trip

Park Commissioner John Bain and Assistant Superintendent Harry Richards and Mrs. Richards were greeted by South Park board associates and friends yesterday upon their return from a three months European trip. Mr. Bain visited his mother, Mrs. Kenneth Bain, who is 94 years old, at Stornoway, Scotland. Mr. Bain assisted in the dedication of the new $200,000 municipal building in his native Scotch village.

HUNT MISSING WOMAN.

Police yesterday were asked to search for Mrs. Alma Simmons, 55 years old, 6903 South Wood street, who disappeared Thursday. She is believed to be a victim of amnesia.

Burned in Beauty Shop

MISS MARGARET HALEY.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Margaret Haley, 14 years old, 125 South Austin boulevard, was reported in a critical condition at the West Suburban hospital last night from burns received when a celluloid comb caught fire as she was having her hair waved in a beauty shop at 9 South Austin boulevard. The flames seared her head, neck and hands. Miss Agnes C. Touhy, owner of the shop, also was burned on the hands when she helped the girl beat out the flames. Defective electric wiring is believed to have ignited the comb.

CELL FOR FORMER STUDENT TRYING TO ROB A BANK

Appleton, Wis., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Thomas MacKenzie, 21, former Lawrence college student, was today sentenced to from one to three years in the Green Bay reformatory after he had plead guilty to the attempted robbery of the Black Creek bank.

After sentencing, Judge Fred Heinemann, in tears, told the boy that "I did the best I could for you," while former classmates, friends of the family and college professors crowded around to express their sympathy.

MacKenzie wept as he told the court that a Milwaukee-Antigo bootlegging combine was responsible for his downfall. He said he had made an arrangement with John Kayouett, in Milwaukee, to be a "go-between" for Kayouett and a bootlegging ring north of Antigo. He would go to Antigo and get the liquor, paying the men for it; bring it to Milwaukee and be repaid by Kayouett with a 25 per cent commission. But the last time he went to Milwaukee after he had raised $1,800 on worthless checks from friends, Kayouett was gone, he said, and a trip to Antigo revealed the bootleggers also were gone. Planning to borrow $1,800 from Shawanoo friends, Mackenzie said he was on the way to that city when he got the idea of robbing the bank. He failed and fled as the cashier fired at him.

VIRGINIA RACE TO TEST POWER OF SMITH FOES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—[Special]—Attention of national political leaders is focused on the gubernatorial battle now getting under way in Virginia. Election of John G. Pollard, Democratic nominee, will be interpreted as meaning that Virginia again is part of the solid Democratic south and that the Republicans need have little hope of winning it in the 1932 presidential contest. On the other hand, the election of Prof. William Moseley Brown, the candidate of the anti-Smith Democrats and regular Republicans, will bring new impetus to efforts of the Republican party to gain a permanent foothold in the south.

Just now the odds are believed to favor the election of Mr. Pollard. In order to defeat him, the anti-Smith Democrats must succeed in stirring up anew the religious and prohibition issues which caused Virginia, as well as other southern states, to give preference to Herbert Hoover over Alfred E. Smith. The regular Democrats refuse to believe that those issues can be kept alive on the mere facts that Pollard and other recognized party leaders supported Smith in the last election and have failed to repudiate John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee.

Cannon May Be Burden

Not only do the Democrats think that the coalition candidate is depending upon a dead issue, but they believe that he will find the backing of Bishop James Cannon Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a costly burden. Bishop Cannon's bucket shop operations, the accusation that he was a food hoarder during the war and other matters connected with his career, promise to figure as prominently in the campaign as the personalities of the candidates themselves.

Unquestionably the outcome of the election will have an influence upon the future course of those in control of the Democratic national committee. Mr. Raskob thus far has failed to indicate any intention to resign as oftentimes is customary for a campaign manager personally selected by a presidential candidate who meets defeat. Many of the party leaders are glad to have Mr. Raskob remain long enough to clear up the huge deficit left from the Smith campaign, but want him out of the way in advance of the next presidential campaign.

National Leadership Involved

Election of the coalition ticket in Virginia undoubtedly would hasten Mr. Raskob's resignation. It would be regarded as evidence that southern Democrats will refuse to give whole hearted support to their party until the Smith-Raskob element is dislodged from control.

If the regulars win it is probable that Mr. Raskob will remain as chairman of the national committee until after the Democratic convention in 1932 and that he then will step down in favor of the choice of the party candidate.

Election of Mr. Pollard is likely to mean that the Republicans will not make a serious attempt to elect a United States senator in Virginia next year when Senator Carter Glass [Dem.] comes up for reelection. Senator Glass, although an active dry, supported Smith last year, thus incurring the enmity of Bishop Cannon, and making it certain that a fight will be made against him in 1930 if the coalition shows sufficient strength in the gubernatorial fight.

Outcome Hard to Forecast.

In the 1928 election Hoover received 164,609 votes in Virginia while Smith's total was 140,146. in 1924 John W. Davis, the Democratic presidential candidate, received 139,797 votes, as against 73,359 for President Coolidge, and 10,379 for Robert M. La Follette, the third party candidate. The 1928 election brought out thousands of Virginians who do not ordinarily bother to vote, there usually being no doubt as to the outcome. This situation makes it difficult to forecast what will happen this fall if the voters become thoroughly aroused over the contest for governor.

Republican leaders generally have greater confidence of retaining other southern states than Virginia. North Carolina, Florida, Texas and Tennessee also were carried by Hoover. North Carolina, for years, has been considered debatable territory and Republicans usually have made an active campaign there. Florida also has been steadily increasing its Republican totals and showing greater promise for the party.

In North Carolina Hoover received 348,923 votes and Smith 236,227, a plurality of 62,696. The 1924 election showed a total of 234,270 for Davis and 191,753 for Coolidge.

Hoover carried Florida with a total of 144,168 votes, while Smith received 101,764. In 1924 the Davis total was 62,083 and the Coolidge total 30,833.

Texas cast 372,324 votes for Hoover and 345,501 for Smith, while in 1924, this state had 483,586 votes for Davis and 130,023 for Coolidge.

In Tennessee there were 195,358 votes for Hoover and 157,334 for Smith; Davis, in 1924, received 158,537 votes, while Coolidge received 130,882.

The Landaulet Sedan
Body by Fisher

Canvass the whole range of the low-priced sixes—and you will find nothing anywhere to compare with the value offered by the Pontiac Big Six. It is so definitely superior to everything else in its field that thousands of motorists have placed their orders after the most thorough inspection. For Pontiac looks like a big car—and that is what it actually is. Its smart new bodies by Fisher, in a variety of colors, suggest the power—the speed—the dependability—the luxurious comfort that Pontiac so generously provides. It offers each of these qualities with that lavishness you associate only with expensive automobiles. Big car qualities—every one—and contributed by such features as those you see listed below. Come in for a demonstration. A few moments on the road in a Pontiac Big Six will convince you that it presents the greatest combination of big car features ever offered at or near $745.

1 A 200-cubic-inch L-head engine yielding 60 horsepower at 3000 r. p. m.

2 The Harmonic Balancer which smooths out torsional crankshaft vibration at all speeds and lengthens engine life.

3 The G-M-R cylinder head which increases efficiency of combustion and reduces spark knock and thumping to the minimum, using ordinary gasoline.

4 The cross-flow radiator—an exclusive Oakland development—which assures efficient engine cooling all the year 'round, and increases smooth performance.

5 Automatic temperature control with water pump to assure positive water circulation and to eliminate need for radiator shutters.

6 A sturdy, 53-pound, short-stroke crankshaft—fully counter-weighted and perfectly balanced to reduce bearing pressure and prolong the life of the engine.

8 A 1¼ inch carburetor—unusually large for a car of Pontiac's price—providing ample gas supply for maximum power at all engine speeds.

9 Gasoline pump—to assure positive fuel feed under all conditions and prevent starving on long hills and hard pulls.

10 Special expansion type piston pins—largest in any car in this field—which assure close fit over a longer period of time.

12 Crankcase ventilation of pressure-vacuum design, with separate air cleaner—to prevent water vapor from diluting motor oil.

13 Two completely independent braking systems providing an extra measure of driving safety seldom found on any but high-priced cars.

14 Four-wheel, internal-expanding, self-energizing service brakes—silent, protected against rain and dirt—operating at top efficiency in any weather, and requiring minimum attention.

15 An emergency brake operating on the transmission, entirely independent of the service brakes, and complying with the laws of all states.

16 Specially moulded, non-squeak brake linings which often serve for more than 30,000 miles without replacement.

17 Specially designed bodies by Fisher of composite, high quality hardwood and heavy gauge steel construction—free from squeaks and rattles—weathertight—rugged and durable—with wide, comfortable, deeply upholstered seats and ample leg room and head room.

19 A chromium-plated radiator shell of distinctive design, 34½ inches high.

21 Specially designed interior fittings by Ternstedt.

22 Fisher VV type windshield—easily regulated by driver and secure in any position.

23 Driver's seat, easily adjustable even while car is in motion, and affording maximum driving comfort.

24 Semi-coincidental ignition and transmission lock. Key can be removed only when in "locked" position.

25 Instruments, including gasoline gauge, individually mounted on the dash in raised ebony-finish panel, lighted by two hooded lamps with separate switch.

26 Foot-controlled, depressible-beam headlights for maximum night driving safety and ease of control.

Even this does not cover the entire list of Pontiac's big car features. Dozens of important additional items all contribute their share to your motoring satisfaction. And all combine to make the Pontiac Big Six the greatest value in its field.

Pontiac Big Six, $745 to $895, f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Bumpers, spring covers and Lovejoy shock absorbers regular equipment at slight extra cost. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

LEVIES ON SUGAR POINT TO 'SWEET' SENATE BATTLE

Tariff Makers' Tilt Forecasts Fight.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Rumbles of the battle over sugar tariffs to be fought when the senate reconvenes on September 4, were heard today when Republican members of the senate finance committee were subjected to a cross fire criticism for proposing yesterday to boost the rates on sugar.

The senate will reassemble Monday, but only long enough to adjourn. Three day recesses will be taken until Sept. 4, according to previous agreement.

Radical Republican and Democratic senators joined in protesting that the proposed $2.75 per 100 pounds impost on full duty or world market sugar, and $2.20 per 100 pounds on Cuban sugar are far too high, while disappointed domestic sugar producers complained they were low and reiterated that to save their industry from destruction they would continue to fight for the $3 on full duty and $2.40 on Cuban sugar fixed in the house bill.

Cuban Refiners Protest.

Cuban sugar refiners added their voice to the chorus of disapproval, asserting the rates advocated by the finance committee Republicans would effectually stifle their industry which, they insisted, was entitled to consideration because of substantial American interests in the refineries.

Experts calculated that in addition to increasing the prevailing tariff on raw sugar from Cuba by 44 cents per 100 pounds and by 55 cents on sugar from other countries, the finance committee Republicans had increased the duty on refined sugar from other countries by 59 cents per 100 pounds and that on refined sugar from Cuba by 44 cents.

Watson Defends New Rate.

Senator James E. Watson, [Rep., Ind.], the senate majority leader, defended the new rate on Cuban refined sugar as lower than those imposed by 31 other countries. In his statement, however, the Indiana senator quoted the prevailing United States rate of $1.91 per 100 pounds against Cuban refined sugar instead of the $2.38 rate which the finance committee Republicans approved yesterday.

"All the farm organizations of the country," declared Senator Watson, "demanded a much higher rate than that proposed by the finance committee, largely because they desire to diversify the products produced by American farmers, and at the same time develop this industry to such a state that the American supply will be equal to the American demand."

May Put Rate at $2.98.

In the absence of official figures which are not to be made public until Tuesday morning when the rewritten house bill is to be given to the Democratic members of the finance committee, experts asserted the rates on refined sugar probably would be $2.98 per 100 pounds on full duty sugar and $2.38 on Cuban sugar, as against $3.50 and $2.80, respectively, proposed in the house bill and $2.39 and $1.91, respectively, the prevailing rates.

Twenty-nine other countries, according to Senator Watson's table, impose higher duties on Cuban refined sugar—ranging downward from $17.60 per 100 pounds in Brazil—than the rate proposed by the finance committee Republicans. Two countries, Italy and Austria, fix smaller duties, the senator's statement indicated.

"All the rates imposed by these countries are higher than those proposed in the tariff bill just completed by the Republican members of the finance committee, showing that those nations are determined to produce this product instead of purchasing it abroad," said the senator.

"Sugar producers in the United States," he continued, "never have had an opportunity to develop their products to the fullest extent. After the Spanish-American war, our government assumed such relations with the Philippines, Hawaiian islands, Porto Rico, and Cuba that we were compelled to admit the products of the first three without duty and of the last with 20 per cent reduction in our tariff rates.

"This has made impossible full development of the sugar industry though it is constantly asserted that if it be properly protected it will be brought to such a state of cultivation within a short time that the home supply will almost, if not entirely equal home demand, counting, of course, imports from the Hawaiian islands, the Philippines and Porto Rico, which must continue to come in free."

"CHICAGO BUYS OUR POWER," LONDON WAILS

U. S. Investments May Be Aired in Parliament.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Blazing headlines, "Chicago Buys Up Our Electricity," "Alarm Over American Money Invasion," screech across the London Daily News.

Public authorities in the areas chiefly affected, it is stated, are alarmed over the American invasion of British investments, and it is understood that steps are being taken to bring the question before parliament.

The Daily News, as well as other London morning papers, play up the protest letter from Mayor Morris of Smethwick, objecting strongly to foreign capital being used to foster local industrial enterprises. The mayor in his letter cites the case of the recent sale of the Shropshire, Worcestershire and Staffordshire Electric Power company to a trust company acting in behalf of Chicago interests.

The Shropshire company has the right of electricity supply over a large part of the midlands, extending 1,800 square miles in six counties and embracing the important industrial towns of Smethwick, Dudley, Oldbury, Kidderminster, and Raditch. The company after the war obtained a loan of £750,000 [about $3,637,500], guaranteed by the British treasury under the trades facilities act, and built and equipped a great superpower station on the banks of the Severn river.

"Suddenly it became known," states Mayor Morris, "that the Utilities Power and Light corporation of Chicago, acting through Greater London and Counties Trust, Limited, had offered to purchase the whole of the ordinary shares of the company at a price of 2½ pounds for one pound share [about $12.12 for a share worth about $4.85], a figure largely in excess of their intrinsic value." Mayor Morris points out that the British Electric Traction company, which is a parent company of and a large shareholder in the Shropshire company, made nearly 700,000 pounds [about $3,395,000] on the deal although they are holding only about one-third interest.

Assails Chicago Financiers.

"It will thus be seen," says Mayor Morris, "what an enormous sum Chicago financiers have been willing to pay to gain control of this important public utility company, whose undertaking in a large part has been established by British government credit. The acquisitive zeal of the American group has, however, extended far beyond the borders of Shropshire, Worcestershire and Staffordshire and has resulted in their obtaining control through the Greater London trust of many electric supply undertakings throughout south and west England, the owners of which could hardly have been induced to sell out except on terms they deemed decidedly advantageous."

Then Mayor Morris reveals the object of all this activity. "The British public will shortly be invited to subscribe to the capital of the new company to take over all electrical undertaking acquired by the Greater London and Counties trust. Since American financiers do not speculate to the extent of millions in British industrial securities without the hope of reward, provision will surely be made in some form or other for an adequate sum by way of promoters' profits."

52 VILLAGES OF RURAL ENGLAND GET ELECTRICITY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Rural England will have the benefits of electricity if an experiment about to be tried in Bedfordshire proves popular. Fifty-two villages in the neighborhood of Bedford, which have hitherto struggled along with primitive lighting arrangements, will receive an electrical supply, with the government backing the corporation generating the current against a loss for the first 10 years.

If the plan is successful, other agricultural areas will benefit later. Two hundred square miles are covered by the proposed scheme. One hundred and thirty-five miles of overhead wiring is projected, with underground conduits in the villages. There is hope that a sufficient demand will make it possible to supply current at two cents per kilowatt hour.

Thus far England has been behind many continental countries in the use of electric current. Germany is a much bigger user and even France is more generally supplied, while the industrial districts of northern Italy are almost as well served as the United States.

If Several Cabs Were Lined Up On Your Desk

AND you analyzed their offerings just as you analyze any other business proposition, Checker would like you to weigh these facts:

We solicit your business on the comfort count first. (All Checker Taxicabs are big, luxurious, seven passenger sedans and limousines).

Next, Checker offers the lowest labor turn-over, in Chicago. (Checker stockholder-drivers rarely change. They are prospering young business men. Why should they? And the lower the labor turn-over, the better the product. Is that not a truism of business?)

Again, Checker offers you a personal service not matched. (No paid employee can take the interest in your welfare and comfort that the 3,000 Checker stockholder-drivers have to take. It's their bread and butter.)

These elements all combining in a service of safety, courtesy, intelligence and know-how.

Now, sir particularly, and madam if you have read thus far—there are many hundreds of good cabs in Chicago. But please test, by 'phone and ride, every statement just made. We believe you will then become a Checker convert.

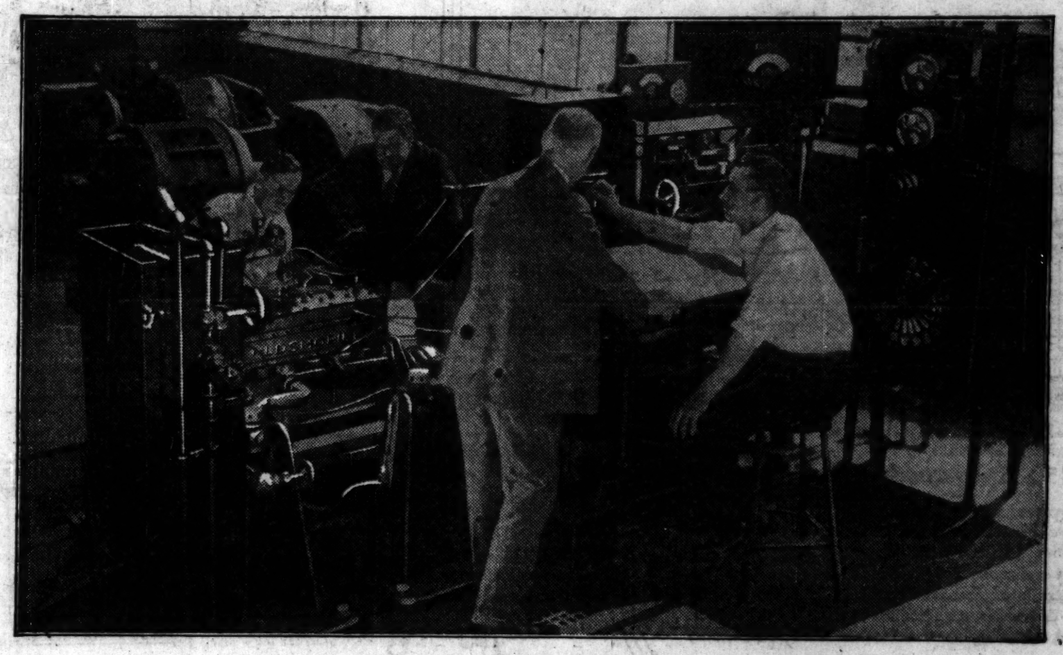
First Comes Sound, Progressive Engineering.



IN BUILDING a motor car, everything begins with engineering. No amount of pains in the selection of materials, no amount of skill in workmanship, no amount of care in inspection will take the place of sound, progressive design.

Oldsmobile recognizes this fundamental truth. And in order that its engineering may be of the finest, Oldsmobile has brought together a staff of talented and experienced men—and placed at their disposal every aid to modern engineering.

The creative thinking which makes Oldsmobile a car that does all things well is the product of a group which is not dominated by individual opinion. Any and every idea is given full consideration, so that the best may be selected through a long process of testing, proving, and comparing of results. Changes in Oldsmobile design are always made for the sake of progress—never for the sake of change alone.

On the Oldsmobile staff are experts in every branch of automotive engineering—men who have demonstrated creative ability along many lines. They are keenly sensitive to the requirements of the modern motorist. Their greatest joy lies in accomplishment. Their highest ambition is to contribute some new advancement to Oldsmobile and, through Oldsmobile, to the motoring public

At the command of these men are all the vast resources of Oldsmobile and General Motors. They work in their own complete and fully-equipped engineering and research laboratories, drawing upon the experience of General Motors Research Laboratories and availing themselves of the skill of Fisher artist-engineers. And day in and day out, Oldsmobile engineers prove their products by the facts developed in gruelling tests on the great General Motors Proving Ground.

The ever-increasing success of Oldsmobile is evidence of the ability of these men. Brilliant engineering is responsible for Oldsmobile's efficiency and dependability—for its spirited performance and restful comfort—and for the low price at which these fine car qualities are available.

Oldsmobile is dedicated to quality manufacture, to honest advertising and selling, and to a broad, sincere service policy. But first of all, and above everything, Oldsmobile believes in sound, progressive engineering as the foundation on which to build.

IT LOOKS AS IF SKEET WON'T GET THAT VACATION

Camp Algonquin's Funds Are Just About Gone.

It's tough enough when a fellow who sells papers early and late has to give up a regular vacation, but it's tougher still when his wornout mother can't go to a summer camp for a rest because the fund hasn't any more money.

"Skeet"—they call him that because he's 13 years old and looks only 7—has been a man of business down on Halsted for five years now. Other boys on the corner spend their pennies, but not "Skeet." He takes his home and helps buy shoes for his baby sister. The boy is the man of the house, he would tell you. He has been head of the family ever since his dad left the two room home to his family of six.

Funds Just About Gone.

There are lots of families whose circumstances are just as discouraging as Skeet's. They've been counting on a vacation at Camp Algonquin since the United Charities started receiving applications last spring. They're on the schedule, too, to visit camp, but there may be a very good reason why they won't. The Algonquin fund is on its last legs, so to speak.

Of the $4,893.51 total which today's receipts show, $1,000 was given to the camp specifically for a boat house. That has been built, and the boats are safe from the marauder who stole a canoe last month. The $3,800 left has been turned over to the camp to pay a few of the necessary expenses of feeding a daily crowd of 500 hungry mothers and children from Chicago's tenements. It took more than $20,000 to keep Camp Algonquin open last summer. The camp depends upon TRIBUNE readers for half that amount. And in as much as less than half of THE TRIBUNE'S quota has been raised so far this season, it is evident that the camp is facing the necessity of disappointing many of its scheduled guests as well as not knowing where the money for the season's camp maintenance is coming from.

Other Children Help.

The more fortunate children have worked hard all summer even while on their vacations, earning money for camp through their benefits. A check for $8.20 came from Gonring's Resort, Big Cedar lake, West Bend, Wis., where three little girls put on a show in the hotel dining room. They were Lolita Epstein, Corrine Grawoig, and Joyce Jaffe.

Up at Blue Lake, Minocqua, Wis., at the summer home of Mrs. F. N. Everhard, Catherine Everhard, the ringmaster; Helen Everhard, trapeze artist; Frederick Everhard Jr., clown; Elizabeth Buchheit, riding artist; Hempstead Shaw, and Philip Henze, clowns, all of Park Ridge, Ill., put on a circus earning $6.55. Doris Edelmann, 8 years old, 500 Melrose street, sent $2 she made by selling lemonade and giving a show.

These gifts arrived yesterday for both TRIBUNE funds:

CO-OPERATION IN FLOOD CONTROL WORK REQUIRED

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 17—[U.P.]—The state must cooperate with the federal government in the expenditure of $1,000,000 appropriated for flood control work in the Illinois river valley by the last legislature, the attorney general ruled today. The opinion was asked by W. P. Mullvihill, supervisor of the Illinois waterway commission.

"In view of the federal legislation and the clear language of the provisions of the state law, I am of the opinion that your department is not authorized to expend any portion of the appropriation without the cooperation of at least one of the public agencies mentioned in the act," Mulvihill was informed.

Relating to flood control work below Beardstown, it was held that the state must enter into a cooperative agreement with some federal agency before it can proceed. But should a federal agency refuse to enter into a cooperation agreement for the prosecution of the levee work below Beardstown, then the state may proceed on its own account and pay the costs out of its appropriation.

Jeweler Sues Accusers in $30,000 Fraud Case

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 17.—Charging false arrest, Ottomar Logemann, a jeweler, has filed suit for $100,000 damages against Kurtis R. Froedtert, president of the Froedtert Grain and Malting company and a member of the city land commission, and his mother, Mrs. Laura Froedtert. The suit is the outgrowth of warrants which the Froedterts had served on Logemann on a charge of intent to defraud in the sale of jewelry valued at $30,000.

Kills Self as Husband Leaves Her Alone Few Hrs.

Robinson, Ill., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Because her husband left her alone for a few hours, Mrs. Fritz Berry, 55, shot herself through the head here today, dying from the wound four and a half hours later without regaining consciousness. Testimony at the inquest indicated that Mrs. Berry had been suffering from a nervous depression occasioned by ill health for a year. The coroner's verdict being "suicide from a gun shot wound."

SIMPSON GIVES ENGLAND A NEW IDEA OF CHICAGO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 17.—James Simpson, chairman of Marshall Field & Co., did his best in an interview with the Daily Express to dispel some of the hazy English notions of Chicago, but Lord Beaverbrook's newspaper isn't so sure. "When we think of Chicago, we think of Big Bill Thompson, underworld wars, machine guns, and armed police everywhere, etc.," admits the Express. "But now meet James Simpson, Chicago business man, who makes us guess again."

Here is what Mr. Simpson said: "I am president of the Chicago Plan commission and we aim to do the job better than any one in the world. We are making beautiful highways from the center of the city. We are sucking sand from the lake bed and making new land. We have many miles of boulevards constructed, and in a few years we aim to have many more, with more parks, tennis courts, and pleasure grounds.

"In 1933 we shall celebrate the century's progress. All countries are invited to exhibit examples of progress—in aviation, transportation, decoration, and art. We hope the greatest exhibition of all will be the city of Chicago. Englishmen who have been to New York think they know America. They don't know that the heart of America beats in the middle west."

All of which leaves the London journal quite breathless and perturbed, it admits.

Ask Permanent Michigan Receiver for Greenfield

J. B. Greenfield, president of the brokerage concern of J. B. Greenfield & Co., of Detroit and Chicago, under indictment on charges of defrauding customers of $750,000, was allowed until Nov. 10 to show cause why a permanent receiver should not be appointed to take charge of the company's affairs in Michigan by Circuit Judge L. W. Carr of Ingham county, Michigan, yesterday. The United States Trust company of Detroit has been named temporary receiver during the Michigan investigation of the company's books.

New Albany, Ind., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Drink a little if you like it, keep the mind free from worry, never rush, eat wholesome food, and get plenty of fresh air and sunshine."

That was the prescription given here today by Frank Rodrick, former globe trotter, now a truck gardener along the Dixie highway, who today observed his 102d birthday.

Rodrick was born at San Diego, Cal., Aug. 16, 1827. He recalls dates and details of his visits to various countries. He was taken to Cuba when 8 years old by his father, Thomas Rodrick, of Spanish lineage. When 13 Rodrick and a brother went to South America. He joined the French army and served in the Crimean war.

Rodrick took part in the gold rush to California in 1849. After a year's work with two companions, he said each man's share was $28,000. He invested in a schooner for the Pacific coast trade, but the vessel was lost in a storm and Roderick and the ship's cook were the only persons in a crew of fifteen who escaped.

Civil War Hero Is 99.

La Salle, Ill., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—John Cooper, civil war veteran, today celebrated his 99th birthday anniversary at his home in Rutland. Hundreds of friends and neighbors called at his farmhouse to extend congratulations. On Monday the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Women's Relief corps, and other La Salle county organizations will join in a formal celebration at the Cooper home.

$118,000 Bank Bandit and Slayer Confesses

San Andreas, Cal., Aug. 17.—[U. P.]—Ending a search of more than a year, Herbert L. Royston was arrested yesterday on charges of murdering three bank officials in Lamar, Col., after robbing the bank there of $118,000, with the aid of accomplices. Clarence Morrow, chief of the California bureau of criminal identification, said Royston had confessed and had admitted slaying a physician who treated him for a bullet wound as he fled from the scene of the crime in February, 1928.

U. S. HEALTH BAN REDUCES CHINESE IN PHILIPPINES

MANILA, Aug. 17.—(AP)—The new meningitis quarantine order of the United States public health service reduces the entry of Chinese into the Philippines, it was disclosed here today. It likewise reduces the entry of the Filipinos into the mainland of United States and Hawaii.

The new order also prohibits embarkation for the Philippines from Amoy, from which port have come 90 per cent of the Chinese now in these islands. Chinese in Amoy, wishing to come here, must go to Hongkong or Shanghai to embark.

United States public health service representatives here are attempting to have the order changed in so far as it affects embarkation from Amoy for the Philippines, but thus far have not been successful.

IDENTIFY TWO AS ROBBERS.

Tony Gieto, 42 years old, 631 Liberty street, and John Johnson, a Negro, were identified yesterday as the men who held up a hot dog stand at Torrence avenue and 95th street last week.

QUALITY in shoes begins with the character and conception of those who make them—but only begins. Good style, likewise, becomes a good shoe only through good shoemaking.

International quality goes far deeper than the smartness of International style. To every shoe is brought the most careful selection of materials. Each shoe is fashioned and built to deliver service as unmistakably as it reflects grace. There is no substitution for quality in any shoe, regardless of price—they must stand use as effectively as they stand display.

It is this ideal of what a good shoe should represent that has brought to the International Shoe Company the greatest patronage in the world of shoes. Fifty million pairs—one out of every seven produced by the entire industry—are bought each year by people who have found that these shoes deliver a degree of quality above that which might be expected for the price paid.

To put reality into these standards of value, each of International's 43 great shoe factories is a specialty plant, concentrating on just one type of men's, women's or children's shoes—and that alone.

The workers in each plant are themselves specialists, trained for years to better the single operation that is their contribution to final quality.

But that isn't all. Fourteen great tanneries are as highly specialized as the shoe plants, each concentrating on just one kind of leather. Special units produce its own lining fabrics, rubber heels and soles, chemicals, dyes and finishes.

Fifty-nine auxiliary plants extend this policy to the production of every necessary material—even to the boxes which hold the shoes and the cases in which they are shipped.

Through this principle of specialization, International assures the wearers of its shoes consistently better materials and workmanship.

By producing these materials within its own plants, without the added costs of open-market purchasing, it passes on to the nation a saving in its shoe bill amounting to millions of dollars a year.

And through this assurance of the quality that lies within, International Shoes keep faith with the promise made you by their outward beauty.

TO PROVIDE adequate facilities for its tremendous production, to assure uniformity in its high standards of quality, and to effect the economies that lower the price you pay, the International Shoe Company owns and operates—

14 Tanneries, each specializing in one particular type of leather, producing 25,000 sides and skins a day.

1 Rubber Heel and Sole Plant, producing 125,000 pairs of heels and 30,000 pairs of soles a day.

1 Cotton Mill, to produce 7,000,000 yards of lining fabric a year.

59 Auxiliary Plants, producing welting, dyes, chemicals, shoe boxes, shipping cartons, trunks, gloves, etc., to the value of more than $30,000,000 a year if purchased from outside sources.

INTERNATIONAL SHOES are marketed under the six marks of quality which are shown below. Together they comprise more than 1,000 styles of footwear for men, women, children and infants. They are sold by more than 70,000 leading merchants, distributed throughout every state in the Union. Regardless of the brand you select, the style you prefer or the price you pay, International Shoes represent the greatest shoe value you can buy.

SYDNEY WINS JUVENILE STAKE AT HAWTHORNE

Try Too Second in $10,000 Event.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Temperamental Sydney won the Chicago juvenile turf championship at Hawthorne yesterday. Try Too was second and Gallant Knight third.

Sydney didn't jump over a single fence or run away before the start, and came from far back to conquer the most stylish band of juveniles that has faced the barrier in Chicago this year.

A crowd of 26,000, the largest that has visited Hawthorne this season, watched the son of Craigangower-Rima get up in time to win by a length and a half from Try Too. Gallant Knight, from the Audley farm stable of Virginia, finished with a rush, but was not even threatening Sydney's lead at the windup.

It was a surprise triumph for the colt, owned by former Senator Johnson N. Camden of Kentucky. Sydney ran in the silks of Dan E. Stewart, trainer for the Kentucky capitalist, and was ridden by Jockey J. Parmelee, who is in the habit of taking down rich stake events. He rode Golden Prince in the last Coffroth handicap.

Sydney was so lowly regarded that he was grouped in the field betting, and paid $26.06 to win, $8.82 to place, and $4.92 to show. Try Too paid $8.02 to place and $5.58 to show, and Gallant Knight was at $8.46 to show. Sydney ran the six furlongs in 1:12.

Wears Down Leaders.

When the start came, after a delay of eight minutes at the post, the favorite, Capture, from the Rancocas stable, dashed into the lead. She was closely followed by Morsel, with Try Too third. Sydney was running far back in eighth place in the field of sixteen.

Capture continued to make the pace to the head of the stretch, where Morsel flew to the front under McCrossen's hard ride. Try Too also passed Capture, and Sydney was coming like an express train in fifth place.

Midway in the stretch Try Too had reached the lead, but it was just for an instant. Jockey Parmelee brought Sydney up on the extreme outside, wore down one after another of the leaders, and a sixteenth out was safely in first place. He went on away from there home. Try Too held the others safe and saved second money. Gallant Knight, lucky to find racing room, moved into third place.

Sydney's victory was worth $10,250 to Owner Camden. He had a pull of 18 pounds in the weights over Try Too.

It was the greatest day of the year for the Camden horses, which were running in his trainer's silks. Roscoe Goose saddled two of them, Symphorosa and Flattery, and both won by small margins.

Symphorosa Wins by a Neck.

Symphorosa, ridden by R. Morrison, hugged the rail and gained enough ground to get up in time to beat Suitor by a neck, with Brown Brutus third. Uptime was the short priced favorite, but was outrun most of the way, and wound up staggering, far back of the leaders.

Flattery was the second horse which Mr. Goose saddled for former Senator Camden. She won just by an eyelash from Brown Flash, and Tamina was third. Flattery, ridden by Paul Neal, was in front all the way, but had to be ridden out to gain her narrow decision.

Flattery ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:45, and, despite her heavy backing, paid $6.58 to win, $4.76 to place, and $3.54 to show. Broad Axe had been a hot tip, but under Halbert's weak ride was outrun all the way.

The Camden stable also sent Princeton to the post in the first race at six furlongs. He finished third and was claimed by R. Pollard, represented in the race by Gold Mint. Little Gyp, paying $11.48, was a rather handy winner.

Easter Stockings Wins.

A field of older handicap stars paraded to the post in the $1,500 La Salle handicap at a mile and seventy yards. It brought victory to Eastern Stockings from the Audley Farm stable, and it was one of the few good performances she has turned in this year. Last season she was the champion filly of her age and for that reason she was made the even money favorite in the La Salle.

Jockey H. Schutte got her away in front and she stayed there all the way, although War Eagle and Black Wood both staged determined challenges on the lower bend and in the stretch. Schutte kept her going long enough to beat Blackwood by two lengths. War Eagle dropped back and was lucky to beat Crosco out of third money.

BOBBY JONES OFF FOR CALIFORNIA TO DEFEND TITLE

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Bobby Jones left for California early today to defend his title in the National amateur championship at Del Monte, Sept. 2 to 7.

BARRIER'S UP! THEY'RE AWAY TO PERFECT START

They're off in the Drake purse, the third race at Hawthorne. The field leaves the Bahr starting gate in almost perfect alignment. After the first leaps Uptime was in front, with Miss Pearl second, Suitor third, and Symphorosa, the winner of the race, in fourth position. Twenty-six thousand, a season's attendance record for the west side track, saw the program. (TRIBUNE Photo.)

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 17.—(AP)—A collision during the running of the 25 mile automobile race at the Illinois state fair today resulted in the death of one spectator, and injuries to seven others and two drivers. William Wayne, 62 years old, of Cuba, Mo., who was attending the race with his three sons, died in a local hospital tonight. W. C. Pingrey, one of the drivers in the crash, is not expected to live.

The cars were entering the fourth lap of the race when three machines collided, driving one of the speeding racers through the rail and into a group of spectators among whom were Wayne and his sons.

The injured drivers are Pingrey and Carl Marchesi, of Milwaukee, whose cars crashed into one driven by John Gerber, Topeka, Kas.—hurling Gerber's machine through the railing. Gerber escaped with bruises.

The spectators injured include Irwin, Lou, and Glen Wayne, Cuba, Mo.; Leslie Wright and Henry Barnes, both of Peoria; Isaac Ferris, Jerseyville, and John Egan, Springfield.

The race was continued and won by G. H. Wilcox of Indianapolis, Ind., in 19:42 for the 25 miles. C. Zook, Springfield, was second, and two Chicagoans, Cowboy Hardy and Carl Young, tied for third.

GERMAN YACHTS INCREASE LEAD OVER U. S. RIVALS

Marblehead, Mass., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Germany widened its lead in the international 30 square meter yacht races with the American skippers to 45 points to 29 here today when the visiting yachts Kickerie and Haith crossed the finish line first and second, repeating their victories of yesterday.

The racing yachts were required to sail a nine and a half mile triangular course in a light southerly breeze that fell almost flat many times. The Kickerie, sailed by Wilhelm Raatsch, rounded the course in 2:38:43 and the Haith's time was 2:39:08.

Why Do Cubs Lead League? Chicago Boys Give Reasons

Boys!

Suppose that somebody told you that you could sit in a box seat at the opening game of the world series at Wrigley field for nothing.

Suppose further somebody said that you would be given a check for five dollars in addition to the series ticket.

Would you believe it?

Write a letter to THE TRIBUNE stating what you like best about the Cubs and perhaps you'll have to believe it.

THE TRIBUNE today prints ten letters from Chicago boys between 10 and 16 years. Each will receive a check for five dollars. Ten more letters will be published a week from today and the authors likewise will receive checks for five dollars.

The six best letters submitted in the contest will win tickets to the opening game of the world series, if the Cubs win the pennant. Originality, logic and clearness are the points judges will consider in making the awards.

Competition closes at noon Saturday. Letters received thereafter will not be considered. Make sure that your letter is on the desk of the baseball contest editor in time. Mail it today.

Today's ten prize winning letters follow:

PRAISES UNSUNG HEROES.

Dear Sir: The reason I think the Cubs are a good baseball team is because of the good management and coöperation between the players. Also because of Charley Grimm, Stephenson, and Taylor, who never get enough credit for what they do.

Yours truly,
GEORGE NEWMAN, 13 years old,
3435 Cortland street.

NO JEALOUSIES ON TEAM.

Dear Sir:

I think the chief factor which enabled the Chicago Cubs thus far to enjoy a pleasant lead is due to their fine concentration. In other words they click.

At the beginning of the season experts thought that when the Cubs purchased a star player this would cause jealousy among the players. The prediction has been proved wrong for when in a pinch they work for the benefit of the whole team and not for personal gains. Many strong teams in the league have been wrecked because they lacked friendliness toward each other.

The Cubs have eluded this and now are prospering like a family.

Yours faithful,
JOHN COLLE,
25 East 17th st., Gary, Ind.
Age 15.

HORNSBY HIS IDOL.

Dear Editor: Being a Chicago boy I like the Cubs, not because of home town sentiment alone but for what the Cubs really are. Every boy has a baseball idol. Roger Hornsby is mine because I think he is playing the best ball of his career for the Cubs. It takes more than an idol to win games, it takes management, good pitching, hitting, and, beyond all, team spirit. That coöperation that means victory.

First: The Cubs have an owner in Mr. Wrigley who is heart and soul a Cub.

Second: They have a manager who knows his baseball and how to prescribe it. They have four pitchers who are at the top of the win column.

Third: An outfield that go and get everything; an infield tied for first place in double plays; hitting of the highest order.

Fourth: Team spirit.

All this makes the Cubs on to a world series.

WILLIAM JONES (Age 13),
725 Erie St., Oak Park.

TEAM WITH A PUNCH.

Dear sir:

The main reason for the Cubs winning is because they have the punch.

It seems that when they are behind they show more punch than when they are on top.

Up to a few weeks ago they have had poor pitching, Guy Bush was the only one pitching real ball. Blake, Root, Carlson and Malone have just got going. Root has won eleven games and lost four, but they have not be won by superb pitching. They have been won by the punch of the other players.

Another factor in the Cubs winning is their outfield. Players like Stephenson, Wilson, Cuyler and reserves like Moore and Heathcote are hard to beat. Yours truly,

RALPH BLAKESLEY JR.,
826 Lakeside place. [Age 11.]

A WILSON FAN.

Dear Sir: I am writing this letter not in hopes of getting a free ticket to

BILL TILDEN TOYS WITH HUNTER AND WINS RYE FINAL

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Before one of the largest galleries that has witnessed a day of tennis at the Westchester Country club, numbering close to 2,500 spectators, William Tilden, former national champion, defeated Francis T. Hunter of New Rochelle this afternoon to succeed John Doeg as the holder of the eastern grass court championship.

It was a disappointing final, with Tilden on hair trigger edge and in perfect command of his strokes and equal to any emergency, but none ever arose, for Hunter had gone stale after his victory over H. W. Austin and submitted in three successive sets, 6-2, 6-2, 8-6.

In less than half an hour, with hardly a flurry of applause from the stands, Tilden took the first two sets without the semblance of a struggle, and it was not until the score stood 5-0 in the second chapter that Hunter threw down the gauntlet to his doubles partner.

But whenever he needed a point vitally, there was no withstanding Tilden. His straight backhands down the line, his court covering and bewildering mixture of pace and spin off both wings were sufficient to put Hunter's most determined efforts to naught.

Far more interesting than the final of the singles was the semi-final match in the doubles in which Tilden and Hunter defeated Fritz Mercur and J. Gilbert Hall. Resuming play where it was left off Friday evening, with the score standing two sets to one in their favor, the Davis cup veterans lost the fourth chapter at 8-6, after trailing at 2-5. They took the fifth chapter to win the match at 4-6, 6-2, 9-7, 6-8, 8-2.

The final of the women's doubles was won this afternoon by Miss Edith Cross and Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper of California. They defeated Miss Clara Louise Zinke of Cincinnati and Miss Virginia Rice of Boston, 6-2, 3-6, 11-9.

FOX HUNTERS TO GATHER SEPT. 30 AT ANNUAL CHASE

Danvers, Ill., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Fox hunters from many points in Illinois are expected to attend the annual chase of the McLean-Tazewell County Fox Hunters association. The event will open Sept. 30 and close Oct. 5. The camp will be in the timbered section near here and the chase will be along the Mackinaw river. This will be the eighteenth annual event.

It May Interest You to Know That—

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—William Veeck, Cub president, joined the squad this evening. There is no particular reason for his presence except that he thinks he can do a little rooting in the Giant series which starts tomorrow.

Sam Solomon, the thirteen-year old who is to be given a trial with the Cubs as soon as he grows up, received a lot of attention today from the movie men. He should be photographed in colors so as to show his fire-red freckles and equally fiery hair. By taking the kid, McCarthy sets a major league record for cradle snatching. Waite Hoyt was fifteen when the Giants signed him.

About half the members of the Cub outfit are going to "expert" on the world's series. It hasn't been decided who is to do the writing for them.

Glenn Wright, former Pirate shortstop who has been of no use to the Robins this year because of a dead throwing arm, is out of the hospital following an operation on the injured part. He will carry the wing in a sling for a month. The doctor in charge insists the athlete will be as good as ever by next spring but other people are not so optimistic.

Captain Grimm gave the crowd a thrill and a laugh in the ninth. He raced to the stand and with his bare hand grabbed a foul off the bat of pinch hitter Picinich. Then he leaped up on the railing in front of the boxes and made an elaborate sweeping bow to the fans in the vicinity.

BRUIN BATS ROUT 4 PITCHERS; WALBERG WILTS; TRIBE WINS, 2-1

Wes Ferrell Allows Mackmen Only Four Hits.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., Aug. 17.—The Athletics met with a slight mishap in their progress toward the wages and whoopee of the world series when they played their last stand in Cleveland against the Indians this afternoon. The Indians rushed at them in the last half of the ninth, unsettled George Walberg, who had pitched eight scoreless innings, and scored two runs to top the single run which the A's had made in the fourth.

Going into the last half of the ninth Walberg and Wes Ferrell, one a left hander, the other a normal youth, had allowed only four hits apiece and from the character of Walberg's work it seemed that he was about to perform his second consecutive shut out and his eighteenth scoreless inning in one week.

Hodapp Breaks Up the Game.

But the importance of the moment may have disturbed him, for he walked Joe Sewell to start, Earl Averill hit a double to center, and a base on balls to Fonseca filled the bases with none out. Grover Hartley, the stout catcher who has been summering in seclusion on the Indians' bench, then came up to hit for Bib Falk and drove a single to left field, sending in Sewell to tie the score.

At that Walberg folded his glove, stuffed it in his rear pocket and shuffled away, while John Picus Quinn, the old coal miner, climbed out of the pit, blinking at the sun, and chewing fast on his slippery elm, to do anything he could about saving the game. He fell heir to an impossible situation, with the bases still crowded, the score at evens, nobody out and Johnny Hodapp at bat.

He did what he could and Hodapp did what he could and the baseball sailed to Homer Summa in right center field near the wall. Averill jogged in with the winning run, the crowd fell to jubilating on the lawn, and the Athletics changed clothes on the run, in order to catch old ninety-seven for St. Louis.

There was something poetic about the affair, for Ferrell had pitched Walberg to a standoff and the run which stood against him on the scoreboard was not really his doing. Luke Sewell, his catcher, had failed him in the fourth inning and from that point on he was carrying undeserved weight as the horse people put it.

Athletics Score on Error.

No occurrences occurred until the first half of the fourth when Homer Summa, one of Mr. Mack's obedient outfield automata, hit a double to right, the fourth hit of the game but the first of any luster. It went to the wall and he skidded into second in a billow of dust like a taxi driver in a dirt track derby.

Mickey Cochrane then singled to right along the sward and Summa tore for home with great rapidity. He would have been out, though, if Luke Sewell hadn't dropped Morgan's long throw from the outfield. As it was he went pack to the soil and scored the first run of the afternoon as the 20,000 patrons groaned.

Cochrane took second during the confusion and third on Simmons' infield out. He was the third out a moment later trying to score as Double-X Foxx, the distinguished country boy, hit to Gardner at short. This time, Sewell took the throw, read the label on the ball, dug in his cleats and greeted the runner with an emphatic jab in the ribs.

Indians Threaten in Fifth.

The Indians made a rather serious threat in their half of the fifth. Gardner singled to right and sacrificial raps by Luke Sewell and Ferrell, the pitcher, moved him as far as third. But Morgan addressed a rainbow fly to Miller in right and the score was still fifteen-love, so to speak.

Walberg's gray habit was darkening from the moisture of honest toil as he waved his supple left arm in the diminishing circles of his windup. He is a reflective young man, having sailed the seas for some years, a line of work which sets the mind to meditating under the stars and makes men wonder what makes the wind blow. He has written no books on the topic of seafaring but whether that is because he went to sea too much or too little is something that needn't be argued here.

The young skipper is an interesting refutation of the old baseball theory that left handers can't think, having thoughts on many topics, including finance, fate and the reasons, if any, for one thing and another, to occupy him while he is winding up to throw. I don't like to bring sex into a clean sporting topic but what an author he would have been if his name had been Joan, not George.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Having been more or less restrained for a couple of days, the Cub sluggers went back to work this afternoon to make up for lost time. They came through with an elaborate assortment of hits behind the none to steady hurling of Old Art Nehf, and thereby shot down the Robins in the final to earn an even break in the series.

The score was 10 to 4, and the margin that eventually is going to lead the Chicagoans into a pennant remains at seven and one-half games.

In number the Cub blows totaled only eleven, but it was the length and timeliness of many of them that impressed. For instance, Hack Wilson hit homer No. 31 and a single, which sort of offset grounding into two double plays. Hornsby cracked homer No. 27 to start a five run rally in the eighth. Cuyler unloaded a couple of singles, both leading to runs. Nehf's two hits were equally productive. McMillan marked his return with a homer. And even Pinch Hitter Heathcote assisted by doubling when the bags were jammed in the eighth.

Four Robin Hurlers Toil.

The above depredations by the prospective champs were felt by no fewer than four of Uncle Robby's pitchers. Dudley was the initial sacrifice. He went away on the fourth when the Cubs were about to get a run that gave them a 4 to 3 lead. Morrison was next and his workout was fair, the only tally charged against him being McMillan's homer, which occurred in the seventh when one run looked like a hundred. Then in the eighth both A. Moore and Ballou endeavored to pitch, but their efforts were so fruitless that ten Cubs batted before the baby riot subsided.

Nehf's hurling was particularly bad in two spots. In the second, by which time he had a two run lead, he tottered so much that there was a discussion as to the advisability of removing him before it was too late. He was permitted to stick, but didn't get through the round without three runs scoring. Then he got into another tight jam in the seventh, but pulled himself out after the tying run had reached third with only one out. In the other rounds he was fair, mainly because he was able to get his curve ball through the spots at which he was aiming.

Now the scene of pennant making shifts to the Polo Grounds. Pat Malone will pitch against the Giants in the first game and probably will draw Benton, who has been saved for the occasion.

All the Cubs want from the fading Giants is three out of four. They'll take four if they can, but even if they get only an even break there'll be no signs of alarm.

Hack Silences Fans.

The Cubs stepped off with a two run advantage in the opening round because of Wilson's No. 31. The day's program opened with McMillan grounding out. It was Mac's first appearance since Bell spiked him at Boston. The next happening was a pass to English. A hit and run play was called for, but Hornsby could only tap to E. Moore. The customary Brooklyn salute greeted Hack, and it grew in volume when he missed two healthy swings. They made a different kind of a noise when he hit the next pitch over the right field wall, English preceding him over the pan.

Brooklyn's three runs in the second began to take form when Eastlick opened the chapter with a single through short. Nehf then lost control and walked E. Moore and Bancroft, filling the bases. Nehf curved over a perfect third strike for Doherty, but Ump Pfirman ruled it a ball. The Cubs howled like wolves, but in vain. Then Doherty sent a fly to Cuyler, scoring Eastlick and putting E. Moore on third.

Cuyler made one of his ballooning pers to third, but it was a bit too late to accomplish any good. On top of this, McMillan fumbled, and Bancroft took advantage of the error by going to second. Dudley was set down on strikes. Nehf got into a hole pitching to Gilbert and had to groove one. Gilbert sent the "cripple" to deep left, and it rolled off the finger tips of Stephenson's glove for a two-bagger, E. Moore and Bancroft scoring. This put the Robins in front by 3 to 2, but their run was short lived.

Nehf Starts Rally.

Nehf started a little rally that put the Cubs into a 3 to 3 tie in the third. He singled off Bancroft's left shin. McMillan walked. The bases became clogged when English beat out a hit to E. Moore. This was where the two big men of the attack fell down on the job. Hornsby bounced to E. Moore, forcing English at second. Nehf scored on the play. Then Wilson cracked one straight at Bancroft for a double play and the boys in the stand did a lot more boxing in Hack's behalf.

The Cubs had the bases jammed again in the fourth with none out, but all the good they could accomplish was one run, and the removal of Dudley from the peak. Cuyler's single opened this attack. Stephenson walked, and Dudley was excused to give Morrison a chance to display his curve. The first thing Morrison did was to curve a wild pitch out of Deberry's reach. This let Cuyler score and put Stephenson on third and Grimm on second. Taylor was thrown out, but the two runners held their stations. A pass to Nehf loaded the bases again. Then McMillan sent one toward short like a bullet. Bancroft grabbed it in his outstretched glove, touched second to force Nehf and threw to first for a double play.

The fifth was out of the ordinary only because there was additional entertainment for Wilson in each half. In the Cubs' portion, English walked and Hornsby popped out. There was quite a bit of unfavorable comment from the stands when Hack fanned and English was doubled trying to steal on the third strike. Then in the Brooklyn half Hack endeavored to be a bit nonchalant about catching Herman's easy fly. The ball came down in Hack's glove all right, but it didn't stick. The blunder did no damage, as there were two down at the time, and Hendrick followed with a pop to Hornsby.

McMillan Hits His Homer.

McMillan felt better after the Cub seventh. He straightened one of Morrison's offerings, and it landed in the left field seats. This made up for the blow he lost when Bancroft made that unusual one handed stop in the fourth. The homer gave the future champions a lead of 5 to 3, but they lost a part of it a moment later.

Deberry led off in the home seventh with a hit over short. Rhiel batted for Morrison and singled to center. Gilbert succumbed on a pop foul to Taylor. Frederick bounced a rather hard one straight at Grimm, but Capt. Charley's hands weren't in the right place, so it went past for a single, scoring Deberry and planting Rhiel on third. The situation wasn't at all promising, but Nehf managed to pull through without additional damage. He landed Herman on a tall fly to Grimm and Hendrick on a fly to Cuyler.

The noisy eighth, in which the Cubs made the battle a cinch by scoring five times, began with Hornsby converting A. Moore's first pitch into a homer over the right field wall. The wallop either discouraged Mr. Moore or gave the Cubs the idea of going out and doing things in a big way. Wilson singled to center and Cuyler singled to right. A. Moore was removed in favor of Ballou, but the alteration worked no hardship on the Cubs.

Stephenson greeted Ballou with a sacrifice bunt. Grimm was purposely passed, filling the bases. Heathcote was told to take a bat and go up to hit for Taylor. He leaned into the first pitch and fined it to center for a double, scoring Wilson and Cuyler and putting Grimm on third. Nehf drove Grimm and Heathcote home with a single through short. This completed the scoring for the inning and also for the game.

HOME RUN GIVES RED SOX A WIN OVER ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 17.—[Special.] A home run by Bob Reeves was the winning margin for the Red Sox in a 1 to 0 victory over the Browns today. The third baseman hit into the left field seats in the first inning. Danny MacFayden carried this lead through the game, assisted by superb fielding by Scarritt in left and Rhyne at short stop. The hits off MacFayden were a double by Schulte in the second, a single by Manush in the fourth and double by Melillo in the sixth. Score:

FROM CELLAR TO ROOF, EVOLUTION OF M'CARTHY CUBS

Vaughan Traces Rise Since 1925 Season.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 17.—In view of the present lofty position of Joe McCarthy's Chicago team, one might well ask what has become of the Cubs of a few years ago. Or, to put it in such a way as to make a real brain duster for those who love their memory tests, you might say, "Who were the Cubs of three and four seasons back?"

JOE McCARTHY.

Jot down the lineups, if you can, of the Cub squads of '26, '27, and '28, and you will have the story of the evolution of an eighth place team into a pennant winner, or almost a pennant winner. But to recall the changes that have taken place since the end of 1925, when it was a last place outfit and McCarthy was placed in charge, proved a job that some of the present Cubs themselves couldn't solve. Even the four survivors of the pre-McCarthy era—Blake, Bush, Hartnett, and Heathcote—couldn't think of everybody that had come up and gone back in four years.

1926 Team to Race for a Spell.

Looking back now on what became of the regular 1926 lineup after McCarthy had juggled around with the remnants of the 1925 eighth placers, you can easily determine why no pennant became Wrigley property. And yet that team was in the race for a spell and might have remained a bit longer if a pitched ball hadn't bumped Hack Wilson on the head in a game at Philadelphia. Hack had to stay out for quite a stretch, and he was about the only real hitter the Cubs possessed, so his loss hurt. Even as it was, the outfit wound up in fourth place, which was considerable improvement over last place the year previous.

The '26 infield most of the time was Grimm, Adams, Cooney, and Freigau, reading from first to third. Freigau had been obtained along with Gonsales from the Cards in exchange for O'Farrell. Cooney also had come from the Cards. The outfield without Wilson was Jahn in left, Brooks in center, and Heathcote in right. Brooks broke in as a sensation by hitting a homer. Jahn was another of whom big things were expected. They didn't last long.

Gave Alexander to Cardinals.

Most of the hurling in 1925 had been handled by Alexander, Cooper, and Kaufmann, but their records didn't mean anything when McCarthy decided to make alterations in 1926. He "gave" Alex to the Cardinals and Alex won a world's series for them. McCarthy knew Alex still was a great pitcher, but the veteran wouldn't observe training rules, so out he went. Cooper had complained about Manager Killefer's tactics. When he started the same about McCarthy he was tossed overboard. Kaufmann remained until '27, when he and Cooney went to the Phillies for Hal Carlson.

In the spring of 1927 the present machine began to take form. Wilson was a fixture in center and Heathcote in right. Munson also had a chance, but flopped. After the season started McCarthy instructed the club to bid for Stephenson, then at Indianapolis. The Pirates expected to grab him, but the Cub bid was accepted because McCarthy promised to deliver Maurice Shannon, an infielder, who had been purchased from Louisville.

The infield that year (1927) changed oftener than the weather. Grimm was a fixture at first, but the three other posts were sources of trouble. Adams was at second most of the time, and occasionally at short and third. English was purchased for the regular short job, but proved so unsteady that Cooney had to play it most of the time the first half of the season. Freigau was at third, but his work was not satisfactory. He was shipped to Kansas City for Eddie Pick, and he, too, fell down. Haney was claimed from the Red Sox, and he was a failure. He was passed to Indianapolis for Yoter, and he, too, flopped. Finally Beck remained as the best of the lot.

Malone, Nehf Added to Roster.

When the opportunity arose to get Carlson from the Phillies McCarthy took a chance and included Cooney as well as Kaufmann in the deal. This left the shortstop job open to English, who until then had been too erratic for regular work. The lad still is a bit erratic, but, nevertheless, about the choicest shortstop in the offing today.

Four more names were woven into the possible pennant fabric for the race of 1928. The outfield was made complete with the acquisition of Cuyler from the Pirates for Adams and Scott. Scott was only a utility fly chaser, and Adams could be safely dispensed with because Maguire had been purchased from Toledo. To the hurling staff, made up of Root, Bush, Blake, Jones, and Carlson, came Pat Malone. He was bought from Minneapolis. Art Nehf was picked up as a free agent. McMillan was drafted from St. Paul.

The infield was Grimm, Maguire, English, and Butler at the start. Toward the half way mark Butler faded and Beck was substituted. On the whole, the team was almost up to the standard Owner Wrigley sought. It lacked only the "punch" to carry it over at the finish. Not having this punch, it didn't go over.

The "punch" was assured last winter when the deal for Hornsby was closed. Maguire was the only regular sacrificed in the record breaking swap. And the touch of Hornsby's powerful bat is the difference between third place a year ago and first place today

YANKEES SIGN YOUNG COAST PITCHING STAR

Pirates Defeat Braves, 3-2 for Third in Series of Four

Boston, Mass., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—The Pirates made it three out of four when they took the final game of their four game series here today, 3 to 2. The Pirates scored all their runs in the first inning, off Bob Smith. When he walked three men with one out in the eighth and protested Umpire Moran's decision on balls and strikes he was chased from the game. Jones, who replaced him, prevented the Pirates from crossing the plate.

The Braves scored their two runs in the seventh on three hits and two infield outs. They threatened in the ninth when Cooney walked with one down and Maguire singled. French was taken out and Swetonic forced Pinch Hitter Welch to fly to Grantham and struck out Pinch Hitter Brandt. Score:

PHILS WIN AND LOSE.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—The Reds of Cincinnati and the Phillies split a twin bill here this afternoon, the locals taking the first fracas, 3-2, but dropping the second, 4-2.

Allen's home run into the left field bleachers in the sixth inning with Dressen, who had doubled, on base broke up a 1-1 tie which existed and was the winning wallop of the second game. In the first game the Phils allied five big runs in the eighth inning to drive Pete Donohue from the mound and clinch the ball game, Luque coming in to his rescue with one out and yielding three more hits. Claude Willoughby went the route, allowing 12 hits, but he kept them scattered. Chuck Klein made four hits in five trips to the plate.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

WORLD SERIES GAMES.

FRIEND DON: Well, Don, I thought you wouldn't mind if I didn't come to the office today because I've had a very unusual experience. Last Saturday I played golf in a foursome with Ed Craven, whom you know; John Nicholson, an attorney; and "Morce" Karker—Maurice is his right name but that's too dignified when he plays golf.

"Morce" and I were partners against the other two in a Scotch foursome and I played my usual game with which you are familiar. Well, it rained and stopped the match after we were wet outside and dry inside and we had to remedy that condition. But here's the point. "Morce" suggested we finish it today. Now, Don, no one who ever befors had me for a partner in a Scotch foursome with a little honorarium per point at stake ever asked me to be a partner again. In fact, it's a new world's record. So I wanted to accommodate him. He's president or some officer of Jewel Tea. Well, Don, all I can say is, his company must be making lots of money if he can afford to have me for a partner.

But that wasn't what I wanted to talk to you about most. It's about the coming world series. Can't you think of something for me to do so I can be a reporter on this series and therefore get a press seat. Of course, there's Vaughan and Burns and Pegler and yourself and possibly some signed stories by player experts—but I hope you won't fall for that, Don. Maybe I could write some notes or something.

You see I thought it would be a cinch to buy tickets because when I was a baseball reporter, I was a "bunkie"—baseball jargon for roommate—with Bill Veeck, then a baseball reporter on an afternoon paper. In fact, we even sat in the same poker game, but I didn't do so very well there because I always thought I could fill an inside straight while Bill preferred two big pair or a set of threes before raising.

So you see I thought I was sitting pretty and when any one asked me if I could get them world series tickets I said "Sure." So I went up to the Cub offices in the Wrigley building and asked for Veeck. I said "Hello, Bill" and he said "Hello, Woody," real cordial like—you know Woody was my old nickname and Harve is a modern version.

So I opened up at once and said 'Bill, I want 40 good world series seats in the first row boxes right by the Cubs' dugout. I may want more later, but I'll let you know about that." Well, Don, you should have seen that fellow's manner change. And what did he say? He said, "Mr. Woodruff, your name is familiar, but I don't seem to remember your face."

So I said, "Why, Bill, we roomed together at the Tampa Bay hotel in 1915 the time the baggage boys rolled Charlie Dryden's trunk down the iron stairs from the third floor because they didn't want to carry it and it broke all to pieces. Don't you remember Charlie had had the same trunk for nearly 20 years, then got swell and bought this new one and gave the old one to the porter. It was the new one that broke and then Charlie had to buy back his old trunk from the porter for $5 because we were leaving for Jacksonville that night. Why, I was your roommate."

"Well, I never knew I had so many roommates as since the Cubs seem on the way to the pennant," replied Bill which didn't sound very encouraging to me.

So, Don, I said, "But surely, Bill, you remember about that trip. Remember that swell looking blonde from Boston whose father was a millionaire shoe manufacturer and what a case she had on you and we played golf in a foursome at the country club and you took me along for the sad one who was visiting the blonde?"

Then Mr. Veeck—by this time I was ready to call him Mr. Veeck—"Mr. Woodworth, or whatever your name is, I was a married man to-day and I remember no swell looking blonde who had a case on me nor with whom we played golf. Now I hope you'll excuse me as I have a lot of real work to do." And, Don, I didn't like the way he said "real work," but anyway the oldtime friendliness seemed to be over and I don't expect to buy any world series tickets for myself or my friends from Mr. Veeck so I'd like to work on the series if it's all right with you.

Of course I own 5 shares of Wrigley stock, but I don't like to go to Mr. Wrigley. I never even roomed with him, and he might say that he never had so many devoted stockholders in his gum company as this year. Besides I don't chew gum, anyway, and I couldn't look like a regular at chewing gum even while I was talking to him. So think it over and let me know. Do you tomorrow at THE TRIBUNE golf tourney. Regards.

Harvey T. Woodruff.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send your name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question P. Cripe, 1423 Columbia street, Lafayette, Ind., was awarded $5.

The Question.

The Answers.

L. H. Mather, 4433 Greenwood avenue, bank clerk—I had the opportunity of watching Joe McCarthy at Louisville some years ago. He did very well down there, his team having a winning streak of some 33 games. He has never managed a tail-end team like Connie Mack did. Connie Mack has the better team this year, I'll tell the world, and I am for the Cubs and McCarthy.

Robert T. Carey, 8229 Kimbark avenue, salesman—I would like to speak up for McCarthy—you know the motto, "Right or wrong, our country"—but we have to hand it to Connie Mack. However, McCarthy has done more in a shorter space of time. Mack has been building up his team for years, training players.

K. C. Thorn, 533 Aldine avenue, advertising — Joe McCarthy. He came here in 1926, took the team from last place and brought it up to fourth place in one year, and his team has been a pennant contender ever since. He knows promising players as they develop here and there, and he uses excellent judgment in purchasing the right men for his team.

W. H. Carson, 6236 South Western avenue, street car conductor—Connie Mack, as figured from his years of experience, his age, results, and everything else. I wish I could give preference to Chicago, but in fair play Mack deserves the honor. But take a man that sold his best players, replaced them with young college material, trained this material till it outshone his former experienced men, and one has to give him credit for having baseball brains.

Tom Stanish, 1622 Austin avenue, errand boy — Connie Mack. He has brains. He will take up some unkown player, make a star out of him, and sell him for a bunch of dough. Joe McCarthy — I wouldn't give a dime to see him; he's no good. If they had Connie Mack for the Cubs, man, they would have a team.

The Tunneys Desert Brioni; Stop in Paris

[Copyright; 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Aug. 17.—James Joseph Tunney, formerly known as Gene, the world's heavyweight champion, and his bride, formerly Polly Lauder, once again are privately enjoying the bright lights of Paris after a prolonged honeymoon on the Isle of Brioni, Italy.

They are stopping at the luxurious new hotel George V. where not long ago the Young plan was signed. The pair plan to remain in Paris until they feel like going somewhere else, according to Mr. Tunney, who declares he is in no hurry to return to the United States. According to other sources they expect to go to Sicily in the near future.

In the meantime Mr. Tunney has nothing to say for publication. Especially and most emphatically he has nothing to say concerning the $500,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Mrs. Katherine E. Fogarty, who, while awaiting the return of the bridal couple, has attached the Tunney summer home at Stamford, Conn.

"Such foolishness is not worth talking about," Mr. Tunney said.

CARRACIOLI WINS 400 MILE AUTO RACE AT BELFAST

BELFAST, Aug. 17.—Two minutes ahead of his nearest rival in the international tourist trophy run near Belfast, Carracioli, famous German driver, spurted home after a duel for the last three laps with S. Campari. The victor's average speed was 72.82 miles per hour for the 408 mile course.

Among the competitors in the international race were only three Americans; two driving Fords and one a Stutz. The cars ranged from Baby Austins, getting a five laps handicap, to the big Mercedes-Benz. With the course deluged by thunder showers at intervals, the racers found it slippery going. Of sixty-three starters only twelve finished.

Games Open Tomorrow on 2 Playing Fields.

For the first time in history the United States Polo association's twelve goal championship will be determined in Chicago this week when the strongest twelve goal teams from all sections of the country meet in a series of preliminary, quarter-final, semi-final, and final contests, beginning tomorrow and ending a week from today.

Last week's inter-circuit tournament brought together many of the strongest teams in the United States and the best of these will be entered in the contests starting tomorow at Oak Brook and Onwentsia fields.

There are five important polo events in which teams from all over the country take part. These are the open championship, the junior championship, the twelve goal championship, the intercircuit championship, and the intercollegiate championship. The intercircuit championship just finished at Onwentsia and the twelve goal championship virtually make Chicago the polo capital of the country for the time being.

Tourney Established in 1923.

The twelve goal championship was first established in 1923 when it was won by Penilyn, which beat the United States Army, 8 to 6. There was no contest in 1924. In 1925 Fort Bliss captured first honors by defeating Midwick, 14 to 5. In 1926 Fort Leavenworth ran away with the championship by overwhelming Rockaway, 14 to 1. Fort Bliss repeated its victory of 1925 by winning the championship in 1927, 11 goals to 7, from Cavalry School, and last year Fort Riley was the victor when it defeated Point Judith, intercircuit champion, 10 to 4.

Preliminary contests will start tomorrow with Oak Brook (B) tackling Fort Benning at 3:30 in the afternoon on the Oak Brook field at 22d street and York road. While this battle is going on, Fort Leavenworth will be fighting it out with Detroit at Onwentsia. The second preliminary on Tuesday will find Fort Hoyle paired with Oak Brook (A) team at Oak Brook field, and Midwick battling with Onwentsia at Onwentsia. The winners of the two Monday games will meet Thursday at Oak Brook at 3:30. The winners of the two Tuesday games will meet at Oak Brook Friday at 3:30.

The finals will be held Sunday on the Oak Brook No. 3 field, which is rated the equal, if not the superior, to the Meadowbrook International inclosure.

Four Playing Fields.

The Oak Brook polo plant has four of the finest polo fields ever developed anywhere, and three practice fields. The club is located two miles north of Hinsdale, the entrance to the fields being at the end of West 22d street where it runs into York road. There is parking space all around the various fields. Polo has been played at Oak Brook for only a little more than three years, but in this time the game has taken a strong hold on the people of the western suburbs of Chicago.

There is as much care given a polo field as to the greens of a golf club; in fact, it is much more expensive to keep up a field than it is to care for an entire golf course because of the terrific pounding the turf receives from the horses, to say nothing of the riders, who now and then dig up some of the sod with their mallets.

Polo has grown rapidly throughout the United States during the last few years until now there are eighty-nine clubs registered with the United States Polo association.

GOLF MATCH WEDNESDAY.

Monticello, Ill., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—The Monticello Golf club will entertain a team from the Champaign Country club Wednesday. One week later, the two teams will meet again at Champaign.

EIGHTH ANNUAL POLICE GAMES NEXT SATURDAY

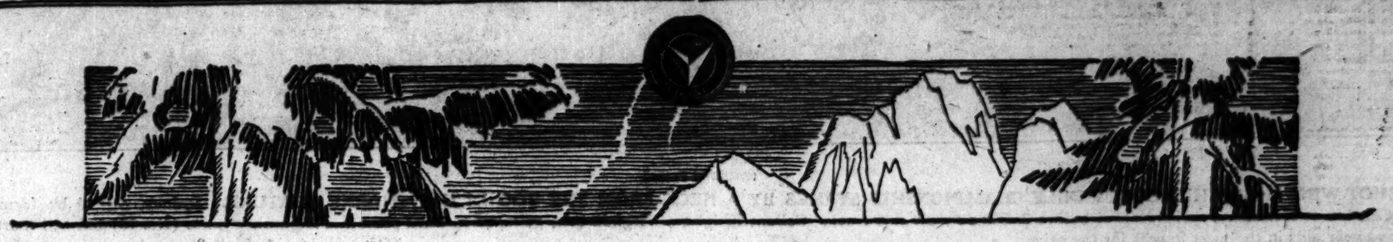
Thousands to Compete in Two Day Event.

One of Chicago's largest civic events, the eighth annual track and field games of the police department, will be held next Saturday and Sunday on Soldiers' field in Grant park. All proceeds will go to the benevolent fund which provides for families of policemen killed in the line of duty.

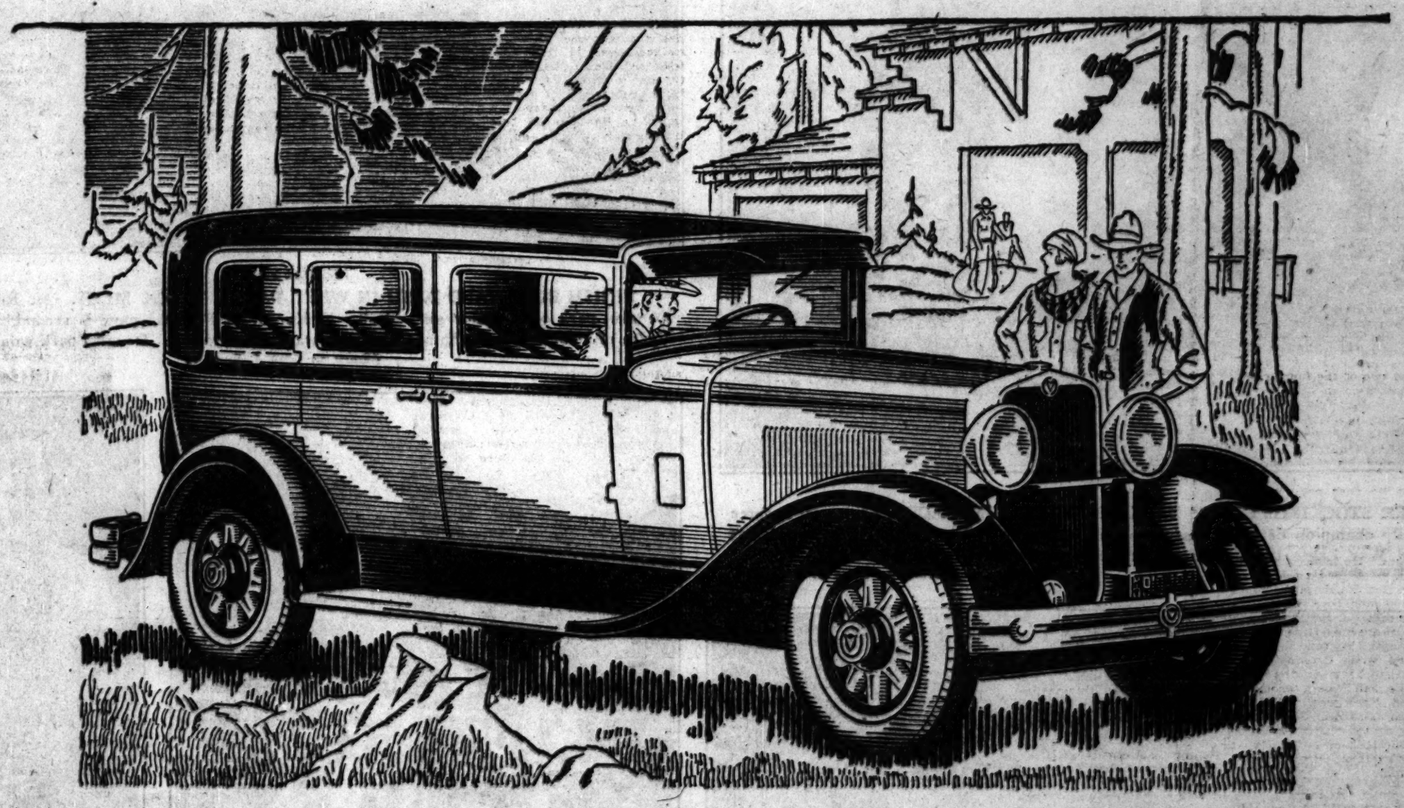
Among the many features of the interesting event is a replica of a holdup. Automobiles are stopped in the middle of the arena by bandits. Its passengers are searched and their cars taken away. In the meantime an alarm is sounded and the bandits are cornered in temporary houses at either end of the stadium. Tear bombs, revolvers and rifles are brought into play with the result the bandits are captured. This act, very realistic, will be in charge of Deputy Commissioner of Police John Stege.

There will be foot races and it may surprise a number of persons to know the number of policemen who can run. In fact, the pick of the police department of Chicago and the south park system will compete. There will be chariot races, tugs of war and shuttle races.

The games on each day will open at 2:30 o'clock with a parade of everyone connected with the event. George Getz, Chicago's well known sportsman, will be in charge of the event, and Commissioner William F. Russell will lead the parade. Men prominent in the athletic world will act as officials.



Come Drive the New VIKING ..... experience the luxury of 90° V-Eight performance .....



Only by driving the new Viking can you fully appreciate the brilliant performance this 90-degree V-eight now makes available at medium price.

Speed far in excess of the requirements of the average driver. Power so instantly responsive and so effortless that it makes the most difficult task seem easy. Acceleration that is equally spirited in getaway from a standing start and in pick-up at the higher speeds. Incredible smoothness and quietness throughout the entire speed range. All these sources of satisfaction you will discover when you drive the new Viking. And when you experience them as a harmonious whole, you will enjoy a feeling of absolute mastery over every situation—a degree of confidence which imparts true luxury to motoring.

OLDSMOBILE SIX

—the Fine Car of Low Price—continues to win ever greater success throughout the nation. Companion car to the new Viking Eight, and equally outstanding in engineering and value at its price, it offers a wide choice of body styles and equipment combinations, ranging from $875 up, f. o. b. factory, Lansing, Mich.

To assure the permanence of these desirable performance characteristics, the Viking engine is remarkably rigid and compact—two factors which are of vital importance in durability and dependability. Further, it is extremely simple and accessible in design. This great car represents more than three years of research, test, and development on the part of Oldsmobile and General Motors engineers. Committed to no set principle of design, they sought to create an eight-cylinder engine which would combine all desirable qualities. To attain this purpose they tried every type of design—built engines along entirely new lines—and subjected all to the same rigorous trials on the great General Motors Proving Ground.

The result was an engine based on the famous 90-degree, V-type eight-cylinder principle, but incorporating new and desirable features of design. One of the most important of these advancements is the new horizontal valve arrangement, which provides high efficiency coupled with rigidity, simplicity, and quiet operation. Another distinctive improvement is the down-draft manifold distribution of fuel.

Completely worthy of this fine engine is the sturdy Viking chassis with its many provisions for safety and dependability. Deceleration in keeping with Viking performance is provided by powerful self-energizing four-wheel brakes of the internal-expanding type. And four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers assure riding ease.

The beautiful lines of Viking's trimly-tailored Bodies by Fisher have already captured public favor. And the luxury they suggest is carried out to the fullest extent in the comfort and beauty of the spacious interiors.

Come drive the Viking. Go over it point by point. Learn for yourself what remarkable value the new Viking introduces to the medium-price field.

"We've got a good YOUNG ball—" the current war cry of the Sox, which has become threadbare as a 1918 model Liberty loan can, retrieved no prestige in the doings-on at Comiskey Park yesterday afternoon.

Walter Johnson and his miscellaneous Washington Senators said their 1929 farewell to the south side yesterday and toyed with Mr. Comiskey's good young ball players to achieve a 5 to 2 victory and give them a record of three out of four during their stay here.

Young Bob Weiland pitched and did quite well for just two-thirds of the game, although he found himself in several embarrassing spots during the early stages. But, even though he is a good young ball player, Robert found his chore arduous and flopped prettily in the seventh when he inspired two homers, a double, and a single, and also hit a batsman. The homers were by two other good young ball players, Spencer and Cronin, but the single and double were propelled by two patriarchs known as Joseph Judge and Leon Goslin.

Sox Lead Wiped Out.

The seventh inning onslaught produced the Washington total for the day, and, of course, adequately swallowed a 2 to 0 lead which the Sox had obtained in the fourth inning from a pair of hits and two of the four errors which the Senators committed.

This afternoon the Yankees open their final Chicago stand of the year, with Mr. Ruth in a position to assume the interleague homer leadership. The current state of the Comiskey pitching corps should enable the Babe to enjoy one of the most luscious visits he ever has made to Comiskey park.

In yesterday's game a 0 to 0 tie was broken by the Sox in the fourth inning in the following fashion: Shires singled to right. Hoffman grounded to Cronin but in his eagerness to be the pivot man in a double play, Meyer dropped the ball and both Shires and Hoffman were safe. A bunt by Kamm moved up the runners and they scored on Kerr's single to center. Kerr reached second when Cronin sought to intercept the throw to the plate but muffed the ball. Berg grounded to Cronin and Kerr was run down between second and third, Berg reaching second during the maneuver. Weiland walked but Metzler stood idly at the plate and watched Brown throw strikes past him.

Judge Beats Out Roller.

At the very outset of the seventh inning the Senators revealed they were dissatisfied with their string of a half dozen goose eggs. Spencer opened with a homer into the left field stand. Brown was hit by a pitched ball and Judge beat out a roller to Weiland. Meyer popped to Cissell but Goslin doubled to right, scoring Brown and putting Judge on third. Cronin then accomplished the second homer of the inning, scoring Judge and Goslin ahead of him. Master Weiland then was led away and another youth, Master McKain, was pushed forth. Cissell threw out West and the score had assumed its final status.

With the last eastern invasion half over, the Sox have a record of two victories in eight starts against the club that saves them from the cellar and the club that is one flight up. Today starts a week and a day of competition with the best in the league, the Yankees first, followed by the Athletics. And to meet these folks, Manager Blackburne has two pitchers—Thomas, who has a desperate cold, and Faber, who is recovering from the grip. It is probable Lyons will get steamed up to pitching a creditable game against each of the big shot clubs, but there has been little of cheer in his recent performances.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

GLEDHILL BEATS VINES IN FINAL FOR JUNIOR TITLE

Wins in Straight Sets, 6-4, 6-1, 6-4.

Culver, Ind., Aug. 17.—Keith Gledhill of Santa Barbara is the national junior tennis champion. In a masterful exhibition of brilliant, heady playing he crushed his doubles partner, Ellsworth Vines of Pasadena, to take the title in three sets, 6-4, 6-1, 6-4.

California youngsters reign supreme for Jay Cohn, a 14 year old Santa Monica star, garnered the singles honors in the boys' division when he swept through Bernard Friedman of Philadelphia, 6-2, 6-0. And yesterday Gledhill and Vines took the junior doubles championship and Cohn and Charles Hunt of California captured the boys' team honors.

Vines Forced Into Errors.

Gledhill was at the top of his game today and controlled the balance of the play, looping the ball from corner to corner until he could force the flat hitting Vines to error, or set one up that could be tucked away for a placement. Vines is strictly an offensive player, driving everything for the lines, and when he is on his game he is almost unbeatable, but today his scooting shots were missing the narrow ribbons by inches on the all important points.

Noting this fact early in the match, the canny Gledhill stayed in the back court and forced his partner to run, waiting for the almost inevitable error or set up. A stroke analysis shows that Vines made twice as many placements, but also netted or drove the ball out almost twice as much as his steadier opponent.

Cohn Wins by Strategy.

Cohn triumphed by superior all around playing. Friedman had created quite a furor by upsetting Dick Hebard of White Plains, New York, the defending champion, yesterday, but Cohn was unimpressed. The Philadelphia lad has few strokes, depending on popping the ball back eternally, and letting his opponent beat himself.

Seeing that Friedman's shots lacked sting and were dropping about the service line, Cohn took that position on every point, dropping back to play a deeper ball on the rise and volleying the short ones for crisp placements. Consequently he brushed through the dazed Friedman to lose but two games in the entire match.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By Westbrook Pegler

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 17.—It is my duty to warn all persons of the pitfalls and temptations which are being established at this time in Auga Caliente, state of Lower California, republic of Mexico, just a step to the southward of President Hoover's home state.

Advices are to hand indicating that games of more or less chance and refreshments of a stimulating character will abound in this place and that the whole enterprise is being created for the sinister purpose of seducing citizens of the United States.

It is even more disturbing to have to report these temptations are being devised by three unthinkable or wilfully wrong minded Californians, by names Baron Long, James Crofton and Wirt G. Bowman.

Freighters Laden with Bottled, Barrelled Produce.

At this time, one hears, there are two ocean freighters of fairly liberal tonnage en voyage from Bordeaux to Mexico, heavy laden with bottled and barrelled produce of France, Scotland and Germany, Mr. Long having recently completed a shopping tour which took him to Edinburgh, Reims, Beaune, Munich and Pilsen. He has disavowed any intention to lead his fellow citizens into temptation, but I question the young man's sincerity, as he seems determined to make the temptation quite accessible with the manifest idea that they will nose it out of their own accord. I have my opinion of any American citizen who would place temptation of this kind so close to the abode of so many Americans who put all thought of such matters utterly out of their minds ten years ago, come October.

Withdraws in Face of Superior Numbers.

There was a very brisk competition for the monopoly on the seduction business at Agua Caliente. For some years Mr. James J. Coffroth of California, the prize fight promoter of the pre-Rickard era, conducted a race track at Tia Juana, which is approximately the same place as Agua Caliente. He operated the track under a monopolistic grant from the Mexican government, but it appears that the three other Californians inspected the dates of his lease and discerned that it was to expire last winter. Having ascertained this, these three obtained a similar grant and set about building a bigger race track, a hotel and also a casino which will be devoted exclusively to the sale of stimulating beverages and the spieling of chancy games for keeps.

Mr. Coffroth, at first, was inclined to demur, but it now appears that he has withdrawn in the face of superior forces. The three new boys are advertising a big horse-race to be run next winter, which will be worth about $140,000 to the winning owner. They also are mouthing generous offers to the heavyweight prize fighters, but whether they really intend to add pugilism to their program of bad habits, or merely wish to see the name of their sinkhole in the papers, I am unable to determine.

Jack Dempsey has indorsed Agua Caliente and the pleasures thereof and has been making coy gestures as of an old pugilist preparing to return to the ring. However, it may be remembered that only last winter Mr. Dempsey indorsed Miami Beach and made the same gestures there. The old showman has become a professional capper for the lack of anything better to do, and I would not be surprised to read that he had indorsed Gary, Ind., as a pleasure resort, extolling the architectural beauty of the cement works.

Thus, the citizens residing to the westward of the Mississippi will be subjected to the same temptations that have beset those residing on the hither side, and the late Tex Rickard's foresight is being vindicated posthumously. It may be remembered that when Mr. Rickard settled in Miami last year, he envisioned a great new development in the pleasure business. It occurred to him that this country had developed a vast number of wealthy people of various grades from the very rich to the moderately well to do. He also noticed that many people were deferring their vacations until the winter, or taking extra vacations in winter, and spending them in semi-tropical resorts.

Pitfalls and temptations are being established in Agua Caliente.

Anticipated a Jelly Dividend.

That was why he built a casino, or gambling house, of rare charm on the beach at Miami. He intended to run only high percentage games, roulette, bird-cage, hazard, chuck-a-luck, the wheel of fortune and klondike. Mr. Rickard knew that on an average he would have an advantage of at least five and five-nineteenths per cent in his favor. So on a season's play of ten or fifteen millions, he anticipated a jolly dividend. In Tia Juana, at an ordinary gambling house, the Foreign club, dealing in high percentage games, one season's profits had been $800,000. At Bradley's up the shore from Miami the season's play ran into many millions, the traffic per night being much more brisk than that of Monte Carlo. Mr. Rickard had a vision, but he got appendicitis.

However, there are able and willing hands to spin the wheel, toss the dice and jiggle the mixers at the bars in Cuba, the Bahamas and Florida, the winter quarters of folly on the east coast, and now the same temptations are being placed in the way of the home-loving millions westward of the big river.

Well, they can't say your correspondent didn't warn them.

PLAN NEW CLUB QUARTERS.

The Chicago Yacht club plans to erect a $3,000,000 building at the foot of Monroe street.

World Series Ticket Demand May Set Mark

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The impending scramble for world's series tickets undoubtedly will be the most desperate on record. It now is estimated there will be 200,000 applications for each of the first two games of the series, which will be played at Wrigley field in Chicago, and there is no reason to believe the demands will be fewer for the third, fourth and the fifth games, which are to be played in Philadelphia.

Of course the fact that Philadelphia and Chicago have hungered for a world's series for so many years is the commanding element in the expected record ticket market. Added to this is the fact that the combined capacities of Wrigley field and Shibe park would be only a few hundred more than the capacity of Yankee stadium, where many of the world's series games have been played in the last ten years.

Slim Chance of Increase.

The chance to increase the seating capacity at Wrigley field is severely limited. Unlike the sites of world's series games in Pittsburgh and Washington and at the Polo grounds in New York, there is little opportunity to erect temporary seats. The Cubs and A's are in about the same fix as St. Louis was—if they can spring the seating arrangements by 3,000 they will have to go some.

They don't have ground rules at the world's series which permit the well known practice of stretching ropes in the outfield. The present playing fields at both parks will be available for ball playing only.

May Reserve All Seats.

Although the managements of both the Cubs and A's have refrained from issuing statements relative to the series, being subscribers to the theory it is sinful to count chickens before they are hatched, it is said that all seats—bleachers and all—will be reserved and consequently there will be no public sale on the day of each game. If this plan is carried out, it will set a precedent in world's series ticket sales.

Persons seeking to be forehanded by sending in early requests are meeting with disappointment. Their checks are being fired back. No applications will be received until public announcement is made.

A. A. U. BAN MAY KEEP SCHWARTZ FROM MARATHON

Al Schwartz, national collegiate swimming champion, considered a leading contender for the 21st running of the I. A. C. marathon swim, may not race Ray Ruddy, the New Yorker who is national distance champion, on Aug. 31 in Lake Michigan. It was learned yesterday that the suspension of Schwartz by the A. A. U. for competing in an Amateur Athletic federation meet last year still stands.

The infraction of the rule which automatically suspends swimmers who compete in meets unsanctioned by the A. A. U. acted to bar a number of Tom Robinson's swimmers last year.

JUSTINA BRINGS $6,250 IN SALE AT HAWTHORNE

Justina, a 2 year old daughter of King Heather-Lady Julian, brought top price of $6,250 in the auction of horses conducted in the Hawthorne paddock yesterday. She was purchased by Ed Haughton of Kentucky.

Princess Evol went to W. F. Benton for $3,250; Lord Concord to Harned Brothers for $1,100; Ella Bank to Joe McBride for $700, and Dodie Leighton to Mrs. R. Pollard for $1,600.

They are among the nine horses sold in the dispersal sale of J. W. Marchbank of California, who is retiring from the turf.

American Pin Congress to Enforce New Ruling

According to a new ruling of the American Bowling congress, effective during the 1929-30 season, no bowler who is not a member of a sanctioned organization will be allowed to participate in tournaments or leagues.

Why Do Cubs Lead League? Chicago Boys Give Reasons

the world's series game but in telling you what I have longed to tell about the Cubs. I have never seen a Major league game yet. We have a radio and I listen to every Cub game I can. I read the papers and look at the players' pictures with pride. I'm sure I could tell them all now when I look at them.

The Cub team is my only favorite, I have no others. I had a feeling the Cubs are going to win the pennant from the start. I didn't forget them winning those games before the season started.

If you want the name of my favorite, he is Hack Wilson. He is on the tip of every boy's tongue I know. I like the others, too, and Murderers' row. Whenever I hear that they didn't hit good and win the game I just say to myself, "They'll do better tomorrow." I've never had the chance of meeting any of the Cub players and hope to yet. Sincerely yours,

LEONARD ROWE, age 15,
2241 North Spaulding avenue.

THE DANGEROUS GRIMM.

Dear Sirs: I am a Cub booster and have bragged about them again and again, and have put many a listener to sleep while I talked on, but to get paid for talking about them—O, boy! Listen, gentlemen:

Tie score, two men on, two outs, and Riggs Stephenson of the Chicago Cubs is at bath. The crowd hushes expectantly—then takes a deep breath and loosens up as the pitcher throws the first ball. Obviously an intentional pass—yes, it is. The next man comes to bat. The crowd again hushes. A pitch. Wham! A triple, out against the wall! Another ball game for the Cubs.

Who did it? Why, good old Charley Grimm, of course. How many times has the man in front of him been walked to get at Charley and he came through? Dozens of 'em. I think he is one of the chief reasons for the Cubs' successful season. He is the best first baseman in both leagues, including Bottomley and Gehrig. His batting and fielding averages can be compared with the best of them.

Of course, Bush, Wilson and Hornsby, and all the Cubs are great, too, and I know that Chicago will have a world series this year.

Your's truly,
HAROLD SAMUELSON (age 16),
4144 Berkeley avenue.

PULLS FOR HACK.

O boy, when Hack Wilson hits that pill it goes. I hope Hack will be the leading home run hitter in the National league. I saw Hack make a nose dive catch. He caught the ball sliding on his elbows. Hack is fielding like a million dollars. And if Hornsby, Grimm, Cuyler and Stephenson keep up their good work the Cubs will surely win. Oh boy, how I would like to see the world series played at Wrigley field and the Cubs be the winners!

A Cub fan.
ROBERT EILS (10 years old),
131 Ashland avenue, River Forest, Ill.

McCARTHY BACKS PITCHERS.

Dear Editor: The best thing which pleases me about the Cubs is Joe McCarthy's backing and confidence he has in a pitcher. For an example, take Bush. He was in a hole in the second inning after having let in five runs against the Phillies. McCarthy didn't take him out. If McGraw was managing the team I believe Bush would have been in the showers after that inning.

Another example is the second game on the Fourth of July. I saw Blake get himself into a pretty bad situation. But McCarthy kept him in. This shows the confidence a manager has in his ball club and pitchers. If that isn't a big asset to a team, I don't know what is. This is enough to have the Cubs win the pennant.

Truly yours,
JOE BENSON,
4730 Forsyth avenue, East Chicago, Ind.
East Chicago, Ind.

CLIFF HEATHCOTE, M. D.

Dear Editor: I think the man who put the Cubs where they are is Dr. Cliff Heathcote. According to my estimation (although the estimations of a 15 year old kid may not mean much), Cliff is undoubtedly the best all around southpaw outfielder in the National league.

When Kiki Cuyler was recently injured the Cubs were very fortunate to have Heathcote come to field and hit as steadily as any regular in both circuits.

You are probably wondering, probably amused, by the title of doctor. Cliff does not cure the Cub players by medicinal process, but by sheer good playing. When an injured or ailing player looks out on the field and sees his position being put in a dangerous state by the playing of Heathcote he tries to get well as soon as possible in order to get back on the playing field. Sincerely yours,

ABE AVER, age 15,
542 North Homan avenue.

CUBS HAVE COLOR.

Dear Sir:

What I like most about the Cubs is their color—and by color I mean the knack of pulling the unexpected; of coming up from behind to stow away the ball; of thrilling the fans with some timely base clout or a bit of sensational fielding.

Suddenly Cuyler scoots down to second and slides into the sack for another stolen base; or Grimm stretches for one of his circus catches; or some fellow like Hornsby or Wilson comes through in a pinch with an extra base hit. All this and much else goes to make the Cubs the most colorful team in the league.

The Cubs are on top for three reasons: their twirlers led by Bush and Root continue to manufacture carloads of trouble for the opposition; their murderer's row continues to murder the apple and to produce the right hits at the wrong moment—for the opposition; and in the tight spots their fielders continue to bear down and give flawless support.

Yours very truly,
BERNARD ADLERBLUM,

Two of Red's Old Teammates to Be Here Faber Day

Dubuque, Ia., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Two Dubuque men who caught Red Faber's spitters long before he became famous will be among those who will make the trip to Chicago next Tuesday to help celebrate Faber day at Comiskey park.

The two former catchers are the Rev. Nicholas A. Steffen, dean of Loras hall, Columbia college, and Arthus Melchior, assistant cashier at the Consolidated National bank here. Melchior caught for the Dubuque Tigers, a semipro team on which Faber made his debut as a pitcher. Father Steffen caught Red's twisters when he and Faber were classmates at Columbia college, then known as St. Joseph's college. Faber and Steffen formed one of the greatest college batteries of that time.

About 100 Faber fans from Dubuque and Cascade, Red's home town, will journey on the special leaving Dubuque early Tuesday. After the Yankee-White Sox game they will be entertained at a stag party at the Comiskey club house. Dubuque people are contributing to a pot of gold to be presented to the veteran Sox hurler.

WALKER REACHES CRISIS OF CAREER IN LOMSKI BOUT

New York, Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Mickey Walker arrives at the crossroads of his career Monday night in Philadelphia, when he faces Leo Lomski, light heavyweight title challenger from Aberdeen, Wash., in a ten round bout to a decision. They will battle at catch weights in the Sesquicentennial stadium.

If Walker wins it means his passing as world's middleweight king. Inasmuch as Tommy Loughran is getting ready to surrender his 175 pound crown and Walker and Lomski are the two leading claimants, the winner likely will be looked upon as his successor. Walker, it is said, no longer can make the middleweight weight and his ambitions are centered in succeeding Loughran, with whom he fought a close fight in Chicago recently.

THREE SHOWS ON FISTIC PROGRAM FOR THIS WEEK

Delmont and Kerwin Head Card Tomorrow.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Three boxing shows will command the attention of Chicago boxing fans this week. The fights will be held under the direction of the new commission composed of Brig. Gen. John V. Clinnin, George Getz and Fred Gardner.

EARL MASTRO.

Danny Delmont of the west side and George Kerwin of the north side will top the card at the Logan square open air arena, 2233 Milwaukee avenue, tomorrow night. Both are stiff right hand punchers, and the fight may not go the limit. Bobby O'Hara and Mickey McLaughlin, local 140-pounders, meet in the eight round semi-windup. Four other fights round out the card.

Wednesday night, Promoter Mique Malloy will stage a show at White City. Cowboy Dula and Jack McKenna of Toronto will meet in the feature bout. Malloy has scheduled five other fights.

Rene DeVos, European middleweight, who is a strong contender for Mickey Walker's middleweight title, and Johnny Burns, hard hitting Californian, will feature the series of bouts at the Chicago Stadium Friday night. Promoter Harmon will try to match the winner with Walker for the 160 pound title.

The show, however, should be featured by the ten rounder between Earl Mastro and Eddie Shea, strong contenders for the world's featherweight title held by Andre Routis of France. Harmon has asked the National Boxing association and the Illinois Boxing commission to have the winner of this fight proclaimed the American featherweight champion. They will meet at 130 pounds.

My Sullivan and Roxey Allen will clash in the third ten rounder and Joey Medill, local lightweight, will face Stanislaus Loayza of New York in the other fight of ten rounds. Medill is making a bid for Sammy Mandell's lightweight title, and a victory over the New Yorker will better his chances of getting into the ring with the champion.

SCHMELING AND JACOBS HERE FOR CONFERENCE

Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, and Manager Joe Jacobs arrived here yesterday from Minneapolis to confer with Promoter Paddy Harmon regarding a match to be held with Otto Von Porat at a Chicago baseball park next month. Reports that Schmeling would meet Jack Dempsey in Chicago yesterday were untrue. According to Secretary Leonard Sachs, Dempsey will not be in Chicago until next Wednesday.

Harmon announced he may have something definite to say in a few days regarding the Schmeling-Von Porat bout.

New Grid Coaches to Take Reins at Leading Colleges

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Many leading university and college football squads will start preliminary training the latter part of the month, and it is interesting to note some of the changes which have taken place in the coaching staffs.

DR. J. W. WILCE.

Dr. John W. Wilce, one of the smartest coaches in the country, who placed Ohio State university on the map with such great players as Harley and Stinchcomb, has been succeeded by Sam Willaman, who learned his football at Ohio State and afterward coached at Ames. For the last two years Willaman has been assistant to Dr. Wilce.

Willaman knows football. He is a great believer in the theory that an offense is the best defense. For this reason, Ohio State will be equipped with strong scoring plays, and its coaches will depend upon outscoring opponents.

Big Ten Coaches

Illinois—Robert Zuppke.
Ohio State—Sam Willaman.
Minnesota—Dr. C. W. Spears.
Indiana—H. O. Fore.
Northwestern—Richard Hanley.
Wisconsin—Glen Thistlethwaite.
Michigan—Harry Kipke.
Iowa—Bert Ingwersen.
Purdue—James Phelan.
Chicago—A. A. Stagg.

Next to Billy Heston, Harry Kipke, who will be head coach at Michigan, is regarded as the greatest half back in the Ann Arbor school's football history. Kipke was one of the greatest kickers in the game. In addition to punting forty and fifty yards consistently, he was able to place his kicks so they were difficult for the receivers to handle.

Kipke also was an accurate forward passer, and a splendid ball carrier. His experience as a player and coach should make him successful at Michigan providing material is available. Last year he coached at Michigan State.

Another important change in the coaching staffs of leading universities is that at Nebraska. Dana X. Bible, who learned his football at Carson-Newman university, will succeed Coach Berg at Nebraska. Bible is a member of the rules committee, and has been associated with football for more than 20 years.

The Chicago shops track team carried off all the honors yesterday when its members won the team, individual, and most meritorious performance trophies at the second annual track and field meet of the Chicago and North Western railway held in the Evanston High school field in Evanston. The team scored 22 points, besting its nearest rival, the Dakota division team, by ten points. More than 5,000 people witnessed the meet from the nine states on the North Western system.

The baseball championship for the North Western system went to the Nebraska division team of the C., St. P., M. & O. railway when George Redboy, Black Hills division pitcher weakened in the seventh inning and issued enough passes to give the Nebraska boys the game.

Oscar Hansen of Fremont, Neb., won the trap shooting title at Lincoln Park Gun club yesterday morning when he broke 50 clay pigeons without a miss.

The Overlands won the girls' indoor championship when they defeated the Vikings, last year's champions, in an extra inning game, 8-7.

Carl Reedy of the Lake Shore division won the singles title in horseshoe pitching and Robert and James F. Walls of the Sioux City division won the doubles championship.

Henry A. Smith of the Chicago shops team won the cup for most meritorious performance when he ran the 440 yard run in 55 1-5 seconds, clipping one and one-fifth seconds off last year's mark. John E. Holden of the same team won the individual cup with firsts in the high jump and medley relay and a second in the broad jump.

PEASANT WINS HISTORIC RACE AT SIENA, ITALY

ROME, Aug. 17. — The American tourist traffic in Italy was concentrated this week-end at the small medieval Tuscan town of Siena, near Florence, where, before 20,000 visitors and townsmen in gala costumes, the picturesque horse race called "Pallo di Siena" was run off around the town square. The Pallo is held twice each summer in accordance with a custom that dates from the middle ages.

Today's races were witnessed by Minister of Communications Ciano. With colorful decorations draped from the balconies facing the square, the ceremonies began with a parade of the entrants in the race around the piazza, followed by a cortege of people in middle ages costumes. A peasant named Giraffa won today's contest. He rode bareback. After the victory a great festival was given in his honor.

The central division championships for outboard motors will be held Sept. 7 and 8. This was announced by M. L. Bromberg of the Columbia Yacht club, which will conduct the regatta. The meet will be held off Navy pier and an officially surveyed course will be laid out shortly.

The regatta will be open to outboard pilots from North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. It is expected that 150 of the fastest outboards in this division will come to Chicago for this regatta. The winners of this and other divisional meets will compete for national championships at Peoria Oct. 12 and 13.

It also is expected that a number of women who own horses will be included among the entrants. Among these will be Mrs. A. C. Thompson of Chicago.

Nature Warns Sportsmen of Hunting Time

BY BOB BECKER.

Although thousands of fishermen, campers, canoeists and other vacationists now are in the north woods enjoying "official" summer vacations, there are many signs which nature has hung out to signal that it is not too early for sportsmen to think about the coming hunting season.

The blackeyed Susans are forming a gold and black flower combination to give an autumn atmosphere to the landscape and blackbirds are beginning to flock together for their great fall conventions which bring thousands into one flock. So here we have two preliminary "numbers" for the colorful autumn chorus.

Although the Illinois water fowl season does not open until Sept. 24, our correspondence indicates that some of the boys are taking time out in the hot month of August to plan for September shooting. Already they are writing about duck seasons both in this state and in the Dakotas. From along the upper Illinois comes word of a large number of "native" ducks—birds which found the sloughs, bayous, marshes and swamps ideal for nesting—and instead of traveling north these ducks (including many mallards) settled down and raised their families in Illinois.

Owners of land suitable for duck hunting already are taking reservations from day hunters—another indication that it is not far to the corner where we turn to autumn.

This is an excellent time for city hunters who do considerable week-end touring to look up duck, rabbit, and pheasant shooting spots downstate. The suggestion is, get acquainted with the farmers and secure permission to hunt on their lands and do it now.

ILLINI GRIDIRON NEWLY CARPETED FOR FALL GAMES

Champaign, Ill., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—The care shown the putting greens on a golf course has nothing on the pains taken with the turf which blankets the playing field of the University of Illinois stadium.

Because the old grass was worn bare in spots and was slippery in damp weather, the gridiron was completely resurfaced this summer at a cost of approximately $3,000.

To find a sod which had the proper mixture of sand, clay, and loam to assure good drainage and freedom from obnoxious weeds, the Illini went to an old pasture on the banks of a stream 15 miles from the campus. After the new grass was imported and laid place by piece on the field, sprinklers were set up and the ground watered for several hours each night.

The grass which Red Grange transformed into a royal carpet of emerald with his memorable dashes has been removed. The wet seasons of 1924 and 1925 have been hard on it. With black loam at its base it became as hard and packed after rains that it was impossible to seed in new grass.

BEACON HILL WINS TRAVERS STAKE, OLDEST IN U. S.

Coronation Is Destroyed Following Injury

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 17.—[Special.]—The oldest stake in the United States went to Harry Payne Whitney for the first time today when his Beacon Hill finished in front in the Travers Midsummer Derby, outstanding event for 3 year olds at this meeting. The Travers was first run in 1864. For many years since then the elder Whitney or the present one has tried for the stake, but never was successful.

Perhaps, no easier victory has ever been scored in the famous mile and a quarter test than Beacon Hill's. A crowd of 25,000 persons watched the astonishment as he dashed out at the start, never to be pushed, winning as he pleased four lengths ahead of the field. He was the 11 to 5 favorite. The Spare was 5 to 1 to win and 2 to 1 to place.

John B. Macomber's Red Bridge and the Greentree Stable's Coronation renewed their rivalry in the 31st running of the Beverwyck steeplechase and the former won. Coronation met with a serious mishap. The gallant old son of Johren broke down while in full stride and while leading. He was destroyed almost immediately. He was going smoothly when he appeared to bobble in his stride and then Jockey Lambert pulled up. Coronation limped badly and appeared to have broken his leg. John Hay (Jock) Whitney, son of Mrs. Payne Whitney, owner of the Greentree stable, left his seat in the stand and ran across the infield to the point on the backstretch where Coronation was standing. Evidently he gave the order that the old fellow be destroyed.

The race was over the two mile course and Red Bridge finished in 4:14 3-5, adding the purse of $3,725 to his score.

Fans Will See Innovations at Lincoln Fields

MATT WINN.

Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf association and director of the Lincoln Fields and Washington Park tracks, isn't easy to sell when the proposition concerns the conduct of his race tracks.

But he announced yesterday that Chicago racegoers will find three innovations at Lincoln Fields one week from tomorrow afternoon when an autumn season of 31 days will open.

The Bahr starting gate, which has been so successful at Hawthorne, has been adopted at Lincoln Fields, Col. Winn announced. New gates which will permit fields of 14 and 16 horses to leave them will be built. They will be used in practically every start during the meeting.

The loud speaker system which describes the progress of the races is now being installed. Pat Horgan will preside at the microphone, and the machine is the latest turned out.

Clubhouse for Public.

The third innovation is "The Patio," the public's clubhouse, in the twin concrete stands just north of the grand stand. It is to be furnished almost as lavishly as the clubhouse proper and will have its own mutuel betting department, spacious lawns, a restaurant, lounges and other clubliike features. It is the first time a clubhouse has been built on any race track in America for the patrons who pay only the regular admission price of $1.20.

The Lincoln Fields season, which opens Aug. 26 and closes Sept. 28, brings the third renewal of the rich Lincoln handicap, an event for 3 year olds and upward at a mile and a quarter. It will offer $25,000 in added money and is to be run Sept. 7. In other years the Lincoln has attracted on of the greatest handicap fields of the year in America, and the entries indicate it will draw just as notable a field this season.

Bruce Head is the new general manager at Lincoln Fields. He comes to the Crete track from Fairmount Park and has the promise of every big stable in the west and of many from the east that they will campaign there throughout the autumn meeting.

Rich Stakes on Program.

Six rich stakes are on the program, the schedule being as follows:

Aug. 31—Crete handicap, 6 furlongs, $5,000 added.
Sept. 2—Joliet handicap, 2 year olds, $5,000 added.
Sept. 7—Lincoln handicap, 1¼ miles, $25,000 added.
Sept. 14—Stager handicap, 1 mile, $5,000 added.
Sept. 21—Dearborn handicap, 2 year olds, $5,000 added.
Sept. 28—Marquette handicap, 1¼ miles, $10,000 added.

Blue Larkspur Injury Dims Rich Stakes

Since Blue Larkspur went wrong in training at Saratoga, the 3 year race on the American turf has shaped up as the most ordinary in many years.

The rich Lawrence Realization stakes, the Latonia championship and other fixtures will be at the mercy of the most ordinary lot of 3 year olds to race either in the east or west in several seasons, many seasoned turfmen believe.

Blue Larkspur raced away with the championship before his training injuries put him out of commission. He took the title by winning the Withers, the Belmont stakes and the American classic. And taking him out of the competition at a time when he had a chance to go after the alltime money winning record is perhaps the cause of the sad appearance of the fall 3 year old stakes.

List Shows Inconsistencies.

A full list of the 17 most important 3 year old stakes run in America this year shows how inconsistent the 3 year olds, with the exception of Blue Larkspur, have raced. It includes every fixture of the season strictly for 3 year olds, and it follows:

Horse	Dis.	Winner	Amount won.
Belmont Stakes	1½	Blue Larkspur	$59,650
American Classic	1¼	Blue Larkspur	50,900
Kentucky Derby	1¼	C. Van Dusen	53,900
Preakness	1¼	Dr. Freeland	52,225
American Derby	1¼	Windy City	47,550
Tia Juana Derby	1¼	Nalsipur	30,100
Withers	1	Blue Larkspur	28,200
Fairmount Derby	1¼	Karl Eitel	23,650
Lakeside Derby	1¼	Buddy Basil	23,075
Dayton Stakes	1¼	Grey Coat	19,450
Louisiana Derby	1¼	Calf Roper	15,325
Ohio State Derby	1¼	Thistle Fyrs.	11,800
Wood Memorial	1¼	Esmre	11,000
Sheffield Stakes	1	Jack High	9,300
Florida Derby	1¼	Upset Lad	8,600
Empire City Derby	1¼	Healy	6,400
Miller Stakes	1⅛	Marine	5,100

With this list of results in mind, we asked a competent western handicapper for his rating of the 3 year olds. Providing all the leaders met in a mile and a quarter race, he said his weight assignments would be about as follows:

Blue Larkspur	130	Karl Eitel	114
Jack High	128	Buddy Basil	114
Clyde Van Dusen	126	Healy	114
Nalsipur	124	Calf Roper	112
Dr. Freeland	120	Esmre	112
Windy City	118	Upset Lad	110
Grey Coat	118	Thistle Fyrs	108

Van Dusen Too Inconsistent.

This handicapper declared that at a mile he would rate Blue Larkspur, Jack High, and Chestnut Oak all at equal weights. At one mile and a quarter, however, he said Chestnut Oak would drop completely out of the picture and Jack High would fall two points below Blue Larkspur.

"Clyde Van Dusen has been too inconsistent to be rated with Blue Larkspur and Jack High," the handicapper said. "He is a small horse and has been subjected to a very hard campaign. He has been beaten at times by very ordinary horses and most of his races indicate he is not the stayer type of Blue Larkspur and Jack High."

He declared there wasn't a great colt among all the other 3 year old stake winners with the possible exception of Karl Eitel, which is untried except of the Fairmount Derby in which he defeated a very ordinary band.

Midwicks Beat Oak Brook for U. S. Polo Title

A four goal handicap and an injury to Tex Crites, Oak Brook back, cost the Chicago entry the national intercircuit polo final at Onwentsia yesterday. The Midwicks of Pasadena, Cal., won the championship game, 10 to 9.

COL. N. E. MARGETTS.

Three periods of fast play by Oak Brook evened the count, when Paul Butler scored three goals and a horse tallied one. However, a marker in the fourth period, the first scored by the Golden State team, added to its handicap, giving it a 5 to 4 advantage at half time. Both teams counted once in the fifth, but Midwick went scoreless in the sixth while Oak Brook was collecting two tallies to go into a 7 to 6 lead.

Early in the seventh period Oak Brook increased its margin with a goal and Midwick appeared to be out of the running. At this point Crites was heavily bumped and his horse rolled over on him, forcing him from the game. Col. N. E. Margetts came in to take over the back position. Capt. Neil McCarthy of Midwick scored two goals before the end of the period and the two teams were all even again.

The Californians took the lead with a goal by Wrightsman early in the final chukker, but Art Meckel tied it up after some great riding and fine stock work. With two minutes to go, McCarthy broke away and drove in the winning goal for the Midwicks.

The lineup and summary:

MIDWICK [10].	Position.	OAK BROOK [9]
Wrightsman	No. 1	Meckel
McCarthy (Capt.)	No. 2	Butler, (Capt.)
Paddock	No. 3	Crawford
Wilson	Back	Crites-Margetts

Midwick ..... 2021 1022—10
Oak Brook ..... 1310 1211— 9

Wightman-Wills Champion Doubles Team Breaks Up

New York, Aug. 17.—(AP)—The breakup of the 1928 national championship women's doubles combination of Helen Wills and Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman of Brookline, Mass., was revealed today with announcement that Marjorie Morrill, Dedham, Mass., will be Mrs. Wightman's partner in the title tournament at Forest Hills next week.

Miss Wills has not yet entered the doubles event, although she is expected to do so before the draw is made on Tuesday.

Throughout this season, both in Europe and in the Wightman cup matches here, Miss Wills has paired with Miss Edith Cross of San Francisco, third in the national singles ranking, but in the international series with the English this combination was beaten decisively in straight sets.

Miss Cross, who shared runner-up honors last year when teamed with Mrs. L. A. Harper, also of San Francisco, has sent in her entry for next week's play in doubles, as well as singles, but without designating a partner.

With Miss Wills and Mrs. Wightman not defending their 1928 title, the threat of a British monopoly of doubles honors increased as this pair was considered about the strongest that could be put together in this country.

GOLFERS DIVIDED IN CONTROVERSY OVER BALL SIZE

New Ball Brought Into Discussion.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

It seems a letter written to the London Times by Lord Dunedin and quoted in these columns has stirred up a medley of protest and commendation by golfers who read it. The viscount's letter attacked that recurrent assertion that putting has become too great a part of golf, and he condemned the proposal to counteract that alleged fault in the game by increasing the diameter of the cups.

Apparently the fulcrum of the arguments in this country is the adoption of the larger and lighter ball as a standard beginning Jan. 1, 1931. Correspondents have put forth varying thoughts on the effect of the new ball, but in so far as this article is concerned only the new balls' relation to putting and the question of the larger hole will be considered.

Reasons for Better Putting.

The basis of most of the "larger hole" advocates' contentions is the point blank method of reasoning that for a larger ball, we should have a "larger cup." United States Golf association officials have said the new ball will be a better putting ball, without offering specific reasons.

There are several reasons why it might be a better putting ball, but the new size and weight has not been in play long enough for any one to become accustomed to it. It would appear the larger ball would not be deflected by slight inequalities of the green as easily as the present ball. The larger ball might be easier to sight and it can be hit more firmly, both because it isn't supposed to have as much resiliency and because it loses speed more quickly, which would help in holding a putt on its line.

All of these seem rather theoretical, inasmuch as the difference in size is six-hundredths of an inch and in weight seven-hundredths of an ounce. Whether these slight differences, which seem to make no more than five per centum difference in length of a drive, can affect putting much is extremely doubtful. But even such small changes might help many putts to drop instead of running past the cup.

"Seems Too Big for Cup."

Against these arguments that the new ball will putt better, are the statements of correspondents who have tried the new ball that it "seems too big for the cup," and that they putt badly with it. The difference to the eye is, of course, decidedly noticeable in first playing the bigger ball, which is an additional "mental hazard." Whether it could be overcome when golfers become more accustomed to the larger size is probable but by no means certain.

The statement the larger ball needs a larger cup to keep the balance in putting is, however, surely fallacious. The increase in the diameter of the ball is slightly less than four per cent, and a proportionate increase in the size of the cup [now four and a quarter inches] would be about one-sixth of an inch. Few putts are missed by a sixth of an inch, so it would seem that could make little difference.

Yet that isn't the point of the problem, for it isn't the diameter of the ball, but its center of gravity, which makes it drop into the cup or stay out. Both balls should have the same center of gravity—that is, the center of the ball. A putt with the present ball that just drops into the "side door" of the cup falls because it has more weight on the side of the hole than on the side away from the hole. In other words, if the ball's center of gravity is inside the edge of the cup, the ball falls in.

Physics Shows Folly of Plea.

Simple physics will show how baseless is the "larger ball, larger cup" plea. If the present ball had .82 of an inch inside the cup's edge and .80 of an inch outside it would fall in. The same putt with a new ball would have .85 of an inch inside the edge and .83 of an inch outside and also drop. The proportion holds true in the division of the weight of the ball. It is not the size or weight, but the position of the center of the ball that makes the difference.

These are small figures, hundredths of an inch and hundredths of an ounce, which might easily be upset by the resistance of a blade of grass. Yet they are the difference by which some putts drop and others don't, and the putt's "line of flight"—from the center of the ball to a point within the sides of the cup in a good putt—remains the same whether the putt is made with the old ball or the new.

Plymouth excels in motor car Essentials

FULL SIZE

THE four things to consider most in selecting a motor car, are: The body, wherein you ride; the engine, which makes the car go; the brakes, on which your safety depends; the first cost and the economy of operation and maintenance, which affect your pocketbook.

ROOMIEST, STRONGEST, MOST STYLISH BODIES

Plymouth bodies are full-size—outmeasuring the entire low-priced field in leg-room, elbow-room and head-room. Plymouth bodies are the strongest to be found on any automobile at either a low or a medium price. Plymouth bodies are fortified for silence and safety, yet smartly styled and handsomely finished.

SMOOTHEST, QUIETEST ENGINE

The Plymouth power plant follows throughout the basic principles of Chrysler engineering—with Chrysler-like results in a performance that is flexible, smooth, swift and quiet at all speeds.

SUREST, SAFEST BRAKES

The full-size Plymouth is by far the safest low-priced car on the road. It is the only low-priced car with Chrysler weatherproof internal-expanding four-wheel hydraulic brakes, always self-equalizing, noiseless and positive in action.

LOW UPKEEP COST

The Plymouth is America's lowest-priced full-size car. More than that—its simple, rugged and efficient engine benefits you by a remarkably sparing use of gasoline and oil, and guarantees you a minimum need of service attention.

THE FULL-SIZE FOUR-DOOR SEDAN, $695. Special equipment extra

Cubs' Fielding Averages Tell Same Story; Heathcote, Grimm

The Cubs' fielding averages tell the same story each week: Cliff Heathcote tops the entire team with a perfect record and Charley Grimm shows the way for the regulars with a .993 mark. Capt. Charley has accepted 1,224 chances with only nine errors. Woody English has committed the most errors, 30 in all, but his territory probably is the most difficult to patrol. The averages:

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

REMOVE FREAK MOTOR HAZARD IN NILES CENTER

Other Highway Barriers to Be Eliminated.

BY HAL FOUST.

The frame house projecting into the right of way at Dempster street and Gross Point road, Niles Center, was being removed last week. For the last eight months, since the widening of Dempster, the building has formed one of the worst traffic hazards in the northwest section of Cook county.

The situation at the intersection was one of the freaks of highway engineering that developed in the county due to a policy practiced by County Highway Superintendent Quinlan in meeting stubborn right of way difficulties. Where a small parcel of right of way is tied up by legal proceedings, Maj. Quinlan has been laying concrete up to the private property, rather than delaying an entire paving project.

Horses Fail to Avert Crashes.

The house stuck several feet into the pavement from the south curb line of Dempster street at the intersection. Wooden horses with black and white diagonal stripes have failed to keep automobiles on the busy thoroughfare from crashing into the corner of the old structure. A red light was strung from the house wiring to the corner of the building but even this didn't prevent an occasional car from being crowded into the brick foundation.

In this building, suffering a bombardment of auto bumpers, lived Carl Dahm, the owner. The village of Niles Center sought for more than a year to acquire his lot, not only for the widening of Dempster but also for the proposed extension of Laramie street. But there was no agreement as to value.

Condemnation proceedings were started. The suit followed the slow routine of the courts and was finally completed, Dahm being awarded approximately $15,000. More delay was caused by the village's failure to pay the award promptly. Finally, the village gave the owner special assessment vouchers for his judgment and he agreed to vacate.

A Similar Situation.

There is a similar situation on the new forty foot pavement of 31st street between Des Plaines avenue and the county line, the road that connects Riverside and Hinsdale and will serve the zoological gardens in the forest preserves. The county bought thirty-three feet from the rear end of abutting property everywhere except at the back of the home of M. D. Slimmer.

Slimmer's neighbors sold part of their back yards for $25 a linear foot, but he has a beautiful flower garden at the rear of his home and held out for $100 a foot. Condemnation proceedings were started.

Maj. Quinlan, rather than to delay the entire project, paved concrete on the entire street with the exception of the 100 feet at the rear of Mr. Slimmer's home. The four lane street was opened last spring. The litigation is still pending. Traffic drives around the back fence.

On the Southwest highway, at 84th street, there are two houses on the right of way where there is a 100 foot gap in the pavement. In these buildings, circled by a dusty rock and dirt detour, live Vincent Ruggio, 3724 West 84th street, and Albert Trachsel, 3725 West 84th street.

Develops Into Siege.

Due to Maj. Quinlan's policy of recognizing expediency, the motoring public has been enjoying miles of concrete highway while these two property owners continue their fight with the city over reparations.

For the last few months the controversy has been more like a siege than a battle. The condemnation suits have been ended. Ruggio was awarded $5,000 and Trachsel $3,500. But the city hasn't paid and the property owners won't vacate until they get their money.

The thousands of cars that use the highway daily began to cut across a corner of Trachsel's property in making the detour. Not to be inconsiderate of the motoring public, but to make his position clear to the city administration, Trachsel constructed a heavy wooden barricade out to the center of the end of the pavement where his lot extends. On the fence he posted a sign reading, "Private property—keep out."

Club Princeton Files Suit.

There is another peculiar right of way problem on the Dixie highway, just off of Park avenue, at about 175th street. The Club Princeton claims it owns the Dixie highway to the center of the old narrow pavement. The county, which has let contracts to widen and pave this stretch of the thoroughfare, claims it owns thirty-three feet on both sides of the center line.

The Club Princeton has filed suit and obtained a temporary injunction to prevent the county from widening the pavement on the southwest side of the northeast side of the highway. Work is proceeding on the southwest side of the pavement, in accordance with Maj. Quinlan's policy of getting as much concrete laid immediately as possible rather than to stop all work when trouble is encountered.

In opposing the club's claim of ownership, the county is preparing evidence to present to the court showing that the state maintained the Dixie highway at this stretch for the last twelve years as a public highway. The records of the county board show that the Postal Telegraph company obtained permission forty-six years ago to set poles twenty-nine feet from the center line on the side of the road that the club alleges is private property.

Police May Commandeer Autos in Emergencies

Police of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin have the legal authority to commandeer a private automobile to meet an emergency, but they can not legally require the owner to exceed the speed limits, according to an opinion from the law department of the Chicago Motor club.

START REMOVAL OF MOTOR BARRIERS

Above, a barricade with a private property sign which projects into middle of Southwest highway.

At the left, a house in Dempster street right of way at Niles Center which is being removed. The picture shows the traffic hazard as it was for eight months before laborers started to work on the building last week.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

HOOSIER HATES CHICAGO DRIVERS.

La Porte, Ind., Aug. 5.—"Cook county pays for one-half and gets one twenty-fifth of the state's highways," says THE TRIBUNE. Yes, and Cook county wears out 99 per cent of the highways in northern Indiana, Michigan and all adjoining territory. Also furnishes 90 per cent of the road hogs.

E. E. PELAN.

VISITOR FINED BY VILLAGE.

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 5.—Having been stopped twice on the road and been deprived of substantial sums during the last month, I am beginning to wonder whether all the small towns in the middle west finance themselves by fining motorists. The first time I went by a lonely stop sign without seeing it, and the second was when I suddenly, from the open country, came upon the small town of Hazel Crest, just south of Chicago near Harvey, at a speed of 45 miles and got 20 or 30 yards beyond the one building that constituted the "business corner" before I could slow down to a reasonable speed.

The fact that this "town," though it is really a very deceptive affair, is not heralded by more than the conventional "20 miles per hour" sign quite off in the open country, leads me to suspect that the town has reasons for not wanting its warnings too noticeable. Furthermore, no allowance was made for my being out of the state and I was fined $13, a dollar a mile for everything over 32, the usual fine, as the judge graciously explained to indicate that there was no favoritism. This was $3 more than the bail I had placed and constituted my reward for being conscientious enough to appear at the hearing.

MASSACHUSETTS MOTORIST.

PRETTY TOUGH ON SANE DRIVER.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Safety council members advocate "education of the motorists." Here is lesson No. 1: "The motor vehicle is a man killer." Write it in the state license, so that each applicant agrees he or she has learned that lesson—with the further anti-buck passing clause that when said applicant is driving and hits any person or thing he or she is 100 per cent at fault and will accept the penalty to the full extent of the law. A desperate remedy, but a sure cure for auto insanity.

EVERETT A. GLEASON.

CARS IN LUMPED TAX HERE.

Normal, Ill., Aug. 7.—You who pretend to print the truth should tell the people that less than one car in twenty-five on the assessors' books for state tax purposes are in Chicago, so why should Cook county get more than one twenty-fifth of the roads? Let us see this in print and tell all sides of the question.

F. E. FULLER.

BOULEVARD BULLY HAS STAR.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—A few days ago I was driving home on Sheridan road when a bright blue cabriolet suddenly broke into my lane, just south of Addison street, and smashed my right front fender. The driver, grey haired and slightly bald, stuck his head around, but didn't stop. I pulled beside him and asked him to stop and look at my damage. He swore at me and tried to escape.

I followed him to Rokeby and Dakin streets and there he finally stopped. He cursed me some more and drew a police star from his pocket, saying that I couldn't get a cent out of him. I left but not without taking his license number.

H. E. W.

IT'S WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—In planning our motor trip to Cincinnati, O., we wished to find the best route. We phoned the Chicago —— [an afternoon newspaper] and were told it would be necessary to send 25 cents in advance. We also called —— [another Chicago paper] and were told they would not be able to take care of us except by mail. Then we called THE TRIBUNE, who sent us a map with our assurance of sending 15 cents in return. As we had only three days in which to obtain this map, it saved considerable time for us. Three cheers for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE!

EDWARD VISKAUF.

GIRL FRIENDS OF BUS DRIVERS.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—I wish to protest against the practice of the women friends of bus drivers sitting beside them and visiting with them while the men are on duty. One such woman got on the bus I was on the other night, a number 6. She sat down on the seat next the driver and from Randolph street to Garfield boulevard kept up an incessant chatter. A sign, big as life, warning against this very thing was at her elbow, but that didn't bother her in the least.

I would suggest to the motor coach company that it should rigidly enforce a rule or regulation prohibiting the silly women from riding the buses for any other reason than taking them to their destination. They distract the attention of the driver. It will happen once too often and some innocent passenger or passer-by will have to pay with his life the penalty for this criminal carelessness.

S. E. L.

ANOTHER SPEED TRAP REPORTED.

Forest Park, Ill., Aug. 8.—Just to advise your readers who might have occasion to drive through New Buffalo, Mich., that one of the worst speed traps is situated there. The undersigned was one of fifty within an hour who paid heavy fines for no plausible reason.

THE TRIBUNE in the past has been instrumental in combating that kind of a racket, and I wonder if something can be done about this situation.

WILL JOSEPH.

APPEAL FOR RIDGEWAY BOULEVARD.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—The easiest way from the Humboldt park district to the southwest side is through the park to Franklin boulevard, thence to Homan avenue, south to Douglas boulevard, west to Ridgeway avenue. When crossing the boulevard there is always danger of a car suddenly emerging from behind a clump of bushes. As an automobile bumps along Ridgeway avenue children dash from one side of the street to the other.

If the motorist arrives on the fine and wide Ogden avenue he is lucky if he is no more than badly shaken. Therefore it is the hope of thousands in the Lawndale district that some day Ridgeway will be widened and called Ridgeway boulevard.

BERNARD GOLDSTEIN.

PARK COP REFUSES TO AID.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—Are arrests for speeding falling off in the Lincoln park jurisdiction, or are they afraid that some motor club is checking the accuracy by which motorists are arrested?

Early yesterday morning, while traveling north on Sheridan road, I pulled abreast a motorcycle officer and asked how fast I was going. He politely replied that they were no longer allowed to check speedometers for motorists.

This, to my way of thinking, is analogous to secret statutes of which a person would not be appraised until arrested.

A MOTORIST.

TRUCK BUILDERS AN INDEPENDENT GROUP IN C. A. C.

Another step in the divorce proceedings between the motor truck industry and the other branches of the automobile family is recorded in the announcement that motor truck manufacturers, body builders and allied interests holding membership in the Chicago Association of Commerce will have their own separate division in the big business group.

The institution of the motor truck industries division, which brings its number of separate industrial departments to fifty-eight, follows representations made by the motor truck interests of Chicago that their problems are so distinct from that of the automobile companies with which they were formerly associated as to justify a new and entirely independent grouping.

A RECORD TOURIST SEASON.

New Brunswick, Canada, is enjoying a record tourist season with more vacation motorists from the United States than ever before.

Autos Prove Luxuries Soon Become Necessities

"The luxuries of one generation become the necessities of the next," said Disraeli. How effectively the history of the automobile proves him right is a thought that pervades many quarters of motordom these days. The total vehicle, for instance. Split the car up into smaller units and the same thing is revealed. Bumpers were a luxury only a few years ago. Now they are a necessity. Rear view mirrors likewise were the special equipment of a small number of cars. Now many states require them by law.

British Columbia Plans U. S. to Alaska Highway

Premier S. F. Tolmie of British Columbia announces a plan to construct a highway from Hazelton to Alaska.

While the chief objective of the road is to encourage tourist traffic through the province from the United States to Alaska, the highway is also expected to have important industrial and commercial advantages.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Graham-Paige today announces its 1930 models, presenting a line of three sixes and two eights with many improvements but without any change in prices. An innovation is the use of adjustable seats, rear as well as front. Since the clutch, brakes and steering column are also adjustable, the car is virtually tailor made for the buyer.

The bore of the new engine is larger, increasing the maximum horsepower from 62 to 66. However, the manufacturers concentrated their attentions on improvements to promote beauty and comfort in the 1930 models.

A new Hupmobile six in the lower price field is announced by the company, which has been building higher priced cars exclusively for the last twenty-one years. The engine, refined to provide even greater acceleration and power, is the same motor that propelled the Hupp Century, capable of maintaining 70 miles an hour.

Due to the type of frame and body used in the new six, over-all height has been decreased without sacrificing either interior headroom or road clearance. Standard equipment includes a dimmer switch operated by the driver's left foot.

Price reductions on the Nash "400" series, ranging as high as $300, became effective last week.

A. W. Fischer, former special sales representative, has been appointed Chicago district manager of Plymouth, succeeding B. A. Rupprecht, who has been promoted to manager of the north region with headquarters in Chicago. Mr. Rupprecht has assumed the post vacated by J. B. Covell, who became manager of the Atlantic region.

The sale of Jordans has been taken over by a new firm, Jordan Distributors, Inc. The Chicago branch is located at 2526-30 South Michigan avenue, with Earl H. Martin as general manager.

Wade Morton has been appointed sales manager of the Cord front drive division of Auburn.

STATISTICS SHOW TRAFFIC SIGNALS DON'T AID SAFETY

Running Lights Cause of Many Accidents.

Statistics of the west park board show that while stop and go lights are necessary to facilitate the flow of traffic they are not an assurance of safety to motorists or pedestrians. The figures were made public yesterday by Dr. John Dill Robertson, president of the board.

An analysis of 10,966 accidents on the western boulevard system shows that 3,948 of the mishaps were due to motorists driving through either the amber of the red light. It follows that the separation of grades, such as afforded by the proposed elevated highway, is the only hope for a reasonable degree of protection from the mistakes of man and the imperfections of machines at crossings.

Crashes at Corners.

That the signal lights do not separate transfluent movements of automobiles is palpable from the record that approximately half of the 62,205 motorists arraigned before the west park safety commission were charged with having ignored the automatic stop and go signals. The other half of the violations were distributed among twenty-five other traffic ordinances.

The number of collisions at signal lights, 2,948, was nearly two and one-half times as great as the 1,648 crashes during the same period at corners without the stop and go directions. It must be taken into consideration that it is the more congested corners that have the lights, but another factor that cannot be overlooked is that there are many more intersections without lights than with them.

Much of the hazard at crossings with signal lights is due to the false security the green light gives to drivers and pedestrians. The motorist approaching a corner as the lights change from red to green neglects to be on the lookout for a fast machine that may run through on the amber. It is when the intersections are approached too rapidly and when trying to beat the lights that many of the worst accidents happen.

Other Accident Causes.

A further analysis of the west park's records show other accident causes as follows:

Left turns, 2,197; reckless driving, 1,084; parking, 271; faulty brakes, 205; sudden stops, 217; leaving curb without warning, 169; lost control of cars, 162; color blindness, 318; drivers with defective limbs, 130; deaf drivers, 104; drunkeness, 419; causes undetermined, 104, and miscellaneous, 1,513.

"The record," said Dr. Robertson, "shows that there are more accidents occurring where automatic stop and go signals are in operation than on the busiest corners that do not have stop and go signals. The authorities erect stop and go signals and guarantee safety on these corners, provided the motor driver runs on the green, but the facts in these records show that they are not safe because of the careless or reckless driver who does not heed the safety light.

"The west park commissioners have numerous requests from citizens of the west side and civic groups for the erection of more stop and go signals throughout the system. Stop and go signals are practically indispensable for the purpose of regulating traffic and for the reason stated do not guarantee safety for either pedestrian or motorist. "The statistics definitely prove that the stop and go signals on corners increase rather than decrease accidents and deaths to the motorist and the pedestrian. There is only one remedy and I do not know any other that will surely obviate this condition and that is a separation of grades at these crossings. When this has been accomplished through elevated highways in any district, many of these accidents and deaths can be prevented."

Accidents Reduced.

Data show that during the four years the west park safety commission has been in existence, the number of accidents have been reduced, although personal injuries and fatal accidents have increased.

In 1923, the year before the safety commission was organized, there were immeasurably fewer motor vehicles on the boulevards than there are at the present time. One must also take into consideration the increased population of the west side.

The statistics for the last six years on the 43 miles of west park boulevards follow:

	Deaths.	Injuries.	Accidents
1923	13	475	1,703
1924	17	562	1,551
1925	24	710	1,889
1926	20	650	1,827
1927	31	825	2,042
1928	37	794	2,154

"I think any one who will carefully study these facts," said Dr. Robertson, "will have to admit that some new measure must be adopted to put into actual force the provisions of the ordinances for the safety of motor vehicle traffic.

"On the west park boulevards, for years, motorists have been arrested and taken before the courts, but during the last four years, we have taken the majority of these cases and cited them before the safety commission as part of the educational campaign. None of these measures has proven effective, as is demonstrated by the fact that during these years, 1923 up to the present time, there has been nearly a steady increase of injuries and deaths.

Fatal Accidents.

"It is interesting to study a few of the important corners of the west park district. Our spot map shows the following important intersections and the number of accidents for the year 1928 on each one of these:

	Deaths.	Injuries.	Accidents.
Ashland and Washington	0	4	17
Ashland and Jackson	1	3	5
Washington and Sacramento	1	7	8
Jackson and Sacramento	0	7	8

"On Washington and Jackson boulevards, the west park's two great east and west thoroughfares, there have been sixteen fatal automobile accidents since Jan. 1. On Washington, 8 were at corners with stop and go lights, and 3 at intersections where there were no lights. On Jackson, 5 were at traffic signal corners and 1 at corners without lights. The two boulevards have lights at 19 intersections and have 57 corners without stop and go signals."

In Massachusetts One May Either Drive or Pe

BOSTON.—As the result of a ruling in Massachusetts, motorists may either drive or pet, but cannot do both at the same time. George A. Parker, registrar of motor vehicles in the state, says, "Any one who drives while having his arm around a girl or allows her to sit on his lap is not the proper person to operate a car."

7 DAY AIR LINE TO BUENOS AIRES AND RIO FORMED

Schedule to Cut 11 Days from Sea Trip.

NEW YORK.—The New York, Rio & Buenos Aires Line, Inc., has been organized by a group of prominent bankers and industrial leaders and within a short time the corporation will engage to operate a passenger, express and air mail transport service between New York and Buenos Aires along the Atlantic seaboards of North and South America, a distance of 8,000 miles. It will follow the route blazed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in his South American flight.

Ralph A. O'Neill, an American ace and more recently chief of air service of Mexico, has been named president and general manager in charge of operations, and he will be assisted by John K. Montgomery, as vice president and Wilson F. Reynolds, secretary and assistant general manager. The operating headquarters of the new company are in the Graybar building.

Planes Are Ready.

The equipment with which the corporation will start business will include Consolidated Commodore with twenty passenger capacity, amphibions of eight passenger capacity and trimotor planes carrying fourteen, a number of which have been received from the manufacturers and are in operation in South America, preparing for the inauguration of the regular passenger and mail service.

It is planned to operate initially on the basis of a weekly trip northbound and southbound. On these trips the planes will be flown only in daylight and the trips will cover a period of seven days. On a seven day schedule there will be a saving of eleven days over the fastest regular service now available between New York and Buenos Aires.

A wholly owned subsidiary of the corporation now holds a contract with the Argentine government for the transportation of air mail from Argentina to the United States, also a similar contract with the government of Uruguay. The company will receive 10 cents, Argentine currency, per pound, on all air mail carried from the Argentine to Central America, Guianas, West Indies and the United States, and five cents Argentine currency per two grams, on all air mail transported to Uruguay and Brazil. Similar contracts with other South American countries are under negotiation.

Fuel Stations Established.

The operating schedule, expected to be started within the next few days, will be as follows: First day, from New York to Tampa, with stops at Baltimore, Washington, Norfolk, Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah and Jacksonville; second day, from Tampa to Port au Prince, Haiti, with stops at Havana, Cienfuegos, Camaguey and Santiago; third day, from Port au Prince to Port of Spain Trinidad, with stops at Santo Domingo, San Juan, Porto Rico, Basse Terre, Guadelupe, Fort de France, Martinique; fourth day, from Port of Spain to Para, Brazil, with stops at Georgetown, British Guiana, Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana and Cayenne, French Guiana; fifth day, from Para to Pernambuco, with stops at Maranhao, Ceara and Natal, the northern terminus for the French airline in South America; sixth day, from Pernambuco to Rio de Janeiro, with stops at Bahia, Caravellos and Campos; seventh day, from Rio de Janeiro to Buenos Aires, with stops at Santos, the port for Sao Paulo, Paranagua and Porto Alegre, Brazil, and Montevideo, Uruguay.

Officials of the corporation say that they expect to increase the service to three round trips per week within a year after beginning operations, and eventually operate a daily service. After the installation of beacons along the route, making night flying possible, it is contemplated that the trip will be reduced to a period of four days.

Base and fueling stations along the route now are being established, as well as accommodations for passengers. The president of the company, with a staff, using the flagship Washington has already completed a detailed flying survey of the entire route. It is expected that the passenger rate will be about 12 cents per mile.

QUESTIONS

Questions relating to aviation are answered in this section by Maj. R. W. Schroeder, famous world war flyer, who formerly held the world's altitude record. Inquiries should be addressed to the Aviation Department, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Q.—What is the average price for a course in airplane mechanics? How long does it take? Please send me the names of places where they are located and what is the salary of a good mechanic.— R. F. Watkins, Ia.

A.—The average price of such a course will run about $300. It depends upon the previous training and experience of the individual. One with considerable mechanical experience should spend about six months to become a proficient airplane mechanic. Write the school advertised on this page or in the leading aviation magazines. A good mechanic will earn about $40 per week to start.

Q.—Would you please tell me what the wing span, the length of the fuselage and the length of the pontoons of the English plane "S-5" are—the one that won the Schneider cup by going 319.57 miles per hour.—V. F. E., Elmhurst, Ill.

A.—We do not believe you could get the specifications asked for from any one but the British air ministry and we doubt very much if they would be willing to tell the secrets of the S-5 design.

Q.—Do you have to be a certain age before entering a flying school and is a high school education necessary?—T. C. Irvington, Ill.

A.—The department of commerce requires a minimum age limit of 16 in order to commence flying. A high school education is not necessary, but desirable.

FRANCO-ENGLISH AERIAL ENTENTE IS ANNOUNCED

Reach Accord on World Route Developing.

LONDON.—An Anglo-French "entente of the air" is announced as the result of a conference held at the air ministry here between M. Laurent-Eynac and Lord Thomson, respectively French and British air minister. The discussions centered about world air routes and, according to an official communique, "resulted in an agreement, both in principle and on certain details, for the development of air transportation in Africa, the middle east, the far east, and South America, based on wide mutual cooperation between the two countries."

Lord Thomson later accompanied M. Laurent-Eynac and the French delegation in an airplane back to Paris, where the results of the conversation will "be reduced to writing and considered by both air ministers and interested departments for their approval and comment."

Always Have Cooperated.

London believes that the result may add to the frequency of air transport services and in certain parts of South America lead to useful extensions. The French are particularly anxious to obtain their own air route to the east, and in a few months may be in position to operate a service as far as Bagdad; when airdromes beyond India are properly equipped, they expect to be able to run their own mail service right through to Indo China.

The French and British have always cooperated most cordially in regard to civil air transportation and the effect of an extension of French air lines to the east would no doubt result in alternative services, but in regard to mails, these would still be reserved for national air lines.

The French recently established an air mail route from Europe to South America by way of the West Coast of Africa with only one sea stretch covered by steamships. This air mail line has undoubted potentialities and in view of British interests in South America it has very definite commercial importance.

A Route to Cape Town.

In Africa Great Britain is now actively organizing a through route by way of Egypt and East Africa to Cape Town as a main trunk air line. At the same time the French have ambitions to reach South Africa by flying across the Sahara desert or by extending their present west coast route to link with the Belgian Congo air route. This already extends to near the Rhodesian border, and Belgian hopes center in completing a link with the new British route so that there will be an alternative route through the Transvaal and Cape Town by way of the west coast.

Plans have also been formulated for a service from the southern Belgian terminus at Elizabethville across to the east coast of Africa and via Mozambique, eventually linking up with Madagascar. Already French airmen have made an experimental flight over a similar route.

Belgian air routes in the Congo are also extending out toward the chain lakes in east Africa, and tentative proposals have been made for cooperation there with the Cape Town—Cairo air line, which at one point is suited to serve the rich Belgian mining area in the Kilo Moto district.

Use Dual Controls to Test Air Mail Novices

CHEYENNE, Wyo.—What is said to be the first dual control mail plane has been placed in service by Boeing Air Transport on the transcontinental route with Harold [Slim] Lewis in the new rôle of testing out potential air mail pilots.

To determine if the applicant pilot is as good as he represents himself to be, the company hit upon the plan of equipping one of its high speed mail planes with dual control so that the veteran Lewis can check up on the pilot before he is placed on the regular mail run. The tryout course includes night flying over the mountains.

LINDBERGH LIGHT HERE READY FOR SERVICE IN FALL

Lindbergh light, the five billion candle power beacon to be mounted on a steel tower on the Palmolive building, 600 feet above street level, will be ready for service within three or four months, according to Elmer A Sperry, inventor and donor of the beacon.

Mr. Sperry is a former Chicagoan who won renown as the inventor of the Sperry gyroscope compass and the Sperry ship stabilizer now in universal use.

"Lindbergh light, probably the most powerful ever constructed, will be visible 500 miles away, according to estimates of army engineers," said Mr. Sperry. "A unique feature of the light will be its ability to point to a designated airport."

BRAKES
unsurpassed in any car

Judging them by any standard that measures the merit of a braking system, owners have found the Dodge 4-wheel hydraulic brakes to be absolutely unsurpassed. Being hydraulic, they have no long succession of lubrication points to require attention, no complex mechanism to work out of adjustment. They are simple in construction, permanently quiet, positively equalized on all four wheels. Being internal-expanding, they are perfectly protected against mud, dust and water and operate just as efficiently in wet weather as in dry. And obviously, being built to Dodge Brothers standards, they are absolutely dependable.

Plan $3,000,000 Studio Twin Apartments for North Side

OFFICE-GARAGE BUILDING FOR CHICAGO LOOP

Will Add 15 Floors to 10 Story Garage.

Pictured suggestions in last Sunday's real estate section that parking and lower floor renting problems might be solved by using nine or ten lower floors of 'supersky' scrapers for garage space and the skyward stories for offices, have disclosed two interesting developments along this line of construction.

Chicago, it has been discovered, already has a start toward a twenty-five story combination office building and garage in the ten story structure now used entirely for the storage of cars at the northeast corner of Lake and Dearborn. Fifteen floors of offices are to be placed on top of this garage section later on.

Detroit, according to a wire from that city, already has in successful operation a huge office building in which the eleven lower floors of one section are used for the parking of cars, with offices on the fourteen floors above this garage unit.

May Go Ahead in Near Future.

According to Davis D. Meredith, the Chicago architect who designed the building at Lake and Dearborn in this city, and Glenn E. Holmes, president of the Dearborn-Lake Building corporation, owner of the structure, the contemplated fifteen stories of office space may be piled on top of the present ten story garage in the near future. The picture in the adjacent column shows how the twenty-five story garage-office building will look when completed.

Everything is set to go ahead when the time comes to build. Mr. Meredith states that caissons and foundations were put in when work started last year, to care for a twenty-five story building. Space is provided for a bank of passenger elevators which will care for the office tenants in the upper floors when the fifteen stories are placed on top of the ten story garage section.

The car storage part of the building has a twelve inch slab concrete roof, so when the fifteen floors of offices are built they will be separated from any possible automobile fire hazard by a foot thick fire wall. In addition the garage section is sprinklered. It has floor space for 1,000 cars at one time.

Accommodates 1,000 Cars.

The Detroit combination office building and garage was erected by the First National bank. The first unit of the twenty-five story First National bank building was opened in 1922. Six years later the structure was doubled in size with the first seven floors in part of the annex set aside exclusively for the use of cars. It accommodates about 1,000 machines and the ratio of tenants to outside car owners using this space is about four to one. The fourteen floors above the garage are used for offices.

The rental per month in the garage ranges from $15 to $23 for tenants of the bank building and from $17 to $25 for outside car owners. Storage prices range from 25 cents an hour to $7 per week and every service required on a car is available.

Theater parking from 6:30 p. m. until 5:30 a. m. is available for the nominal fee of thirty-five cents. The system virtually eliminates waiting for a car whenever needed. Curb chauffeurs will drive a person to a theater or any other place and return the car to the garage and deliver it at the time and place specified.

Accessible as at Home.

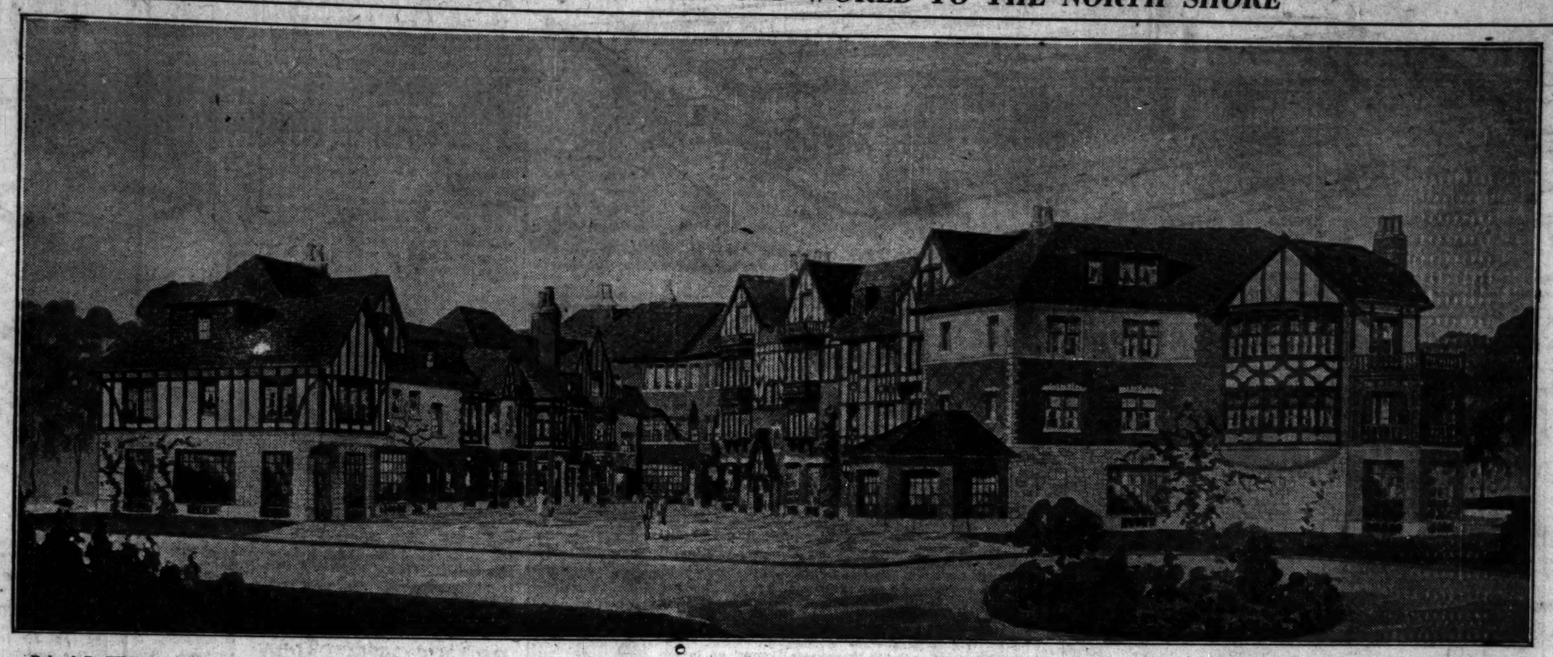
The ramp system is used with the ramps superimposed so that cars going up never cross the path of those coming down. It is possible for customers of the bank and tenants of the building to drive their cars into the garage, leave them with an attendant, and pass directly into the bank or into their own office under the same roof and on the same floor in a majority of cases. This makes the tenant's car as accessible to his office as it is to his own home.

A large majority of the office buildings in Detroit are on the west side of Woodward avenue, the main and most congested artery in the city. Cases are said to be numerous where tenants, in an effort to settle their individual parking problems, have changed their offices on the west side of Woodward to the First National bank building which is on the east side of the avenue.

Detroit has one other combination garage and office building. This is the recently completed Fisher building in the uptown district, three miles north of the First National bank building. This project, too, is proving popular among tenants of both the Fisher and General Motors buildings, according to word from Detroit.

Albert Kahn of Detroit designed the First National bank building and Robert C. Derrick, also of Detroit, designed the garage.

BRINGING A TOUCH OF THE OLD WORLD TO THE NORTH SHORE



Roland D. Whitman, Chicago attorney and resident of the Indian Hill section of Winnetka, after years of study and travel abroad is developing the above unusually charming bit of old world architecture on Hill terrace, just northwest of the Indian Hill station. For the traveled person this will recall various lovely old structures in different parts of England, for the architect, Howard Bowen of Wilmette, has reproduced here and there through the group replicas of quaint ancient British architecture.

Winnetka to Have Bit o' Old England

Roland D. Whitman of Winnetka, a member of the Chicago law firm of Helmer, Moulton, Whitman & Holton, and Mrs Whitman are capitalizing several years of travel in this country and abroad in an interesting and important building project in the Indian Hill section of their home town. They are putting into brick, stone, and wood various lovely bits of architecture they saw and liked in old world towns and cities.

ROLAND D. WHITMAN. [Chambers Photo.]

Even the name of this attractive structure of apartment homes and shops is different from the ordinary project; it's called "The Chimneys," and gets this quaint title from the dozen chimneys along the roof line, carrying some twenty chimney pots.

Project an Experiment.

Briefly, Mr. Whitman's idea is an interesting experiment with the tastes and demands of the north shore. He believes an ultra high class apartment project of this sort will be in demand. Although it's a large structure, it will contain only seventeen apartments. All rooms are exceptionally large, living rooms running from 16x24 to 23x26. Each will have a wood burning fireplace of cut stone. Every apartment will extend through an entire wing, there being no corridors of the usual type. Instead there are many stairways, each serving only the suites adjacent to it.

The building is being erected on Center street, with an interior court opening on Hill terrace. It is from this court, removed entirely from traffic, that all of the apartments are reached; only the rear stairs open on Center street. All stairs, by the way, are concealed in the building.

Courtyard to Be Flagged.

Except for planting borders close to the walls, the entire courtyard opening on Hill terrace is to be flagged in blue limestone with wide grass joints. The elevations overlooking this area done in stone, brick, stucco and sandblasted half timber, with innumerable offsets and overhangs, curved or square, and oriel windows. These elevations give the appearance of a succession of old Tudor houses.

The roof, with its many broken lines, is to be of black slate, staggered and of varying thicknesses. There'll be casement windows, opening out, some of wood and some of leaded glass. The court will be lighted by wrought iron torches in old English design.

The apartments will vary in size from three to five rooms, with additional guest rooms available for tenants, and they will be as soundproof as it is possible to make them, according to the architect, Howard Bowen of Wilmette.

Shops on Center Street.

There'll be a few exclusive shops opening on Center street, such as book and antique establishments. They will have windows facing on the interior court but no doors, thus being entirely isolated from the apartments.

With the exception of the outlook on Center street all of the windows face on either the inner court, public park, or adjoining lawns and gardens. There is no alley.

The project, which it is understood will represent a total investment in the neighborhood of $350,000, will be ready for tenants about Oct. 1, according to Mr. Bowen.

IN THE LOOP AND ON THE NEAR NORTH SIDE

On your left is shown Chicago's first example of using the entire lower floors of a skyscraper for garage purposes with the upper stories for offices. This is how the present ten story garage at the northeast corner of Lake and Dearborn, designed by Davis D. Meredith, will look when fifteen stories of offices and a tower are piled on top of the garage section. More is told in the adjacent column. L. B. Sugarman made this sketch.

Above, on your right, is one of a pair of twin buildings to be erected on the near north side at a reported cost of $3,000,000. One unit will front on West Walton place and one on West Oak street, in the block between State and Dearborn. Each building will contain 150 suites. There'll be a fountain court between the two. Work will start on the first unit in the fall. B. Leo Steif is architect.

A. & P. GETS FIVE LOCATIONS FOR "SELF SERVICE"

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company has leased five more locations for its self-service stores, four in Chicago and one in Gary, Ind., all through James D. Harvey & Co.

Two of the Chicago stores are at 821 West 79th street, 31x125, leased for five years from Trianon, Inc., at a term rental of $71,000, with option for five additional years; 1316 East 55th street, 34x150, five years, at a term rental of $57,000, lessor Hyman S. Cohen and Joseph Savelson. This property formerly wa the Harding theater and has been extensively remodeled.

The other two city stores are at 3429-31 West 63d street, 30x120, leased for five years from William G. Schart at a term rental of $26,400, with option for five more years, and a 20x75 store at 9213 Commercial avenues.

LEASE OLD CLUB QUARTERS FOR WOMEN'S GYMN

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Truesdell have leased the former athletic quarters of the Woman's Athletic club (now in its new clubhouse at Michigan and Ontario), in the basement of the Harvester building, for ten years, beginning Sept. 1, at a term rental reported to be $150,000. The space rented includes a swimming pool, gymnasium, Turkish baths, and beauty parlors. The lessees will operate a health gymnasium for women.

PLAN NEW CAFE AT SIMPSON AND RIDGE CORNER

A couple of weeks ago we reported the sale by the Frank R. Mason company of the northwest corner of Ridge road and Simpson street, in Niles Center, to a syndicate. Yesterday the northeast corner was purchased from the Mason company by another syndicate headed by Louis Delfino, who is lessee of the Ridge tavern, a road house, on the property. It is reported that the syndicate paid $50,000 for the corner, which fronts 150 feet on Ridge road and 148 feet on Simpson street. The Old Dearborn State bank took title. According to a member of the syndicate, a new café is to be erected prior to the coming world's fair.

PAIR TO HAVE FRONTAGES ON WALTON AND OAK

Fountain and Garden Court Between.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Plans are now being drawn by B. Leo Steif for what probably will be the most imposing and interesting apartment project in the Washington square district of the near north side — $3,000,000 twenty story twin studio buildings to face on both Walton place and Oak street, adjoining the Opera club property on the west. The two structures are to be built and owned by the Walton-Oak Building corporation, of which Samuel Cole is president.

The two buildings will contain a total of 300 studio suites arranged in two, three and four room units. These apartments will have staggered floors and eleven foot ceiling heights. Every suite will have a wood burning fireplace. The ceilings of the living rooms will be beamed and highly decorated, according to the architects.

All the apartments will have two levels, the higher level to contain chambers and baths, dining and reception room space, with the studio living room at the lower level.

Fountain Court Between.

Perhaps the most interesting and novel feature of the entire project is the utilization of the lot. The site has 100 feet frontage on West Walton place, and the same frontage on West Oak street. The property extends 171 feet through from Walton to Oak.

Mr. Steif has planned for two structures, exactly alike, one to face on West Walton place and its twin on Oak street. Each will be wide and shallow, that is, each unit will have a street frontage of 100 feet and each will be only about fifty-six feet deep.

In between the two structures will be a court extending the width of the lot, 100 feet, with a depth from building to building of sixty feet. This 6,000 square feet of surface is to be improved with an attractive formal garden in the center of which will be a fountain, giving the residents with apartments facing the court something to look at besides grass and flowers. This probably will be flood lighted with colors during the summer months.

Corridor to Connect Units.

Tentative plans call for a corridor connecting the first floors of the two structures, affording an attractive pedestrian arcade for the tenants of the twins between Walton place and Oak street. This corridor probably will run along the eastern side of the lot, adjoining the west wall of the Opera club building. A second corridor, placed beneath the floor level of the first one, will link the basements of the two units.

For several years at least, the court will be open to the west for the corner property is improved with an old residence.

The exterior walls of the two units will all be of red brick, with the east and west walls paneled. The street and court elevations of both sections will be the same. Mr. Steif has designed the buildings in a modern adaptation of the French Georgian. They will have mansard roofs of copper.

Large Studios at Top.

Here are a few more details regarding the interior of the buildings. The studio living room will be 15x26, with tall ceilings, of course, and large studio windows. The bathrooms will be modernistic in design. Every bedroom will have two large closets and two windows.

Mr. Cole states that he will have twelve of the larger type of studios for sculptors who work on unwieldy problems, at the top of the two new buildings. He also adds that "rentals will be moderate."

Building operations will commence in the early fall on the first unit, fronting on West Oak street. When that section is completed work will start on the Walton place building. It will take about a year for completion.

NEW YORK SETS PACE IN YANKEE WAGE STANDARDS

Will Try Out 5 Day Week on Aug. 26.

BY THOMAS WREN.

London and gay Paree may set the styles of American dress, but during the last decade New York building contractors have been setting the wage standards for American building trades workers.

Drastic changes in working conditions for building mechanics also are generally given initial tryouts in New York. Wage scales and contracts between building trades and contractors are usually negotiated on terms that are regulated by the resident volume of construction.

While building programs in most cities have slumped to a considerable degree during the last six months, the construction activities in New York have continued at a brisk pace. Those conversant with labor conditions in the nation's building industry claim that when the volume of building in any large city is large and continues unabated, the building mechanics are wont to ask for higher pay rates and more time off to spend their earnings.

Start Five Day Week Soon.

Aug. 26 has been set as the date for the establishment of the forty hour, or five day, week for New York's 150,000 building workers. It is said the building workers shelved any general demand for pay raises to procure the five day week.

In Chicago however, there was no mention of the five day week when agreements were negotiated between a majority of trades and builders. It was contended by both employé and employer that shelving of the five day week would stimulate interest in the construction of Chicago's World's Fair in 1933. For that reason practically all the trades that had agreements to negotiate moved up a notch on the wage scale.

Then came the movement to start the five day week in New York for the workers in that city. Chicago builders have been asked to give the five day week consideration. They are now giving the proposition the once over. Labor representatives of the local trades maintain that the forty hour week would aid the unemployment situation that now confronts practically all Chicago building trades.

Not Based on Fact, Says Craig.

Edward M. Craig, secretary of the Building Construction Employers' association, says this contention is not based on fact.

Oscar W. Rosenthal of the Builders' Association of Chicago says the unemployment angle is not held forth by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor in his advocacy of the five day week.

"Mr. Green has championed the forty hour week because he believes it would aid in the spiritual uplift of the workingman," said Rosenthal.

Relative wage scales of Chicago building trades workers in 1915 and those that will be in effect on Oct. 1 of this year are shown in the following statistics for the building trades compiled by Robert Steele, one of the assistant secretaries of the Construction Employers' association:

	1915.	1929.
Architectural iron workers	$0.67½	$1.62½
Asbestos workers	.67½	1.62½
Bricklayers	.75	1.70
Electrical workers	.75	1.70
Hoisting engineers	.75	1.62½
Laborers	.40	.90
Marble setters	.68¾	1.67½
Plasterers	.75	1.70
Painters	.70	1.62½
Steamfitters	.75	1.68½
Sheet metal workers	.68¾	1.56
Structural iron workers	.68	1.62½
Stone cutters	.62½	1.50
Lathers	.71¾	1.63½
Cement finishers	.68	1.62½

In commenting on the five day week Mr. Craig said that nothing definite had been decided by the Chicago contractors on the subject.

Wyle Hat Company Leases Store at 4009 Lincoln Ave.

BAR RACKETEERS FROM RECORDER'S PICNIC PROFITS

Program racketeers have been cut off from sharing in any of the profits of the program for the annual basket picnic of the employés of County Recorder Clayton F. Smith's office, to be held on Saturday, Aug. 31, at Ehrhardt's grove, near Park Ridge. Mr. Smith also announced that no outsiders were to handle the advertising. As a result the employés are securing all the ads and the money raised by this picnic will go into a fund for the welfare of the office force.

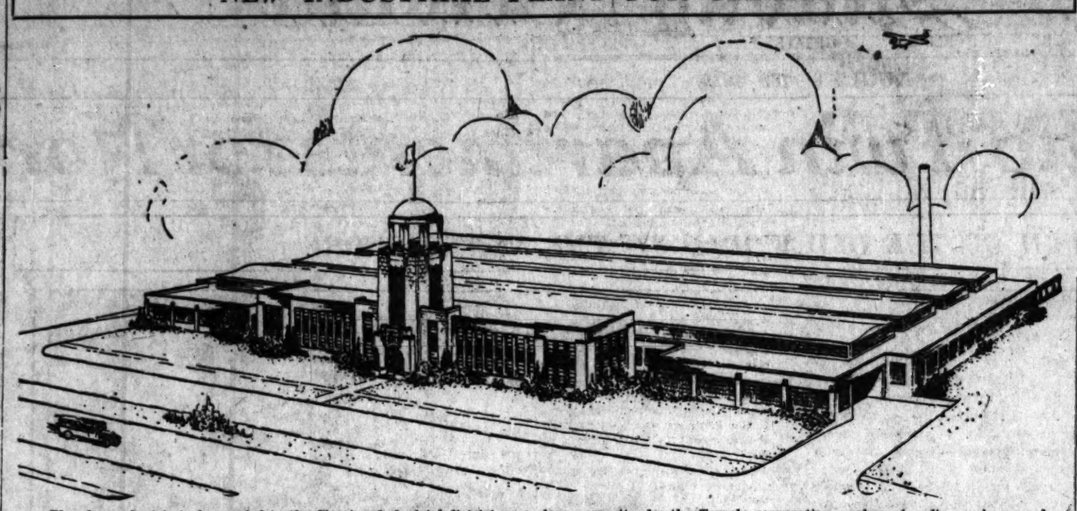
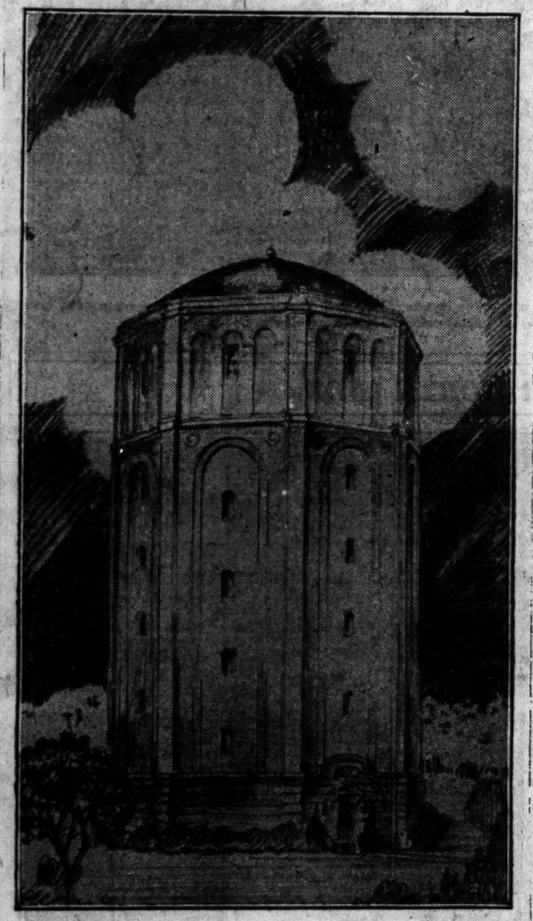
This will be the first picnic or social affair given by the employés of the office since Mr. Smith became recorder. The following committee is actively in charge of the arrangements: William C. Porter, James T. Kilcran, Frederick W. Boe, Mary Camm, Adeline Wilk, Harold G. Rossell, Thomas J. Kelly, Walter Orlikoski, Anthony Barbino, Bessie Doyle Bohan, Hattie Carson, William Thwaits, Ernest De Vol, M. Raymer, Charles Reading, Olive Kramer, and Mayme Cusic.

NEW INDUSTRIAL PLANT FOR CLEARING



The above plant is to be erected in the Clearing Industrial district on a four acre site, by the Temple corporation, maker of radio receivers and speakers, from plans by Folz & Co. A feature will be the two story office building, set back from the street, with a stone tower seventy-two feet high in the center built like a temple. Details are given elsewhere in this section.

GOOD SUBURBAN ADVERTISING



Highland Park believes that the customary suburban water tank, stuck on four ungainly steel legs is both a blight on the landscape and a poor advertisement for the town it supplies. Hence the north shore suburb will hide its water tank in the above brick and stone tower. Pearse, Greeley & Hansen are engineers for the entire improvement and Arthur S. Coffin is architect. It will be 175 feet high and will be a conspicuous landmark on the north shore. The tank will hold 500,000 gallons of water. The Chicago Bridge and Iron Works has the contract for the bank and Jerome A. Moss for the enclosing structure.

LAPHAM HICKEY BUYS LAND FOR NEW ADDITION

Has Enlarged Plant 7 Times Already.

The Lapham Hickey company, which started business in 1926 and which a few months ago completed a new factory building at 3333 West 47th place, in the Central Manufacturing district, has exercised an option to purchase that structure together with an additional 28,000 square feet of land to the rear. On this property the trustees of the district will erect a one story addition, 177x143, to be used as a warehouse. A. Epstein, structural engineer, has drawn the plans.

With the completion of the addition the company will have enlarged its space eight times. According to the Chicago Junction railway, on whose rails the factory is located, the company now has the largest incoming tonnage of any industry in the Central Manufacturing district. Within the last thirty days the concern received slightly less than 100 cars.

The Lapham Hickey company markets high grade Swedish steel used in watches, radios, razors, etc. A. A. Schmidt, industrial agent, represented the district. E. B. Lapham and F. E. Hickey represented their company.

WICKER PARK AREA STARTS BATTLE ON HOSPITAL PROJECT

Attorneys Jacob S. Guthman of Saltiel, Guthman & Deutsch and Frank H. Janiszeski write THE TRIBUNE that they have been engaged by property owners in the vicinity of Wicker park to institute injunction proceedings against the contemplated erection of a hospital at the northwest corner of Hoyne and Pierce avenues, as told about and pictured in the real estate section of THE TRIBUNE on Aug. 11.

"This is a bold attempt to put a hospital in a residential section," the statement reads. "All of the neighbors on both Pierce and Hoyne avenues had organized themselves into a protective organization and had already filed written protests with the health and building departments and also with the zoning board of Chicago.

"To erect a hospital in any neighborhood under an ordinance it is required that a consent of two-thirds of the owners be obtained. This ordinance has been in existence for a long time and is for the purpose of protecting just such attempts as are being made with reference to the Wicker Park hospital. The men behind the project attempted to get such consents, but have failed.

"The section in which the hospital is to be constructed is one of the oldest and finest on the northwest side and the residents there will not permit it to be ruined by a hospital without at least first exhausting every legal means to prevent such happening."

WALGREEN CO. TO HAVE NEW PLANT ON SOUTH SIDE

Makes Lease in Central Mfg. District.

Plans have been completed for a two story fireproof building 280x360 to be erected at West 47th street and South St. Louis avenue, in the Kedzie development of the Central Manufacturing district, for the Walgreen company. It will be used as factory and warehouse by the big chain drug concern.

The site, which contains 122,315 square feet of land, and the building have been leased to the Walgreen company for fifteen years at an approximate term rental of $800,000. The main building and a 40x220 garage will give the lessee a total floor area of 200,000 square feet.

Shipping facilities for the new factory and warehouse will permit the spotting of ten freight cars at one time, while a total of fourteen trucks may be loaded or unloaded at once.

The building will serve as warehouse and distributing center for the entire Cook county area and will serve as a laboratory for the manufacture of various Walgreen items.

The plant also will house a new candy company recently formed to include both office and manufacturing activities of the company. This concern will furnish all candies, with a few exceptions, to be sold in Walgreen drug stores throughout the company's extensive system.

Work will start at once, according to A. Epstein, structural engineer, who drew the plans. The E. W. Sproul Construction company will erect the building. R. G. Schmitt represented the Walgreen company, while the trustees of the district were represented by A. A. Schmidt, industrial agent.

FORMER CHICAGOAN WINS HONOR FROM FRENCH PRESIDENT

Frederick Vernon Murphy, an architect of Washington, D. C., formerly of Chicago, has been honored by the president of France with the decoration of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. News of this has just been received by a friend here, Francis J. Kilkenny, an investment security dealer at 208 South La Salle street.

Mr. Murphy, a native of Fond du Lac, Wis., came to Chicago when a small child and attended the public schools and the old North Division high school. He began his career in a Chicago architect's office and later passed a civil service examination and was appointed to a position as architectural draftsman under the supervising architect of the treasury department at Washington.

Later he won a scholarship and attended the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris at the same time Hubert Burnham was there. After his graduation he returned to Washington. He designed many structures there, in New York and other cities. The Shrine of the Sacred Heart and the Mulen Memorial library at the Catholic university in Washington are among his works. In addition to his practice, he is dean of architecture at the Catholic university.

Photomaton Leases Its Ninth Store in Chicago

The Photomaton company of Chicago leased from the Paramount Building corporation the store at 2748 Milwaukee avenue for ten years at a reported term rental of $32,000. Schwartz Bros. represented both parties.

TEMPLE RADIO BUYS SITE FOR 4 ACRE PLANT

To Build $500,000 Factory in Clearing.

The Temple corporation, manufacturer of all electric Temple radio receiving sets and speakers, has purchased 186,000 square feet of industrial property at the southeast corner of La Vergne avenue and West 65th street, east of the Buick Motor company. This is to be immediately improved with a $500,000 plant covering four acres. The buyer also is taking an option for two years to purchase 180,000 square feet of adjacent property for future expansion.

A feature of the new plant will be a two story office building, set well back from the street, in front of the main plant, with a stone tower seventy-two feet high in the center, built somewhat along the lines of a temple.

Upon completion and occupancy during next December, the Temple corporation will abandon its plant at 1925 South Western avenue, which it now owns, and the plant it is now occupying in Clearing under lease from the Continental Can company.

The new plant will have three times the manufacturing space of the present factory space. The corporation is now turning out 1,000 all electric radio sets each day at its present plant, with 1,600 employés on the pay rolls. It is stated that 3,000 will be employed when the new plant is in operation, and the yearly output of sets will be 400,000.

Negotiations were concluded between A. Marchev, president of the Temple corporation, and H. P. Phelps, vice president of the Clearing industrial district. Hodge, Nicolson & Porter were brokers. Folz & Co. are architects.

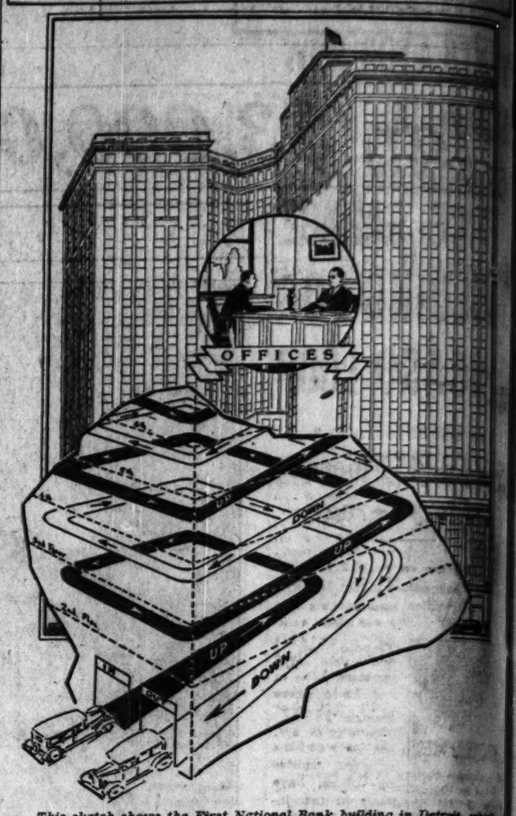
HOW IT'S DONE IN DETROIT



This sketch shows the First National Bank building in Detroit, which has a garage on the first eleven floors of one section, with offices in the upper fifteen stories. Cars go up and down on separate ramps. A tenant owner who has an office on the seventh floor, for instance, may motor up the ramp to the seventh floor of the garage, park his car, and step through a steel fire door into the office section of the skyscraper. If he is connected with the bank itself, he can reach his desk without going outdoors. Details of this project are given on page one.

The Shellmar Products company is to have a $75,000 one story addition to its plant at 3501 West 48th place, in the Kedzie development of the Central Manufacturing District, erected for it by the trustees. A. Epstein, structural engineer. The owners is one of the three firms in the district which have this month expanded their factory locations. A. A. Schmidt, industrial agent, represented the district trustees.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

VENTILATOR NOW ESSENTIAL PART OF MODERN HOME

Electrical Devices Last Word in Convenience.

(Next week will appear pictures and story of a modernistic house in Park Ridge.)

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[Home Builders Editor.]

Modern electric ventilation in the kitchen is rapidly becoming a standard demand for the well equipped home. Electric ventilators are also being installed in basements to remove wash day odors, tendencies towards dampness or smells arising, perhaps, from the heating equipment.

A third place one now finds electric ventilation is in an attic dormer window for the purpose of residence cooling in hot weather.

It is in the kitchen, however, that these electric ventilators, portable or built-in, are meeting with such open armed enthusiasm.

Their function is one which has been long needed in domestic residence.

Every housewife knows what odors, greasy fumes, disagreeable and excessive heat can follow in the wake of meal preparations. Through the entire house can trail tell tale cooking odors emanating from the kitchen stove. Of course the door into the dining room can be kept closed but it would have to be hermetically sealed to keep out of the rest of the house many permeating fumes and smells.

Growing More Popular.

It is no wonder then that these electric kitchen ventilators have become so popular that they are more and more being considered a household necessity. Not only are they being installed in a large number of the new homes which are built, but in many older homes as well.

Nor do these ventilators solve merely the problem of kitchen odors. Install either a portable ventilator or a built in wall ventilator and the work and expense of house cleaning and decorating is lessened with the removal of kitchen fumes and grease which soil walls, woodwork, furniture and hangings.

The cost of operating these ventilators is small—only a few cents a day. Every few minutes, or when it is necessary, one can enjoy a complete change of air without any objectionable drafts. And no matter what the weather is outside the air in the kitchen will be pure, fresh and invigorating. Indeed the air throughout the entire house will be freshened.

Self Cooled Motor.

Kitchen ventilators built in the wall are one of the most effective ways of securing thorough ventilation in residence kitchens. One manufacturer offers one with a fully enclosed self cooled motor, a feature made possible by a vent pipe which connects with the heart of the motor and provides for perfect cooling at high or low speed. A door is closed from the inside of the cabinet when not in use but on the outside there is an automatic shutter which gives further protection and opens and closes automatically with the operation of the fan.

Naturally the ventilators should be placed comparatively near to the range or directly over it. By so doing the air from the dining room and other parts of the house will be drawn toward the kitchen, thereby preventing kitchen odors from circulating through the house. Register openings placed in the door between the dining room and kitchen at both top and bottom help to creat effective circulation. This system is one especially recommended for new residences where the ventilator can be built into the wall as a unit.

Portable ventilators can be placed in the window. They can be installed in any ordinary window with a separate panel or with a portable panel. If placed, the fumes and the heat from the stove will be exhausted directly to the out ef doors before they have a chance to circulate elsewhere.

A Portable Type.

These portable ventilators are easily installed. They come in different types to suit different purses. None of them can be called expensive, however, either in first cost or operating cost. They do not sacrifice much light and can be taken away if one moves.

Besides electric kitchen ventilation electric ventilators are now being installed in basements for the removing of wash day odors, or dampness or any objectionable odors which might arise from the heating plant.

Houses are also being made cooler in summer by the installation of a ventilating fan in the dormer window of an attic. Openings placed in the clothes closets draw air from various rooms into the clothes closets and then up through the attic space. This system not only causes a pleasant circulation of air in the house but cools off the attic space in the day time as well as night.

Bathroom May Be Aired.

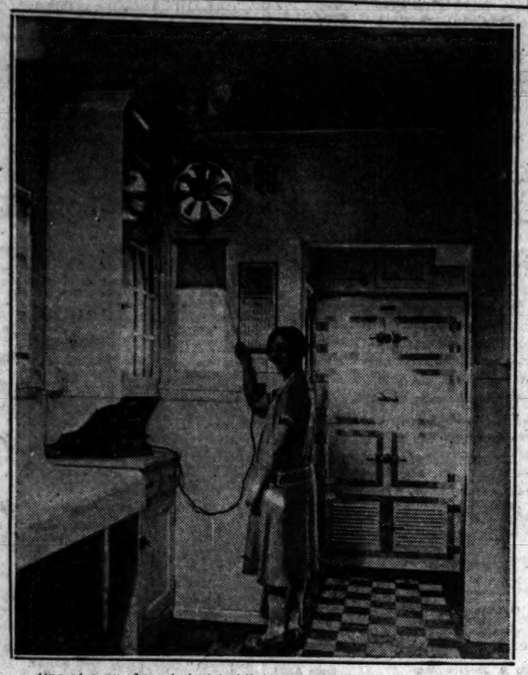
If one wishes the bathroom can be ventilated at the same time by placing a register opening in the ceiling. It need hardly be said that all the other windows in the attic should be kept closed so that the fan can only draw through the trap doors in the closets and the register in the bathroom ceiling.

It is an interesting subject, this electric kitchen and house ventilation and the comfort that it affords to all home members, but most of all to the home wife in the kitchen during many busy hours is—great!

GOOD HOME WORTH COST.

A good home is worth all you pay for it, effort and money.

AN AID TO COMFORT



One of a number of electric kitchen ventilators on the market which add so greatly to the comfort of the housewife in the preparation of the many family meals.

VENTILATOR BUILT INTO WALL

Here is a complete built in ventilator installed in the wall near to the range. When not in use the inside door is closed. On the outside of the fan there is an automatic shutter which opens and closes with the operation of the fan.

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

Financing a Home.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: I do want to buy a home but am not certain how to finance it. Is the contract payment method the best or should I borrow on a first and second mortgage? Where can I get a second mortgage? Do banks handle them? How much money should we have saved before we try to buy a house? —S. P.

Answer: The contract payment method is one of the easiest ways of financing a home. However, if you have saved up from 10 per cent to 20 per cent of the value of your house and have your lot you have a splendid start towards a home. You can take out a first mortgage of from 50 per cent to 60 per cent of the value of your house and lot at a bank and a second mortgage on the remainder less your original cash payment. Banks do not as a rule handle second mortgages but almost every community has reliable institutions and individuals that do, and many contractors who build homes will accept a second mortgage as a part payment of their bill.

High Gloss Enamel Durable.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Can I count on a high gloss enamel being a durable finish for my kitchen and bathroom woodwork? I have seen this finish frequently in baths and kitchen and judge there must be a "reason" for its popularity.—H. C. K., Kansas City.

Answer: Yes, there is a "reason." Enamel is often chosen for woodwork that is going to be given hard wear and may require a good deal of hard washing. Enamel is really varnish, you know, given opacity and color by added pigments. It is very durable and waterproof. The varnish binder makes it highly protective and resistant and where you see a high gloss enamel you can usually count on its being an indication that it is durable.

Porch Suitable for English House.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: What type of entrance porch is simple and suitable for an English house?—D. A.

Answer: A small gable form placed over the entrance makes a pleasing English entrance porch. It can be walled in on both sides or open with screen work or with moulded balusters.

ELECTRIC FLOOR POLISHERS ARE WISE PURCHASE

Where one has beautiful and perhaps expensive floors in the home, or where one is anxious to keep the floors in perfect condition, an electric polishing machine is a good investment.

There are various types of polishers on the market.

Some are large and one can use them for the initial treatment of the floors as well as for their general maintenance. Others are small and keep the floors in excellent condition after their first finishing. Again where the home is small and floor space inconsiderable and one does not mind using a little energy there are small hand polishers.

It doesn't matter so much what one uses to keep the floors in good condition so long as one uses something.

WORD OF ADVICE ON EQUIPMENT OF BATHROOMS

Work of Installation Must Be Expert.

BY HOMER GRANT.

In almost every remodeling piece of work the bathroom comes in for its generous share of attention. Sometimes one wants an extra lavatory or running water in a dressing room. Perhaps an extra bath is to be added to the house or a small toilet installed convenient to some bedroom or nursery.

This question of bathroom location and attendant problems is a vitally important one. It demands expert service—the service of an architect or a reputable and responsible master plumber.

Usually, however, before the problem reaches the stage of expert help there are many small points which come up in family discussions relative to plumbing plans and changes.

Here are a few of the points to consider—and to be followed out—if successful bathroom and toilet installations are to be made.

Hidden Fittings Advisable.

Above or adjacent to the kitchen is a good location for a bathroom, in that economy exists if supply and waste pipes are near each other.

Setting all fixtures wth hidden fittings or supply pipes against inside partitions is a safeguard against freezing [many a family has endured annual "winter freeze up" because this was not done].

Sometimes the noise of flushing, plumbing fixtures penetrates the living quarters. This noise can be considerably reduced and sometimes eliminated by placing a soil pipe in a kitchen wall or partition. Or another way to muffle bathroom sounds is to pack the soil pipe with mineral wool.

Make provision for good bathroom ventilation and place the windows high.

Radiator enclosures are excellent if the heating unit stands on the floor, and if a bathroom is small wall hung radiators are convenient.

An electric heater installed is an excellent way of assuring one's family auxiliary heat night and morning many needed times of the year,

First Floor Lavatory.

A lavatory on the first floor affords a maximum of convenience if the bathroom—one or more—is placed on the second floor.

Lavateries in each bedroom are a big comfort when there is only one bath.

Some families plan a closet and lavatory in a bedroom adjoining the bath and opening on the hall.

A linen closet in or near a bathroom is a big domestic step saver.

Consider the many different varieties of wall coverings and floor coverings now possible for the modern bathroom. These coverings are in many different materials and suited to all sizes of purses and all kinds of tastes.

Consider carefully what color scheme you wish to carry out in your bathroom and plan your walls, floors and fixtures accordingly.

Buy the best that you can afford—but not more than you can afford.

What Do You Know?

1—Why are special drainage tiles around the outside of cellar walls a good investment in many cases?
2—What is generally meant by integral waterproofing?
3—Is this an expensive proposition?
4—What is meant by ventilation holes in the foundation walls?
5—How should they be protected?
6—What are the chief requisites of a good foundation wall?
7—Why should the concrete footings be well below the frost line?
8—Where a cellar is inclined to be damp or wet what can be done about it from the inside of the cellar?
9—If one is building a house on low ground in a hollow or rolling country or on stick soil which becomes compact when wet, should the foundation wall be high or low?
10—What can cause large settlement cracks to appear in the foundation wall?

Answers to Quiz

1. Wet conditions of the grounds often are unexpectedly discovered and these drainage tiles carry away rain water which is not absorbed by the ground.

2. Making the concrete foundations watertight by the addition of waterproofing compounds which combine with the concrete and fill up the pores.

3. No.

4. Holes to allow air to blow through and maintain a comparatively dry condition.

5. By a galvanized mesh to keep animals from crawling through them and by wooden shutters in winter to help keep floors warm.

6. It shouldt have strong footings under it and be water tight and damp proof.

7. Frozen ground under a foundation wall is a serious matter since it can move and heave and cause more settleent in one part of the house than another.

8. Damp cellar condition can often be overcome by spreading a one inch thick coat of waterproof cement mortar over the interior of the walls and on the top of the cellar floor.

9. Build foundation walls high and fill around them with terraces which slope away from house and allow rain water to drain off.

10. Sometimes the wall is poorly built, but in the majority of cases the cause of the cracks can be traced to the type of construction under the wall. Foundation walls, like a human being, need substantial "feet" to stand on.

MAKE WISCONSIN SPRINGS INTO A RESORT LAKE

Palmyra, Wis., Aug. 17.—Six months ago there were located a mile south of this city thirty-seven springs of various sizes, some of the larger ones being sixty feet in diameter and from thirty-five to forty feet deep. The spring water was always a deep blue regardless of weather conditions and the springs were filled with large German trout.

Some time ago it was decided to erect a dam and fill in the saucer shaped valley in which the springs are located. This is now just about completed and a lake is now being flooded over an area a mile long and three quarters of a mile wide. It will be from fifteen to twenty-five feet deep in the center of the lake.

When the proper lake level is reached, which probably will be some time next week, lots will be offered for sale to the public. Kurtis R. Froedtert is president of the Blue Spring Lake company, owner of the project. He also is an official of the Froedtert Grain and Malting company of Milwaukee.

SCHOOL FINDS OUT HOW TO LANDSCAPE

Shows It Can Be Done on Grounds.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Hugh Manley school of Chicago has demonstrated that landscaping can be successfully done around public buildings. A year ago the school started under the handicap of doubts and fears that no one would ever be able to keep trees, shrubs, and grass alive under the 5,000 shoe soles of the 2,500 pupils. The faculty, school children, engineers, janitors, and neighbors all took little stock in W. A. Beaudry's theory that school grounds could be beautified with flowers, foliage, and grass.

The doubting Thomases had plenty of evidence to back up their belief before winter was over. The landscaping work was started last fall. Trees and shrubs were planted. Gardeners had fussed around for days preparing a seedbed and sowing seeds on the lawn. An abundance of water was wasted in getting the seeds started and keeping the plants alive last fall.

Ground Into the Dust.

But the shoe soles started their destructive work as soon as playground activities got under way. Trees and shrubs were twisted into splinters and the shredded stubs studded the lawn. Grass blades were ground into the dust. The steep terrace which stretches along the north side of the building for a solid block on Polk street was used for a slide. When spring came the terrace was as slick as a creek bank where muskrats slide.

Before time for crocuses to open it was agreed that successful landscaping around a public school building was impossible. Mr. Beaudry refused to agree.

When it came time for spring planting Miss Nellie C. Hudd, principal of the school, took the landscaping problem under her wing. She wanted to prove or disprove the Beaudry theory. The faculty was called in, but most of the teachers shook their heads in doubt. A. Bickner, one of the teachers, was put at the head of the landscape committee appointed to find out why the Hugh Manley school grounds were little more than a dusty lot.

Finds the Remedy.

Mr. Bickner started out to find out who was to blame. Was it the school children, the grownups of the neighborhood, or both?

His report said: "We find that our pupils do as much damage to the lawn and shrubs during school hours as is done by the community in the after school hours. The children damage the landscaping during school hours chiefly by cutting across corners over the lawn and through the bushes when the bell rings; pushing each other into the shrubbery and onto the lawn when lining up; playing ball against the walls of the building and running over the lawn and through the bushes to recover the ball.

"We believe that if proper conditions were remedied the landscaping would come along much more nicely. There are at present lawn guards on duty before school, at noon, and after school who are trying their best to keep the children reminded of 'keep off, please.' These guards lose no class time and our aim is to keep them on the job. We promised them the maximum amount of service credits."

Children Write Slogans.

Miss Hudd sent a copy of the Bickner report to each teacher, suggesting that the landscaping troubles be discussed with the children and that they be given the responsibility for the care of the grounds.

Up to that time more than 300 window panes had been broken out of the school building. That was early last spring. Since the campaign was started the grounds around the school have taken on a different color.

At the beginning of the new drive to save the trees, shrubs and grass around Hugh Manley school a slogan campaign was conducted among the children. Twenty-five hundred minds were turned loose to turn out the slogans that were to be used on the school grounds. As a result of this competition the following slogans were selected and painted on signs which are placed over the lawn during the school year:

"Beautiful grass, shrubs, and trees portray Manley's busy bee."

"Keep Manley's grass a-growing to make a better showing."

"Off the lawn you must play or the grass will fade away."

"Trees and shrubs make for greater happiness."

"Beautiful building, beautiful grounds."

Then Edward A. Kalinski, engineer-custodian; his assistant, Joseph Ferciger, and William Ward, janitor, took over the task of watering the lawn and pulling the weeds out. Dead and broken shrubs and trees were replaced and new grass seed was sown in the spring.

Covered with Velvet.

Children and neighbors on all sides of the block took an interest in the grounds. Everybody took it as a personal responsibility to see that the other fellow kept off the lawn so that the young grass would have a chance. All spring and even during the summer, after school closed, children took turns sprinkling the lawn, and not a toe touched the tender turf.

Today the grounds are covered with a richly colored, velvety lawn. Even the steep terraces that were worn bare last winter are carpeted with fine bluegrass. The catalpas, trees of heaven, and sumacs are growing like weeds. Most of the following shrubs are thriving:

Morrow's honeysuckle [lonicera morrowei], mock orange [philadelphus coronarius], bridal wreath [spirea van houtei]], double flowering plum [prunis triflobae], weigelia rosea [diervilla rosea], rose rugosa, rubra, Persian lilac [syringa], golden bell [forsythia intermedia], Japanese barberry [berberis], Anthony Waterer pink spirea [spirea anthony waterer], strawberry bush [euonymous europaeus], French hybrid lilac [syringa hybrid], ibotae privet [ligustrum ibotae], arrowood [viburnum dentatum], honeysuckle [lonicera tatarica], privet [ligustrum], and viburnum dentatum.

Possible Anywhere.

Not only are the trees, shrubs, and grass being carefully protected, but since the campaign was started early last spring not a single window pane has been smashed, although occasionally one is cracked accidentally by a stray ball.

Landscape men and teachers believe that if the Hugh Manley school—situated in a congested west side district, within three and one-fourth miles of the loop—can maintain beautiful grounds it would be a comparatively simple task for every other school in Chicago or any other city outside of New York.

Plunge Potted Plants in Shady Spot, Says Expert

A Kansas horticulturist of Manhattan says that potted plants carried in the house during the winter should begin to thrive. They will do better if the pots are sunk to the rims in the ground and placed in a spot protected from the sun from noon time on. To prevent plants thus plunged from sending their roots into the ground, plug up the drainage hole in the pot or dig a cone shaped hole under the pot. Such a practice will prevent the roots from going down, insects and earthworms from coming up, and still provide drainage.

Feeder Is Told to Get Pigs on Early Market

Hog prices are high enough nowadays that the Minnesota station is advising farmers to keep on feeding old corn. Feed experts there say that if farmers wait for the new corn crop to finish off their spring pigs, they will probably cut their profits. They advise hog raisers to keep their pigs growing, even if corn is high now; it will pay.

EXPERIMENTING IN SCHOOL LANDSCAPING

Tribune Gardening Booklet Tells How to Plant Peonies

Gardeners who are planning to plant peonies this fall will need a copy of the Tribune's "Flower Gardening" booklet. The method used by one of the most successful amateur peony growers in this part of the country is given in the booklet. Peonies are old standbys with many gardeners, but they must be properly planted to get fine blossoms. This gardener's guide gives peony planting details that will aid in insuring success.

The names of many high-ranking peony varieties are given in "Flower Gardening," written by Frank Ridgway.

Other valuable fall gardening advice is given in "Flower Gardening," which is distributed through this newspaper's four public service offices located at the following addresses: The Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street; Tribune Tower Lobby, and the Tribune's two offices at 1101 East 63rd street and 4152 West Madison street.

"Flower Gardening" is 15 cents a copy, 18 cents by mail.

COOK COUNTY FAIR TO OPEN ON AUGUST 28

Educational Features Will Be Emphasized.

Farmers and gardeners are combing their fields and pastures nowadays for the best specimens of live stock, fruits, vegetables and other farm products to be exhibited in the annual Cook county fair, which opens at Palatine Aug. 28 and closes Labor day.

T. C. HART.

C. C. Hildebrandt, president of the fair association, announced yesterday that $10,000 in cash will be offered prize winning exhibitors.

Secretary T. C. Hart says agricultural educational feature will be emphasized more than usual this year.

"We have been encouraged by the good that has been brought about by the educational exhibits we have had at previous fairs, particularly during the last few years," he relates. "Even our judging is done in such a way that the selection of the best animals and crops aids in setting up new standards for our farmers and truck growers."

One of the most practical educational features of the fair, Mr. Hart says, is the Cook county experiment station's exhibit. In this display, E. P. Lewis, director of the station, will demonstrate the valuable information that has been discovered in the vegetable tests made at the experimental farm in the heart of the Chicago trucking region.

Farmers from northern Illinois, southern Wisconsin, and northern Indiana are entering the best of their fields and flocks. Every section of the Chicago region will be represented by producers of cattle, hogs, sheep, horses, pet stock, vegetables, fruit, and flowers. Farmers' wives will display their skill in cooking, canning, and needlework.

Attractive prizes are offered girls and boys in the various divisions of the junior fair, which is under the direction of E. J. Tobin, superintendent of Cook county's schools. The children will exhibit samples of their achievement in project work in the various branches of agriculture.

MEN'S GARDEN CLUB TO HOLD FLOWER SHOW

The Men's Garden club will hold its annual two day amateur flower show at Garfield park conservatory exhibition hall Sept. 7 and 8. Members and nonmembers will exhibit their choicest blossoms, and other garden clubs are being invited to compete in a special class.

A bronze medal will be awarded to the garden club whose members win the largest number of points in the classes for guest exhibitors. Large displays of named varieties of dahlias and gladioli will be made by commercial growers. August Koch of the west parks system will provide plants to decorate the hall.

"It is our ambition," says President L. W. Nack, "to make our annual flower shows representative of the gardening interest of the entire Chicago region. Prizes are offered for the best specimens of every flower now in blossom in Chicago gardens. There also are prizes for floral arrangements. The show will be open Saturday and Sunday from noon until 10 p. m., and there is no charge for admittance. Our object is to promote interest in gardening and to educate the public in the beauty of garden

HOW TO KILL CHICKEN PESTS.

My chickens are covered with some kind of insect. They are very small. Some of my birds are thin, although I give them plenty of feed and water. Can you tell me what to do for these pests? O. R.

REPLY.

Mites and lice may be causing the trouble with your chickens. These two pests are common in the great ickon belt of the middle west. Fortunately they are easy to control.

Following is some recent and valuable information given by L. E. Weaver, a poultry specialist of Cornell university:

"Of the two pests mites are by far the worst. They are called the highwaymen of the poultry world. At night they steal upon their helpless victims, rob them of blood, and then hide away during the day. Mites inhabit the entire poultry house, but more especially the undersides of roosts and nearby walls. When gorged with blood, sucked from the fowls at night, they are red and about the size of a pinhead. At other times they are much smaller and whitish in color. They multiply very rapidly in hot weather.

"Pullets in a house infested with mites cannot make a normal growth. They may become thin and weak, and in extreme cases they often die from loss of blood.

"A thorough painting of the roosts and nearby walls with carbolineum before the chicks are put in the house will keep the mites out all summer. But if this is not done and the mites are discovered after the chicks are in the house, a thorough spraying of the roosts and walls with a mixture of kerosene and crank case oil is the next best treatment. Carbolineum is too severe on growing chicks and pullets during hot weather. It may be used to advantage as soon as the mites are again noticed.

Unlike mites, lice do not suck blood, but they live in the plumage and constantly annoy and irritate fowls. If lice are abundant the growth of pullets is greatly checked, diarrhea follows, and a general weakened condition may result. Lice increase very rapidly. It is estimated that in eight weeks three pairs of lice may become 125,000 individuals.

Pullets put into a thoroughly clean house and never allowed to come in contact with older birds are seldom troubled with lice. But when they do become lousy the pullets themselves, not the house, must be treated. The best treatment is to dust sodium fluoride, an inexpensive powder which can be obtained from a druggist, into the plumage of each bird. Care should be taken to keep an excessive amount of the powder away from the head, as it irritates the eyes and nasal passages. Another means of control is to paint nicotine sulphate, black lead 40, on the roosts very thinly, about an hour before the chickens go to roost.

FIGHTING "WATER" GRASS ON LAWN.

I am in a peck of trouble about my lawn. Five year ago we built a house, graded the lawn and sowed grass seed and more grass seed. Each fall I have more or less "water" grass but this summer I have had nothing else. I have mowed the lawn at least twice a week during the wet weather, letting the grass fall on the lawn but now I am using a grass catcher. I used a liberal supply of fertiliser this spring. Part of the soil was black and part clay from excavating. I read your garden articles and have your "Flower Gardening" book but find nothing to help me. DR. O. L. K.

REPLY.

Perhaps the most effective way of fighting the grass pest on your lawn would be to pry or spade it up, expose the water grass roots to the sun for a while and then reseed the soil. From your brief description it is necessary to guess at the kind of grass you have on your lawn. Correcting the condition of the soil might give the desirable grasses a better chance and handicap the "water" grass.

Here is some information which I will pass on to you for what it is worth: Several gardeners have had good results in controlling lawn plant pests by using aluminum sulphate. This chemical has a tendency to make the soil more acid which may or may not be the thing your soil needs. Some gardeners who have used aluminum sulphate find that it discourages the growth of many undesirable weeds and grasses that commonly infest lawns according to fertilizer experts.

Aluminum sulphate is a powder and is applied dry when the grass is dry. Experienced lawnmakers recommend that it be used at the rate of about four pounds to each 100 square feet of lawn. Do not use more than this amount at any one time. Broadcast the powder evenly over the lawn and then soak it into the soil thoroughly with water. Water the lawn carefully to make sure that none of the chemical is left on the plants.

A similar amount of the aluminum sulphate may be applied again in about thirty days.

NEW YORK CURB STOCK PRICES WORK HIGHER

Advances Are Scored in Public Utility Stocks.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 17.—Some rather aggressive buying was in evidence in various directions of the curb market today and price movements continued to point toward higher levels. Scattering gains ranged as high as fifteen points.

Public utility issues came forward anew with good gains in American Superpower, Electric Bond and Share, the last named rising more than 3 points on active trading, and Associated Gas, American Light, Electric Investors and Insull Utilities gathered strength following early weakness. Intercontinental corporation was easier, selling off two points while higher prices appeared in Goldman Sachs and Trans-American corporation. Consolidated Gas Rights sold in large volume at a fractional advance. Anchor Post rose to a new high mark for the year.

Motor and oil shares showed strength. The latter group was featured by a 6 point upturn in Gulf Oil which rose to record figures at 167. Indiana and Vacuum were also well bought.

During the greater part of this week the market has been in a process of readjustment. Trading conditions conformed to the record breaking movements in many important stocks on the New York Stock exchange. There were some unsettling influences, causing many stocks to decline, while wide returns occurred in other issues. Crocker Wheeler was the outstanding feature, moving up 117 points during the week to the new high record of 460. National Investors made an advance of over 20 points to 197½ and Union American Investing also made a new high record on an advance of about 20 points.

WITH CANE-FIBRE INSULATION

. . . build new rooms out of wasted attic space

DON'T let all this valuable attic space simply go to waste. There are three or four new rooms that you can build easily and inexpensively with Celotex... rooms pleasantly cool in summer, comfortable and warm in winter.

You can have the new bedroom you need so badly when you have an extra house guest. There's plenty of space for an attractive living room that may soon become the most popular room in the entire house. And you can give the children a playroom of their own, fully protected from drafts and dampness.

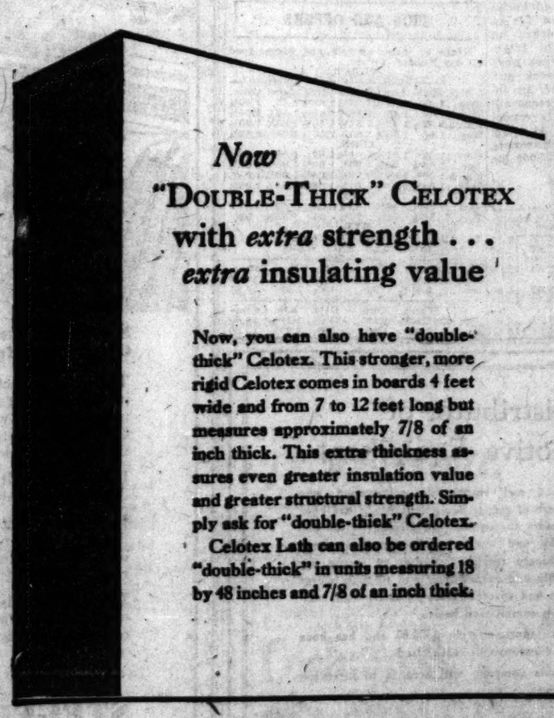
Simply remodel your attic with Celotex. For Celotex builds as well as insulates... provides the structural strength you need for tight, strong walls and ceilings... makes permanent rooms out of space that is now completely wasted.

Roofs lined with Celotex assure more even, pleasant temperatures the year 'round... resist the passage of scorching sun's rays . . . retard the leakage of furnace heat.

Celotex is the only insulation made from the long, tough fibres of cane. It comes in big, strong boards that measure 4 feet wide, from 7 to 12 feet long and 7/16" thick. Celotex Lath comes in units measuring 18" by 48" and 7/16" thick. It is especially designed to reinforce against plaster cracks and eliminate lath marks . . . helps provide smooth, enduring plaster interiors.

Thousands of families remodel their attics with Celotex quickly, easily, economically ...are using cane-fibre insulation to line basements and garages, to insulate roofs and sun porches.

Ask your architect, builder or dealer to help you transform your attic into pleasant, livable rooms...or write for further information on how to utilize the waste space in your attic or basement, and save on fuel money as well.



Now
with extra strength . . . extra insulating value

Now, you can also have "double-thick" Celotex. This stronger, more rigid Celotex comes in boards 4 feet wide and from 7 to 12 feet long but measures approximately 7/8 of an inch thick. This extra thickness assures even greater insulation value and greater structural strength. Simply ask for "double-thick" Celotex.

Celotex Lath can also be ordered "double-thick" in units measuring 18 by 48 inches and 7/8 of an inch thick.

Be sure it's CANE-FIBRE Insulation!

Only Celotex is made from the long, tough fibres of cane. The peculiar advantages of cane-fibre insulation cannot be obtained in any other material. Be sure you get CELOTEX!

SENTIMENT IS BULLISH AGAIN IN WHEAT PIT

Winnipeg Leads Advance in Prices.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Bullish sentiment continued to predominate in the wheat market yesterday, and while there was heavy realizing sales, good buying appeared on all the dips, and the close was at net gains of 1⅞@2⅛c, with values in new ground on the present upturn.

Winnipeg again led the advance, and gained 3¼@3½c for the day. Trade in corn was mainly of a local character, but the close at gains of ¼@⅜c. Oats finished ¼c lower to ¼c higher. Rye advanced in sympathy with wheat.

Grain values were on the upgrade during the greater part of the week, the liquidating movement running its course early Wednesday, and at the last wheat showed net gains of 6⅛@6⅝c; corn, 1⅜@5½c; oats, ¼@⅝c, and rye, ⅞@1⅞c for the week. Lard was 35c, ribs 5c, and bellies 25@35c higher for the week.

Realizing by operators who bought earlier in the week, and who had handsome profits as the result of the upturn of 11⅝@12½c in wheat from the low on Wednesday, was largely responsible for the reaction in values after the early advance. There was nothing in the news to account for the selling. Thrashing returns from the Canadian northwest continue to make a poor showing with stubble showing a yield of around 4 bu per acre, according to scattered reports, while summer fallow is yielding around 15 bu.

Rains were reported in southern Argentina late in the day, but this was offset by an official government estimate that only 56,000,000 bu wheat remained for export, the balance of the crop year, the lowest figure put out so far and well below Broomhall's estimate. Buenos Aires closed ⅝@⅞c lower on the rain reports, and that market will have a holiday Monday. Liverpool was strong and 2¼@2⅝d higher on further unfavorable weather for harvesting and a better cash demand. The seaboard reported a good business in hard winters and durums, with the continent and the United Kingdom buying. The spot basis here was firm, while at the gulf it was quoted 1c higher.

Corn Belt Needs Rain.

Corn crop is being damaged by the continued dry weather, and the weekly forecast held out prospects of only scattered showers. The Nebraska midmonth report suggested a deterioration of 9 points in the condition in that state since Aug. 1. September acted tight at times and led the advance early due to short covering, but eased later on reports that purchases of old corn to arrive aggregated around 100,000 bu. Week-end profit taking was largely responsible for the reaction from the top in the deferred deliveries. It is expected that local stocks will show a good decrease for the week, and local industry loaded 110,000 bu out of store on Friday.

BYLLESBY UTILITY INTERESTS BUY 9 MORE COMPANIES

Extension of the public utility holdings of the Byllesby interests of Chicago was announced yesterday with the purchase of nine power, light, gas, ice, and water properties in Kentucky and West Virginia.

Officials of the Eastern Kentucky Utilities company, subsidiary of the Public Service corporation of Chicago, reported the sale. The nine properties, it was believed, will be under the control of the Standard Gas and Electric corporation, the largest Byllesby concern.

The companies purchased were the Eastern Kentucky Utilities company, Prestonburg Gas company, Paintsville Gas and Water company, Salyersville Gas, Electric and Ice company, West Liberty Electric and Gas company, Louisa Light and Power company, Crystal Ice and Cold Storage company, and Kenova Ice company. Several properties of the Federal Public Service corporation were included in the transaction.

CASH-GRAIN NEWS

The continent and the United Kingdom were fair buyers of cash wheat with sales of 500,000 bu estimated in all positions, mainly hard winters. Local handlers sold 21,000 bu wheat; 105,000 bu corn; 120,000 bu oats, and 5,000 bu barley to the domestic trade. Charters were for 225,000 bu wheat to Georgian Bay. Purchases to arrive aggregated 25,000 bu wheat, 115,000 bu corn, and 15,000 bu oats.

With a steady reduction in the movement of cash wheat to terminal markets and rapid progress being made in cleaning up the accumulation on tracks, the basis in the sample market was again firmer with sales showing ⅛@1c better, as compared with the future. No. 2 red brought 3@4c; No. 2 hard, 3⅜@4c, and No. 1 northern, 4@5c under September. Cash corn basis was firm with No. 2 mixed 1¼@1½c; yellow, 1⅜@2c, and white, 1½c over September. Cash oats basis was ¼@½c higher, with No. 2 white, 2¼@2⅜c, and No. 3 white, 2⅜@4¼c under September.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 123 cars; corn, 35 cars; oats, 204 cars; rye, 7 cars; barley, 32 cars.

COTTON MARKET STRONGER

Cotton had fair support yesterday in New York and New Orleans, although Liverpool was 1 to 2 points lower early but rallied and closed 3 to 4 points higher with spot sales 2,000 bales. This had a strengthening influence on American markets as reports from Texas were less favorable due to lack of rain.

There has been considerable selling out of lines held for a long period and the market is said to be getting in better shape. Weevil activities in some sections are increasing. Reports from Washington said there was a prospect of cotton growers securing aid from the federal farm bureau, which would enable the cotton growers exchange to market their crop in a more orderly manner. Trade reports, however, from England, were slightly pessimistic. There was moderate spreading between Chicago and New Orleans.

At the close Chicago was 9 to 18 points higher and New York and New Orleans were around 14 to 23 points higher, and spots in New York were up 15 points at 18.35c, with New Orleans up 15 points to 18.20c.

Bids on October in Chicago for Monday were 18c and offers 18.35c. Bids on December were 18.25c and 18.62c.

LARD WELL ABSORBED

Commission house buying of lard yesterday was of fairly good volume with selling scattered and despite the decline of 10c in hogs, lard advanced and closed with net gains of 10c to 12½c. Clear bellies were picked up fairly and advanced 7½c to 12½c. Shipments of meats for the week were smaller than the previous week and last year, while lard showed an increase. Prospects are for a moderate run of hogs for the week. Liverpool lard was 1s up on spot and 3d to 6d higher on futures. Export clearances were 203,000 lbs of lard and 25,000 lbs of bacon. INDEPENDENTS MAY FORM GIANT STEEL COMBINE

YoungstownCo.Seen Merger Nucleus.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 17.—Action of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company in changing its capital structure, by doubling authorized common capitalization and declaring a 20 per cent stock dividend, is understood in midwest industrial and financial circles as another step paving the way for a gigantic combination of independent steel makers. By this action the company will have 800,000 unissued common shares in its treasury available for disposition as directors determine.

A consolidation of midwest steel companies into one large combination has been under consideration for several years. No less than a dozen producers and their allied interests are directly controlled by the so called C. B. Eaton group of Cleveland, which includes the Mathers, John L. Severance and others identified with the Union Trust company of Cleveland. This group earlier in the year created a pool estimated at $30,000,000 to purchase independent companies.

Controls Republic Company.

It now holds a controlling interest in the Republic Iron and Steel company, one of the country's largest steel makers with diversified finishing capacity. It was this group which brought about merger with the Trumbull Steel company, at Warren, with the Republic company. The Eaton group also controls Central Alloy Steel company of Canton and Massillon; Otis Steel company, Cleveland; Corrigan-McKinney Steel company, Cleveland; Midland Steel Products company, Cleveland. It is said to have bought heavily into Inland Steel company, Chicago; Empire Steel corporation, Mansfield; American Rolling Mill, Inc., Middletown; Pittsburgh Steel company, and several smaller makers.

Through holdings of the Mathers and of Mr. Severance, this group also has an important voice in the management of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company. Control of the Youngstown company is vested, however, in Youngstown capital which is headed by James A. Campbell, president.

Holds Advantage.

In merger negotiations, the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company holds a distinct advantage by reason of its substantial capacity in the Chicago district. The company gained a foothold in the important Chicago area several years ago by purchasing outright the Steel and Tube company of America. Subsequently, negotiations were nearly completed for consolidation of the Sheet and Tube company with the Inland Steel company, but were abruptly terminated.

Republic Steel has acquired within the last eighteen months Steel and Tube, Inc., with plants in Cleveland, Lorain and Brooklyn, and in this purchase acquired the valuable Johnson patents for manufacture of steel tubing by electrical welding.

In view of the overlapping in ownership of the important midwest companies it would not be difficult to effect a consolidation. The more important producers, such as Youngstown Sheet and Tube and Republic Steel, have important iron ore holdings through their partial ownership in iron ore companies.

Add to Value.

The Lake Superior ore holdings of Youngstown Sheet and Tube, for example, are among the richest in the world, and greatly add to its value in merger considerations, making this company the logical nucleus of any large consolidation which may be effected.

A consolidation of steel companies, such as is now assured, would create a unit in the industry second only to the United States Steel corporation and exceeding Bethlehem Steel in aggregate capacity. It would have ramifications throughout the country in production and distribution of its products, which would in many respects equal those of the leading interest. It is Mr. Campbell's contention that such a combine, if it is effected, must have its headquarters in Youngstown.

Mechanism of Short Sales Is Explained

BY SCRUTATOR.

A New York financial newspaper recently published an editorial on the subject "Chicago Never Goes Short." Its comment was based on the suspended trading, for a short time, in issues which had been driven to such a high point that there were no buyers and in which the holders all wanted to sell for profit taking.

Selling short is largely an activity of professionals and the experienced. The new class of investors and speculators are buyers. It is difficult for the inexperienced to understand how one can "sell something he hasn't got" and make money at it. Critics of the stock markets, like Senator Brookhart and Senator Glass, do not see that the short interest has its value in stabilization of prices which advocates of the market claim for it.

Machinery for short sales has reached a high development in New York. Some sapient comments on what they mean and how they are accomplished were made in Meeker's book on the stock exchange. This authority maintained that the short seller is in exactly the same position as the farmer who sells his crop before it is planted at an agreed price. The seller is selling in each case something which he does not own, but which he is confident he can get, and is willing to pay a money penalty if he cannot.

Brokers Demand Guarantee.

What happens when a short sale is made may be explained by taking Meeker's example of a supposititious bear named Thompson, who believed that a certain stock selling at $100 a share would go lower. He desired to sell a hundred shares, with the intention of making the profit on the fall in price. He accordingly placed a selling order with White & Co., his brokers.

The brokers demanded of him a guarantee that he would stand all the loss if the price of the stock went up instead of down. Thompson put up a certain amount of margin. Once $2,500 would have been sufficient on a transaction of this kind. Now, if a stock is active, the margin demands may be greater. Assuming, however, that it was $2,500, Thompson agreed to keep the same amount of protection for his broker if the price rose. In other words, if the price of the stock went to 110, he would have to produce another $1,000 margin.

White & Co. then sold the hundred shares to another broker for $10,000. Delivery was made to the second broker, Brown, the following day, in accordance with the exchange rules. Brown got the hundred shares and White & Co. got the buyer's $10,000. When the sale was made neither Thompson nor his broker had the shares. The question next is: Where did they come from?

Shares Are Borrowed.

White & Co. went to the stock loan post and borrowed them. White found Green, another broker, who owned some of this stock. Green made the loan of his stock. In return White had to lend Green the amount that the stock would have brought at the close of trading on that day. If the close was at Thompson's selling price, the amount would have been $10,000. The agreement was throughout that White & Co. should let Green have from day to day what the stock would bring. If the price fell to 95 Green would return $500 of the White money; if it went to 110, White would let Green have another $1,000.

The money was still White's and the stock was still Green's. So Green had to pay interest at any agreed rate to White. White, for Thompson, had to pay to Green any dividends that the stock paid until it was returned to him.

Thus the short sale, reduced to simple terms, simply meant that Thompson's broker had borrowed a hundred shares of stock from Green and sold it and delivered it to a client of Brown, another broker. The stock is owed, not to the buyer, but to Green, who is at all times protected by the money which Thompson put up as margin, plus the amount paid by Brown's client, which White turned over to Green in the loan form.

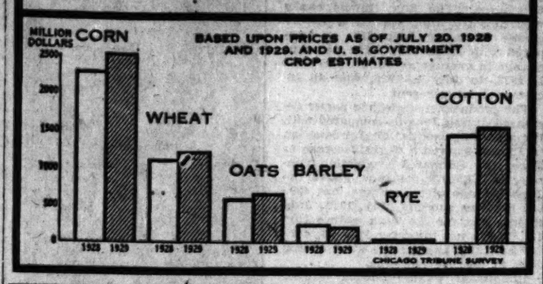
Cites Useful Claims.

The transaction was closed when the price of the stock dropped to 95. White & Co. purchased a hundred shares of the stock for Thompson at that price and returned it to Green, who in turn handed back the money he had borrowed. Thompson gained $500, less the commissions and other charges. These charges might include a premium paid to Green, in the event the loanable quantity of the particular stock stock was small. They did include the stamp taxes on the transfer and any dividends yielded while Thompson was short.

Thus, in effect, the short sale became merely a deal in which the short seller, soon after he sold what he did not have, owed a hundred shares of a stock to a man who willingly made the loan of it. In a large security market it is claimed, perhaps with justice, that the shorts act to prevent violent drops in prices. Being short, and willing to take profits when they can, they buy in on slight falls and their influence automatically tends to halt the movement or even to reverse it.

The stock loan post in New York has been in operation for years. Only recently one was established on the Chicago Stock Exchange.

WHAT WILL THE AMERICAN FARMER GET FOR HIS 1929 CROPS?



INCREASE IN DEMAND LOAN RATE WILL BE IN FORCE TOMORROW

Increase in the demand loan rate to brokers and bond dealers in the Chicago district of from seven to eight per cent will be in force by Tuesday, it was learned last night. First announcement of the raise was made exclusively in THE TRIBUNE on Thursday.

For months the rate in Chicago on stock and bond collateral to brokers has remained at seven per cent while the rate in New York has ranged between eight and ten per cent. Notification of the raise will probably be placed in the mails by the banks tomorrow.

The increase has been expected by Chicago brokerage houses for about a week and the action is not expected to have any effect on the markets. The move is expected to keep large sums of money on tap for use in Chicago which hitherto have been dispatched eastward to take advantage of the higher rates prevailing there.

When the rate is increased here it will be the first time that interest rates higher than seven per cent have been charged in Illinois due to the state usury act which prohibited a charge in excess of seven per cent. The law was recently amended by the state legislature to exempt higher rates for loans on stock market collateral.

ASK RECEIVER FOR HAMMOND ELECTRIC ROAD

Suit for foreclosure and application for the appointment of a receiver for the Hammond, Whiting and East Chicago Railway company was filed in the United States District court in Hammond, Ind., yesterday by the First Union Trust and Savings bank of Chicago and Emile K. Boisot of California, trustees under the mortgage.

The bill, which was filed by F. C. Crumpacker of the law firm of Crumpacker and Fredericks, counsel for the trustees, alleges that the street railway has defaulted in payment of interest on its first mortgage bonds since Feb. 1, 1923.

It is expected that sale of the property under the foreclosure proceedings will result from the filing of the suit by the trustees. A syndicate of local business men of East Chicago, Whiting and Hammond has been formed to bid for the property if it is put up for sale in the federal court. The Midland Utilities Investment company has a minority interest in the syndicate.

The Hammond, Whiting and East Chicago Railway company operates a system of electric street railways in Hammond, Whiting, East Chicago and Indiana Harbor. The service of the railway is interconnected with the Chicago surface lines.

Amtorg Corp. Announces Payment on Soviet Note

Harriman & Co., in connection with settlements relative to the former manganese concession of the Harriman interests at Tchiatury, soviet Georgia, has been made as of July 31, 1929. The payment amounted to $120,750 and follows $120,750 made on Jan. 31 last, and $35,000 on April 1.

Cite Effects of Increase in Rediscount

New York, Aug. 17.—The effects of the operation of the federal reserve board's change of policy announced on Aug. 8, when the Federal Reserve bank of New York advanced its rediscount rate to 6 per cent and simultaneously reduced its bill-buying rate from 5½ to 5⅜ per cent, have thus far followed closely the predictions made by bankers and economists at the time of the move.

The money market has steadied, and rates have become generally somewhat easier, moving within a narrow groove, in contrast to the erratic gyrations witnessed in the first half of the year. This condition, it is expected will continue until the fall and a gradual shifting of the burden of federal reserve credit from discounts to bill holdings is looked for.

Provides Opportunity.

The credit situation this week was not without unusual influences. The heavy stock market liquidation which took place on the Friday following the announcement of the higher discount rate served to provide local banks with a long awaited opportunity to reduce their indebtedness to the reserve bank. For the entire New York district a cut of $99,493,000 was made in the total of discounts. The New York city banks accounted for more than this amount themselves, reducing their borrowings $104,000,000 in the week.

As a result of this wide cut in member banks' indebtedness a more favorable attitude toward lending has been developed by the banks, for so long as they are heavy borrowers banks are reluctant to lend.

Bill Purchases Heavy.

Bill purchases by the reserve at the new and attractive rate were the heaviest in months during the last week. In addition to replacing maturities which are understood to have been heavy, the New York reserve bank added $36,162,000 to its portfolio. This move undoubtedly contributed to the easier conditions in the money market and assisted the banks in repaying discounts.

Canada's Newsprint Output Totals 229,000 Tons in July

Newsprint production in Canada during July amounted to 229,045 tons and shipments to 227,502 tons, while production in the United States ran to 111,578 tons and shipments to 112,616 tons, according to a bulletin issued by the News Print Service bureau. During July 21,966 tons of newsprint were made in Newfoundland and 1,744 tons in Mexico, bringing the total North American production up to 364,333 tons. The Canadian mills showed an increased production of 14 per cent as compared with July of last year while the mills in the United States registered a decreased output of 2 per cent.

LONDON MARTS UNDISTURBED BY CREDIT REPORTS

Finance Situation Is Unchanged.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Aug. 17.—New York rumors of a $250,000,000 credit for the Bank of England have unperturbed the London stock exchange, which regards them as ridiculous and hair raising reports.

The criticism of the credit story here is that New York is more anxious concerning the Bank of England's holdings that London itself. The resumption of gold shipments to the United States is certainly disquieting in financial circles here, but momentarily the movements are not sufficiently large to justify an advance in the London bank rate.

It is realized, however, that should London require dollar credits there is little doubt it could have the same simply for the asking. At the time of resumption of the gold standard in April, 1925, optional credits amounting to $300,000,000 were obtained as a precautionary measure. One for $200,000,000 was placed at the disposal of London by the federal reserve without any charge unless utilized. The other credit for $100,000,000 was granted by the J. P. Morgan company, which made a charge for the option. Neither of these credits was ever used and the Morgan credit has duly lapsed. But there is no time limit to the federal reserve contingent credit, so it is believed here that the option may be still available.

Hangs in Balance.

The financial situation of the London markets, however, has undergone no serious change in the last few days, and while circumstances might conceivably arise to render it advisable to exercise the option, it is certain that London would not add to the already heavy liabilities to the United

New York, Aug. 17. — Buying amounting practically to a boom in oil shares was the feature of today's abbreviated week-end session of the stock market.

Demand converged in Standard of New Jersey and Standard of California, which have been named in some persistent merger talk in the last few days, but Texas company, Mexican Seaboard, Atlantic Refining, Pan-American Petroleum and several others came in for some profitable attention. Prices were boosted from 1 to 3 points on the leading issues of the group during the early trading, but profit taking appeared toward the last and most of the initial gains melted away. Standard of New Jersey reached a new high at 73¾, while the buying spell was on.

Buy on Prospects.

Reports that the New Jersey company and the Standard of California are about to be combined have been denied from the offices of both corporations, but evidently a considerable element of the buying public is convinced that there is a possibility of such a merger and is buying stocks on the prospect.

An optimistic statement by E. B. Reesor, head of the Petroleum Institute of America, to the effect that the oil industry never faced brighter prospects than it does today also helped to stimulate interest in this quarter

One month ago	13.75@15.25
One year ago	13.75@15.00

Top yesterday, $13.85; average, $13.10.

Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday, 18,000 cattle, 37,000 hogs, and 19,000 sheep.

Hogs yesterday met the usual "catch as catch can" week-end trade, both top and general average showing a decline, due largely to quality. Best available stopped at $11.85, with the general average off 10c at $10.75, comparing with a top of $11.90 and average of $10.70 the previous Saturday. Top hogs a year ago yesterday sold at $12.50 and the average figured $11.85.

Barring Saturdays, top hogs have been below $12.00 only once during the last six weeks. However, the behavior of the market on smaller receipts last week was a disappointment to traders looking for the usual August-September bulge.

Fresh Pork Higher.

A decrease in hog receipts last week, and the possibility of another small run next week finally checked the break in prices which started Tuesday and held the week's general average price 5c above the previous week at $10.90. The high level of prices paid for fresh pork strengthened salesmen's position, some fancy cuts bringing the highest prices since September, 1928.

Total arrivals of live hogs at Chicago at 111,600 were smallest since week ending May 18 and compare with 121,955 the previous week. The weak factor in the trade was the shipping demand. Outsiders bought only 15 per cent of arrivals, the smallest proportion in some time, against 30 per cent a year ago and 28 per cent two years ago.

The wide range of cattle prices was a feature of the live stock trade during the last week. The growing movement of range "grassy" steers to market subjected lower priced cattle to pressure toward the end of the week.

The inside price for steers of beef merit was pushed down to $10.50 at the close, with the top for the week standing at $17.00, showing the widest spread for the time of year, since 1920, barring 1925, when the two extremes were $9.85 apart.

The market as a whole was little different from a week ago, the general average showing only 10c loss, at $14.85, due partly to quality. Yearlings reached $16.75, a new top for the class, while 1,406@1,571 lb beeves brought the $17.00. Heifers at $16.00 were highest since November, 1928, and calves brought $17.50, highest since last April.

Lambs Sell Low.

Although the lamb market reacted and started upward toward the end of the week, the market as a whole during the week was equal to the lowest since November, 1928, and $1.40 lower than during the corresponding week a year ago.

Prices averaged $13.10, which compares with $14.50 a year ago and with $14.28 two years ago. Narrower shipping demand and a slightly lower market for lamb on the wholesale market at Chicago thwarted sellers' efforts to put the average price of lambs closer to $14.00. A decrease of 10,000 western range lambs last week was nearly offset by the increase in offerings of natives. Southern lambs are dwindling rapidly, which is usual at this time of the year.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 13,000 cattle, 37,000 hogs, and 19,000 sheep, against 17,825 cattle, 30,352 hogs, and 14,994 sheep a week ago, and 17,761 cattle, 35,142 hogs, and 20,091 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 50,000 cattle, 100,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep, against 45,808 cattle, 96,713 hogs, and 94,893 sheep a year ago.

LONDON MARTS UNDISTURBED BY CREDIT REPORTS

Financial Situation Remains Unchanged.

States except under the most dire necessity. That position has not as yet been reached, and before it eventuates the weapon of the bank rate certainly would have to be employed. At the same time the Bank of England's policy regarding the rate must be in shape according to the circumstances as may develop in the near future, and there is little doubt that any further serious loss of gold will decide the fate of the bank rate, now hanging in the balance.

A somewhat embarrassing position for the Bank of England has arisen from the absence of the customary volume of market applications for the weekly issues of the treasury bills, and in appealing for market resumption of its customary quota of bills the Bank of England has indicated that there is a limit to which it could go in assuming what are really the liabilities of the market. But for the last few days the market has been working with something approaching customary freedom, with the discount rates being held practically up to the bank rate.

Loan Rates Easy.

The abnormal conditions recently prevailing resulted in a considerable increase in loanable funds in the market, and it looks as if the loan rates will remain distinctly easy until the present anxieties have definitely been relieved.

The new relapse in the sterling exchange in America, with the United States taking the place only just vacated by France as an importer of gold from London, is worrying financial quarters certainly more than usual. The fall of the sterling in New York has brought most of the other exchanges down in sympathy, and Germany, judging from the level of exchange, is again near taking gold from London. Moreover, a large part of this week's African gold has been bought for undisclosed buyers. The outlook therefore remains unsatisfactory.

The holiday atmosphere still prevails throughout every section of the market. There is little public interest, although considerable professional activity is apparent, especially in the mining section. The Rhodesian market is eclipsing the trans-Atlantic group in the display of speculative activity, with heavy professional American and Canadian buying of Rhodesian copper shares.

BOND TRADING DULL; PRICES UNIFORMLY FIRM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 17.—Although total transactions in bonds on the stock exchange were light today during the two hour trading period, amounting to only $4,246,000, several impressive gains were scored in certain sections of the list.

Nearly all of the active convertible bonds were higher, led by American Telephone and Telegraph convertible 4½s, which reached a new high at 211, closing at 208, up 5¾ points. International Telephone convertible 4½s duplicated the previous high of 179 and finished at 178½, up 1½.

Ten bonds of Brooklyn Union Gas convertible debentures 5½s changed hands today at 489, representing the first transaction in many weeks, up 87 points, one of the greatest advances scored by any bond this year. The bonds, which are closely held, are accustomed to move sharply to adjust the spread between the price of the bonds and the stock, but in this case the bonds appear to have discounted the rise in the stock for some time to come.

Sugar bonds gave an impressive demonstration of strength today following the sharp declines of earlier in the week. Cuban Dominican 7½s advanced 2 points, Vertiente Sugar 7s 4½ points, and Cuba Cane Sugar 8s were up a point and the 7s ½ of a point. Cuban-American 8s were off ⅛. Camaguey Sugar 7s were up 3¾ on light trading and Sugar Estates of Oriente were up 1⅞.

A few of the oil issues showed a tendency to move upward in sympathy with stocks. California Petroleum 8s were up 2⅝. Steel and rubber issues were slow.

Fashions Through the Ages

ONE THOUSAND YEARS AGO church and regal robes were of elegant hues. Kaiser Heinrich II. of Germany, whose reign ended in 1024, gives proof of that statement in this pose with a Frankish bishop. Installment III. of the pictorial history of costumes starts with the tenth century.

DISTINGUISHED GERMAN WOMEN of the twelfth century bowed, as always, to fashion's whims and, of course, thereby became the ill-concealed envy of their less fortunate sisters. Milady of 1929 would not be so envious.

DRESS, headdress and ornaments of Frankish royalty in the eleventh century were what the fashions expert of today might, and might not, call chic. Witness the accompanying view of the king and queen.

A FAMILY GROUP, such as any photographer might have been glad to take in the thirteenth century—had there been photographers then—reveals what the upper class Germans wore and also what a difference there was between the mother's garments and those of her great-great-grandmother.

FASHIONS CHANGE WITH THE YEARS, and they have been doing it for a long time. Each of these four personages belonged to the fourteenth century, and each hailed from England, but there the similarity ends. The years represented are: 1365, 1330, 1350, and 1390.

THE EARL HAIG MEMORIAL, designed for a prominent spot in Whitehall. This model by F. Hardiman, a young sculptor, has been accepted, subject to slight changes. It depicts the late earl in full-dress uniform, mounted on his favorite charger. The statue is to be 24 feet high, and its construction will require about three years. DISCOVERS THE WEST

THE old explorer himself never got beyond the eastern seaboard — but his cigarette has now crossed the Rockies. It's not a triumphal tour alone—it's a permanent national welcome the like of which no cigarette has had since old Sir Walter himself .... In every plump, firm cylinder are 31 rare, fine tobaccos—the pick of the world's crop of Turkish, Virginia and Kentucky (Burley). This surprisingly complex blend results in a wholly new, bland quality of flavor—for the Raleigh process blends all 31 lengthwise—the full, rich, smooth bouquet of 31 tobaccos is in every puff. It's a new idea —otherwise America wouldn't have seized it so eagerly.

The Sun builds them up . . . don't let it sear their Tender Bodies

A thin coating of Unguentine on the children's skin before they step out into the glare of the beach prevents painful burning, yet permits the beneficial ultra-violet rays to tone up their bodies.

WHAT treasures they discover on the beach! Pink starfish, wonderful polished pebbles, glistening white sand for building castles!

Keep your youngsters out in the sun this summer. Sunlight is the best medicine. All doctors nowadays will tell you it helps make strong, healthy bodies.

But don't neglect the warning which your doctor will also give you against excessive sunburn. Sunburn carries exactly the same dangers as other burns. Sunburn kills the living cells on the surface of the skin, sets poisons free to go through your system, causes fever, weakness, extreme nervousness.

And it is all so needless. Unguentine, the famous antiseptic surgical dressing used in 8 out of 10 hospitals will safeguard your children and you. Use plenty of it at the first sign of redness. Its soothing oils go down deep into the tissues and remain there promoting rapid, normal healing

Get a tube of Unguentine today, and have it ready. Take it to the beach and on your vacation. Always keep a tube in your automobile. At your druggist's, 50¢. The Norwich Pharmacal Co., Norwich, N. Y.

Sunburn is a serious matter and requires a medical remedy. Don't rely on ineffective lotions—or other cosmetics with no healing power. The antiseptic oils in Unguentine go deep into the tissues and promote rapid healing.

UNGUENTINE SOAP, bland and pure, is the perfect soap for tender, sunburned skin. And because of its Unguentine content it rapidly clears up blemishes.

"Simple to keep one's skin always lovely with MELBA SKIN CLEANSER"

Miss Hope Richardson, charming debutante, whose brilliant performances in Society's theatricals have won her many laurels.

.... says Hope Richardson

THE gifted debutante daughter of the Courtlandt Richardsons is typically the alert young modern. Smartly poised, beautifully groomed, she has a roseleaf skin—flawless—exquisitely "cared for". Here you have her own concise story of skin beauty. "A smooth clear skin is the first requisite of chic"—says Miss Richardson—". . and it's simple to keep one's skin always lovely with Melba Skin Cleanser. It's different from other creams . . . it penetrates!"

Grime and dust—deadly enemies of skin loveliness—are still clogging the pores of your skin after the use of an ordinary cream. For ordinary creams stay on the skin—cannot touch hidden grime. Melba Skin Cleanser—amazingly penetrative—searches out every menacing particle hiding within the pores—and flushes it from your skin. The daily use of this specialized cream, brings you a fine-textured, translucently clear complexion!

At all good drug and department stores . . or send 25¢ for trial set of the three Melba Beauty Creams

MAKE THIS SIMPLE TEST!

On your forearm, stroke a bit of Melba Skin Cleanser. Beside it, a bit of the cream you now use for cleansing . . . Watch Melba Skin Cleanser melt and penetrate into the skin. See the other cream still on the surface. Decide for yourself which cream really cleanses!

THE MELBA HOME TREATMENT

Before retiring, cleanse the skin with Melba Skin Cleanser. Remove with Melba Facial "Petals" . . . Stroke Melba Tissue Cream into the skin, to nourish the tissues . . . Remove in the morning . . . Then, a film of Melba Vanishing Cream—and your skin, immaculately lovely, is ready for "make-up".

The strange charm of lovely eyebrows

WHAT is this indefinable charm that some women possess? Often it cannot be explained. But more often it is the result of careful attention to small details—like eyebrows.

Eyebrows, neat and well-shaped, are definite aids to beauty. Care for yours—just a few minutes each day. La Cross Tweezers, skilfully used, will bring certain results, though they are not expensive. At drug and department stores, 10c to 50c.

Unequaled Purity

HOME!

YOU drink "Canada Dry" because it has a marvelous flavor . . . "dry" . . . mellow . . . cooling, invigorating and refreshing. But did you ever stop to think what causes the distinctive flavor you know so well?

First, there are pure ingredients. "Pure" means just that, for these ingredients from the moment they are made until they are put into "Canada Dry" are under our own supervision and control.

Then, there is the ginger. Grown in Jamaica under methods which we instituted, it is selected by our own agents, shipped to us in our own packages, ground and prepared by our own methods. That is the meaning of "the finest selection of the highest quality of Jamaica ginger."

The blending and balancing of these ingredients are achieved under exact methods. No guesswork is allowed. The water used in "Canada Dry" is pure. We make sure of that by filtering it three times, then passing it through violet ray machines and finally testing it in the laboratory. The carbonating process is carefully watched and the same methods of achieving scrupulous purity prevail.

Unequaled purity? Of course! Unequaled flavor? . . . Refreshment? . . . Mellowness? . . . Of course! Do you wonder at it . . . now . . . when you know to what lengths we go?

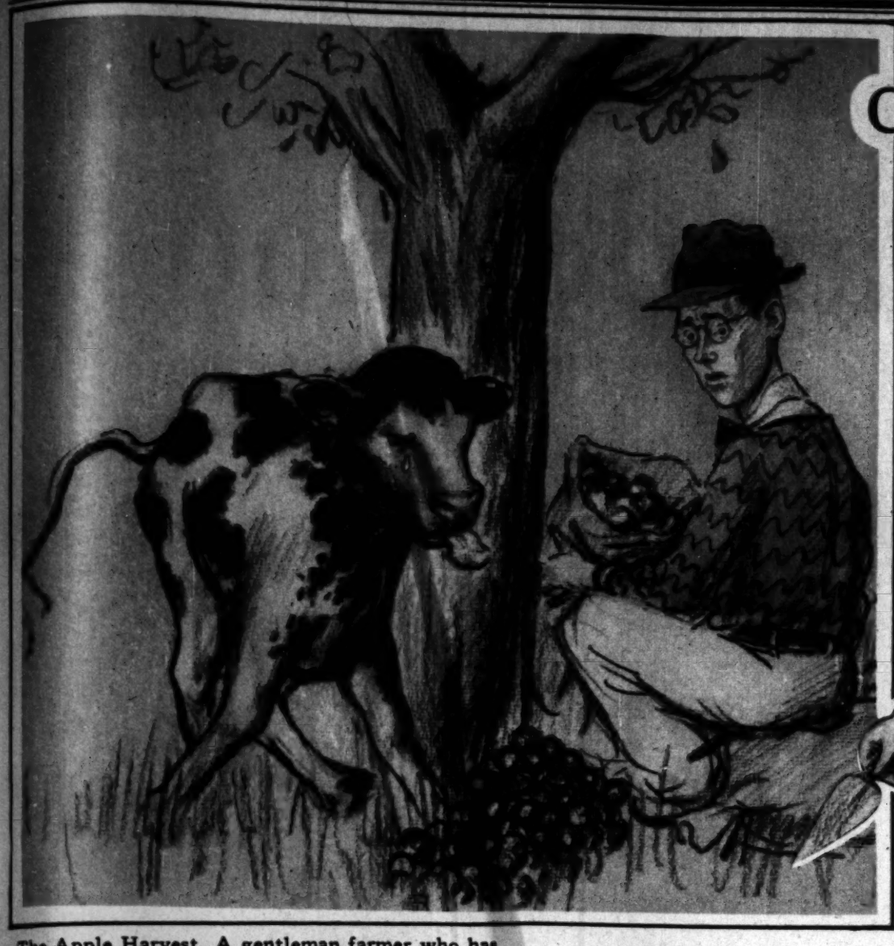
The Gentleman Farmer

By W. E. Hill

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]



The Apple Harvest. A gentleman farmer who has not been among cows at apple picking time simply doesn't know cows. A cow left alone near a pile of cider apples will get drunk as a lord in no time at all. (This is what has happened to Dapple, Mr. Brown's spotted calf. She's got a silly fit and is giggling to herself!)

The Gentleman Farmer's Wife. A farmer's wife, especially the helpmeet of a more gentlemanly farmer, loves to be caught unawares among her flower beds. At the first hint of visitors she will snatch a flower basket and a trowel and will rush madly for the nearest perennials. "My dear," she will exclaim in surprise, "how lovely of you to drop in on us! I have been working for hours among my larkspur plants!"

The Dog Fancier. "Maybe they're a throwback to something in her pedigree we don't know about!" A horrid doubt begins to dawn in the mind of the amateur police dog breeder as the puppies mature from day to day.

The Hired Man. Artie, the gentlemanly hired man to a gentleman farmer, speeding homeward in his yellow roadster at close of day.

The Extra Help. During high school vacation Walter, the neighbor's boy, will work at odd jobs either by the day or by the hour. Preferably by the hour, because Walter is terribly independent and if spoken to sharply for pulling up the broccoli instead of the weeds, he will be very haughty and resign.

The Chicken Farmerettes, Ida and Lola, have recently invested their all in a chicken farm. Some months they are a little ahead of the overhead, and some months (when the hens are temperamental) they are a bit behind. Ida and Lola are very tender hearted and when they are called upon to supply a customer with a broiler for Sunday dinner the tears flow copiously. This week Clarence, the old rooster, will have to go the way of all flesh.

Scientific Farming. People who farm scientifically are terrible people to week-end with, because their minds are attuned only to bone fertilizer and pulverized chicken ration and such subjects. Like as not one's pet anecdote will be interrupted by Mabel's saying to Joe, "Darling, I know you forgot to order that extra load of manure for the asparagus bed!"

The Week-end Farmer. Five days of the week are spent by Mr. Adolf Goospiel in the busy marts of trade, but the week-end finds him at his model farm, "Homehollow," dressed for the part of landed gentry. Adolf plans to convert the low swamp acres into a development called "Greater Hollywood Heights."

Tailored Ensembles Provide Chic in a Hurry

Paris Protects the Working Gal by Designing the Smartest of Dual-Role Clothes

By Bettina Bedwell
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—Paris has, for lo! these many seasons, been grappling with the world problem of how to get chic quick. With everything on the move and going faster every day, this is as necessary as getting your shoes shined and your hat blocked by the Greek on the corner at one and the same moment. Though imperative, however, this matter of dressing fashionably, even with the modern rapid transportation in its present high state of efficiency isn't so easy. As life gets more complicated, and the need for swift movement more essential, fashion also becomes more exigent.

Back in the nineties, a fresh shirtwaist was all a girl needed as a change from what she wore all day, when she had a "date" with her best beau in the evening. Not so in 1929. You go out to play bridge with the "girls" in the afternoon, and what you wear will, distinctly, not be right for an evening with either your best or your newest boy friend. You have to choose between trying to get out to One Hundred and Umpty-Umph street and back in twenty minutes, with sixty seconds to change your clothes, or the disagreeable and sustained sensation of being dressed for another rôle than the one you play after dark.

This is why Paris has been going through a terrible struggle to create a chic that would be 100 per cent right both before and after dark. First the couturiers evolved the camouflage costume, with layers and layers of costume, that you were supposed to shed, until you emerged in complete accord with the dictates of fashion for the galloping hours.

Later they brought out the bridge frock, the cocktail jacket, and what not, all for the purpose of helping us to dress right in a hurry.

This summer they hit on a wonderful new idea, and it is going over in a big way in Paris. It is the tailored ensemble that looks marvelous in the afternoon and loses none of its charm when it is worn far into the night. The amusing part of this fashion is that, while it was designed expressly for those ladies-in-a-hurry who are too busy to go home and dress, it has been received with the wildest enthusiasm by the woman of leisure, who, it would seem, has nothing on earth to do except change her clothes whenever she will.

The tailored ensemble as improvised, created, and put out by Paris for wear at most of the social affairs that occur between lunch and bedtime is really feminine. It is not, however, in the least frivolous, or given to breaking out into fluffy ruffles and such fragile details. In seams, cut, and general structure it is tailored, and that in the most expert sense of the word. It consists, usually, of a jacket or short coat and a dress. The jacket is an example of the tailor's art, neatly fitted at the shoulders, and closely

Jenny designed this black silk evening ensemble with its black lace blouse sketched at the extreme left.

Second from the left is Lucile Paray's conception of the tailored frock for evening wear. It is made in waxed net and the skirt is box-plaited.

Manly shoulders and a decolletage characterize the black taffeta ensemble from Patou, shown third.

Yellow-green voile and a huge yellow flower lend femininity to the masculine-cut tailored evening suit from Nicole Groult at the extreme right.

The dress is often quite tailored, also, but it is invariably cut to have an evening decolletage, although it may, if you wish, have long sleeves. Paris, perversely, likes long sleeves in the evening, this summer, in the same proportion as she is passionately devoted to the sleeveless frock for daytime.

Another, and more whimsical, version of the tailored evening mode is the dress or ensemble made entirely of net, a fabric hitherto connected inalienably with all that is fluffy and feminine in clothes. Mind you, I said net, and this doesn't mean tulle. It means good, solid net, the kind our mothers used to wear, lately consecrated to window curtains. Yes, it is more often than not made of cotton, although it is no crime to wear silk net.

Some of the couturiers, more discreet, make their tailored evening ensembles of faille, georgette, crepe de chine, and satin. Often they combine two or more of these materials into one ensemble. Whatever the tissue, the coat is something perfectly, impeccably tailored, with revers, pockets, and straight, well set sleeves. The dress may become fluffy around the bottom, but for three-quarters of its length it is severely simple.

Sometimes, in lieu of a dress, the Paris creator gives you a waist and skirt. Jenny, particularly, is fond of doing this, and she makes the cutest tailored shirtwaists of chiffon or lace, with or without sleeves, which are good in daylight or after dark.

The first tailored evening ensemble shown in our sketch is from Jenny. It is an ensemble that can prove a winning number at bridge, or any other afternoon affair. The jacket and skirt are made of black silk, with a tiny pattern of silver barely visible all over its surface. The skirt has a deep yoke, fitted closely around the hips, and is flared in front by means of several circular godets.

The jacket is the typical Jenny tailored jacket, which is almost a bolero, with long straight sleeves and tailored revers like those that adorn a man's tuxedo. The little, circular ruffles at the elbows of the sleeves are the only concession to feminine frivolity. The blouse is made of black lace and is of a supreme simplicity, without sleeves, and having a round neck, cut much lower in back than in the front.

Our third model was designed by Patou and is made of black taffeta. The three-quarter length coat is cut on the severest lines, with manly shoulders and strictly tailored sleeves which terminate in small, neat cuffs. The dress has a V decolletage at the front, and the inch wide black taffeta bands, which make the shoulder straps join in a small bow at the middle of the square back decolletage and trail their ribbonlike ends far below the waist. The dress is snugly fitted over the hips by means of shirring, and the plaited ruffles are set right into the skirt without a hint of a flare or feminine abandon.

Nicole Groult's inspiration for the tailored evening is shown in our fourth figure. It is made of a yellow-green voile which looks just as lovely in the afternoon sunlight as it does at the theater or at a dance. The slightly rolled collar of the coat develops into mannish revers, and the sleeves haven't the sign of a cuff on them. The summery transparency of this ensemble is given weight by the simplicity of its cut and by the large yellow flower which lies flat on the hip.

Our second model was designed by Lucile Paray. It is a long sleeved frock in waxed tailored net, and it can be worn with equal success in the evening or the afternoon. There is a narrow band of ermine about the neck which knots in front and hangs to the waist. The sleeves and yoke of the frock give just a filmy covering over the neck and arms, and the cuffs are of ermine. The skirt is severely box plaited and stitched below the hips.

Spanish berets with a bandeau underneath are one of the debonair details of fall millinery this year.

Featherweight felt and velvet as soft as dandelion down are dual regents of the fall hat fabric realm.

Solid wood and ivory pins and buckles vie with flowers and feathers as trimming for first fall hats.

Autumn millinery will have a great deal of "ride." One-way wide brims are much dans la note.

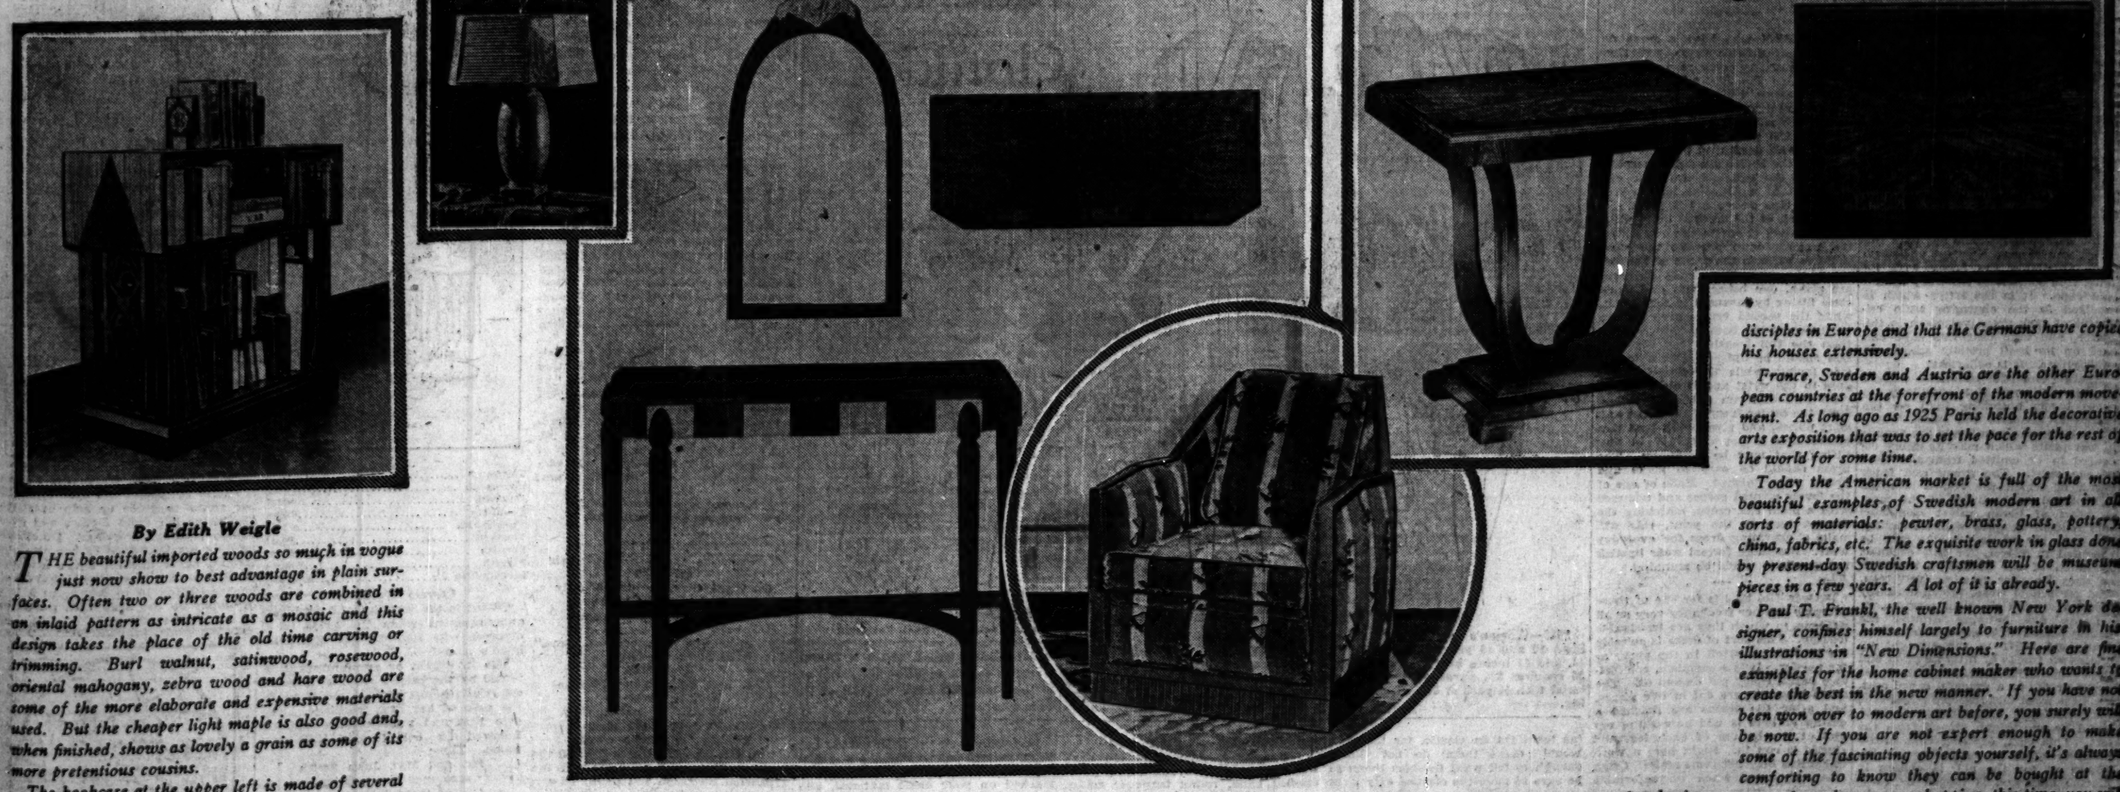
Newest Furniture Follows Line of Simplicity



By Edith Weigle

THE beautiful imported woods so much in vogue just now show to best advantage in plain surfaces. Often two or three woods are combined in an inlaid pattern as intricate as a mosaic and this design takes the place of the old time carving or trimming. Burl walnut, satinwood, rosewood, oriental mahogany, zebra wood and hare wood are some of the more elaborate and expensive materials used. But the cheaper light maple is also good and, when finished, shows as lovely a grain as some of its more pretentious cousins.

The bookcase at the upper left is made of several woods in combination. The lightest is hare wood, which is a pastel beige-gray and is the darling of all modern art designers. The shelves vary in size, offering a pleasing relief from the old fashioned stiff regularity and also accommodating books both large and small. The circular decoration on the side is more than one usually sees on pieces in the new manner.

The lamp shown today is conventional in conception but has details that make it quite appropriate for use in a modern room. The little animal figure of shiny silver metal at the top is one, and the sub-base of Brazilian onyx is another. The lamp vase is a soft green and gold and color etched with a delicate marine design. Green taffeta makes the interesting shade.

The modern table of a combination of mahogany and hare wood, with fluted legs reminiscent of the Louis XVI period, was seen under the mirror accompanying it. The top view of the table shows the use of burl in an intricate pattern. It measures 35 by 14 inches and the height is 32 inches. Note the extremely simple and graceful lines of the mirror with its single bit of ornament at the top.

The points that mark the chair, illustrated next, as distinctly ultra-modern are the wooden base, which is flush with the floor, the square lines of the whole, which gives it an architectural quality, the luxuriously comfortable cushions, and the new fabric with which it is upholstered. Gone are the flowing curves that so often meant fragility of construction and discomfort to the person who owned the chair.

The table at the upper right is what might be termed safe and sane modern. It is simple and unadorned, but it does not dispense with grace and its legs remind one of many examples of an older era. It is 28 inches in height and its top is 29 by 22 and is of burl walnut with another contrasting wood as a frame. It would be charming in a small foyer or hallway, or equally pretty in a living room.

All of the articles on this page were seen at the American Furniture Mart.

The two best books I have seen on the modern movement in interior decoration are "The New Interior Decoration," by Dorothy Todd and Raymond Mortimer, published by Charles Scribners, and "New Dimensions," by Paul T. Frankl, published by Payson and Clarke. They tell you what all the shooting's for and are copiously illustrated with photographs so that just from an artistic point of view they are a joy to behold.

Added to their esthetic quality, however, is a world of practical information. In the volume by Dorothy Todd and Raymond Mortimer much emphasis is placed on modern architecture in Europe for, largely due to its influence, the new manner of interior decoration was evolved. Photographs of buildings in Germany are given that convince one that what, to us, is extreme in line and conception, is to that country a matter of fact.

It is interesting to know that, for years, our American architect, Frank Lloyd Wright, has had many disciples in Europe and that the Germans have copied his houses extensively.

France, Sweden and Austria are the other European countries at the forefront of the modern movement. As long ago as 1925 Paris held the decorative arts exposition that was to set the pace for the rest of the world for some time.

Today the American market is full of the most beautiful examples of Swedish modern art in all sorts of materials: pewter, brass, glass, pottery, china, fabrics, etc. The exquisite work in glass done by present-day Swedish craftsmen will be museum pieces in a few years. A lot of it is already.

Paul T. Frankl, the well known New York designer, confines himself largely to furniture in his illustrations in "New Dimensions." Here are fine examples for the home cabinet maker who wants to create the best in the new manner. If you have not been won over to modern art before, you surely will be now. If you are not expert enough to make some of the fascinating objects yourself, it's always comforting to know they can be bought at the stores, but when you go shopping, this time, you will be able to tell the difference between the good and the bad in modern work.

Mr. Frankl talks at length about interior decoration from his years of experience and teaching. In a few moments he clears up problems that may have been bothering some of his readers for a long time. He tells how to choose color schemes, how to go about getting draperies that will harmonize perfectly with the walls. He explains why some rooms make you decidedly uncomfortable and why others please. Small rooms can be made to appear larger, spacious rooms can be made to have an air of information, all depends on one's individual knowledge and Mr. Frankl has loads of it.

Costumes for Tots Both Little and Older

With September in the Offing the Annual Problem of School Togs Arises

By Lolita.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—What some one calls the dotted Swiss scenery of a child's party may be seen from every fashionable observation car. Dotted swisses for parties—and those made on the simplest lines—together with plain little wash frocks for every day are more than mere junior clothes. They are an insignia of rank, for to such simplicity the wealthy members of society have pledged their allegiance.

I was about to say that they were an insignia of rank—stupidity. That, however, seems too harsh a statement in view of the many colorful and distinctive little frocks which are developed on simple lines and in the wash materials. Nevertheless, it would seem that any departure in the interests of greater variety would be welcomed by a great many of us. We might borrow some of the French latitude in coloring, fabric and design without disturbing too much the theory that the destiny of washline and child are irrevocably intertwined.

Until a child finds its waistline it seems doomed to the washline. Also to the same silhouette. Everything must hang straight from the shoulder except the well-bred frock with its smocked yoke to break the severity. There is only the color and the decorative treatment to make a frock of this type look different from that worn by the neighbor's child.

Another mode which is firmly imbedded in juvenile circles is that of the sweater. A friend of mine said to me the other day, "I no longer dress my children—I sweater them." Indeed, from the perambulator on up through all the modern young person's life this garment enjoys supreme sway. Over the skirt of the small girl and the trousers of the small boy the sweater has come to solve the problems of many a mother.

Various weaves, necklines and designs are employed for these miniature sweaters, but the two we illustrate in the small panels are indicative of the mode. At the left is one of the favored stripe effects—this in yellow and red on a tan background—with border of plain color. At the right a model in two tones proves that these geometrical points begin early in life.

After a girl has inherited a waistline—that is to say when she is anything from 7 to 10—she may leave the waistline behind her without outraging too completely the sensibilities of the "simplicity" propagandists. Then such materials as wool crêpe, challis, tweed, homespun, velveteen and velvet are available in designs more favorable to individuality. Before passing from this observation one must say that challis is proving popular this autumn in models for the smaller girl and that some charming designs of the straight-from-the-shoulder variety are encountered in our smart shops.

In the wardrobe of the girl between 7 and 14 one sees brown and all its variations stressed with the same force as in adult modes. Thus, the delightful homespun frock at the extreme left of our large drawing occurs in a light brown which warms to rose. A sash of deep rose crêpe defines a long waistline which is caught at the side by an embroidered medallion in rose colored silk. A similar medallion tops the groups of plaits traversing the front of the model.

For the girl of this age the ensemble has been accepted as an influence not too corruptive of our precious spirit of youthful simplicity. Various fabrics are recruited for autumn ensembles, but one material that has become a classic in childhood's domain is still of outstanding interest. This is velveteen. Occurring in all the deep rich tones as well as in the serviceable brown, the jacket suit of this material for the girl of from 7 or 8 upwards includes a tuck-in of handkerchief linen, shantung or plain linen which usually is finished with a turndown collar. This formula of perfection, it may be added, obtains with all the various little jacket suits so much exploited for autumn wear.

The ensemble includes not only the jacket and blouse. Often a one piece frock supplants the latter with its skirt. And sometimes the wrap chosen is a cape. It is the latter which is involved in the charming little ensemble of dark green velveteen in the center, and note that this cape can hold up its head proudly among all adult rivals. It is collarless!

Again the model reconciles mature modes with youthful simplicity in those bands buttoning high on the bodice to simulate the raised waistline. Between these bands are groups of flat plaits which may be either repeated in or omitted from the back of the skirt. The green and beige surah of which the bodice is made is repeated in the lining of the cape. A beret of green velvet completes this model. It goes without saying, too, that the whole costume may be executed in velvet, for this occupies as much of the designer's attention as does its poor relation, velveteen. And for school wear, brown corduroy would make an excellent medium.

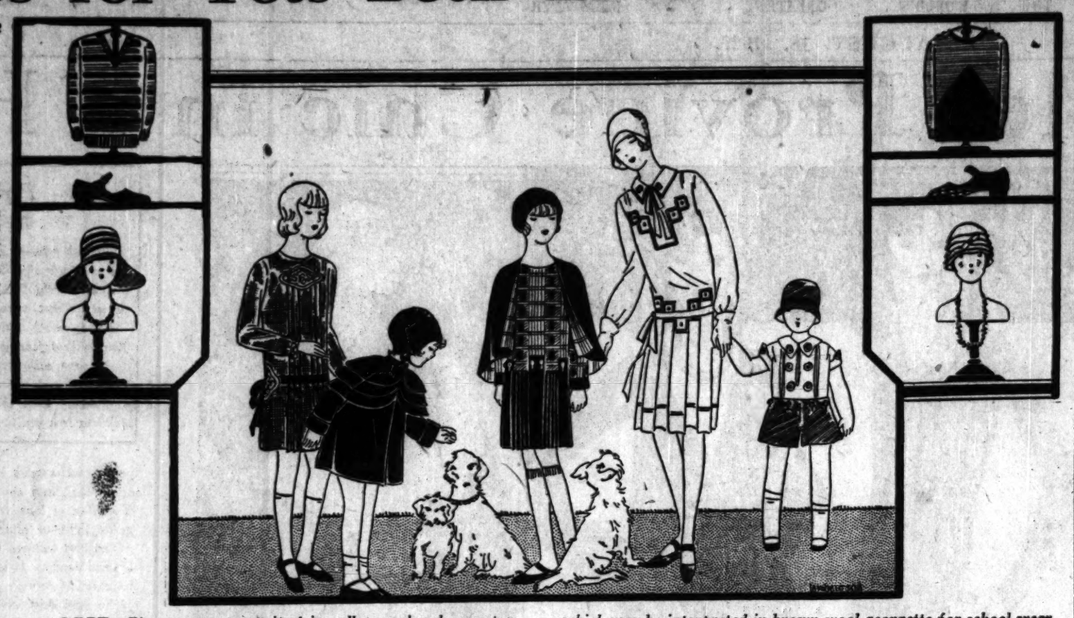
Capes are hanging around the young person to a great extent. Berthas lend relief to the straight up and down frocks of little girlhood and both the older and younger sister share profits in a graceful caped coat. That the most miscroscopic street coat may not lack individuality is indicated by our sketch second from the left. This coat, showing that broadcloth is quite as estimable for the young as for the old, is chosen in marine blue and is topped by three capes, each going up in points at the front to meet a standing collar. A hat of matching material is enlivened by an embroidered motif in white and red. This for the girl of from three to seven.

The tri-color effect of this hat reminds one that the red, white and blue motif which has prevailed so widely in summer modes for grown-ups appears consistently in autumn clothes for children. As for the nautical fashions, these were launched so long ago that one forgets when the first fleet went out. Today one sees more than ever the navy skirt, the double-breasted matching jacket and the white blouse of the traditional suit. Such costumes, gay with brass buttons, are still worn widely by girls of from 7 or 8 to 14. Also is the sweater and the hat of the French matelot frequently incorporated.

The girl between the ages of 11 and 16 comes into a full heritage of the ensemble. For her are designed tweed and other woolen ensembles shadowing closely those of her mother. For example, the seven-eighths coat is a favorite completion. One of such coats was allied with a delightful ensemble for the young girl imported from Paris by one of our leading shops. This occurred in a novelty woolen in beige tone and it topped its box-plaited skirt by a tuck-in sweater of beige and green.

Also does the separate coat adumbrate that of the full-fledged maiden. Brown is found just as constantly in the juvenile departments as elsewhere and the separate coat of brown tweed for general wear represents a favorite choice for the young girl's everyday wrap. These coats are built on straight lines and they are frequently trimmed with beaver or lapin. The latter fur forms, too, the jackets of some stunning ensembles with cloth frocks.

Dress coats for girls in the teens or near-teens experiment with various mature stylings. Some of the most precocious ones exploit a real princess line with molded waist and flaring skirt. These, however, seem much too sophisticated and one prefers the model with less emphatic stress upon the flare. For example, there are delightful dress coats which disturb their straight line only by godets at the sides and these are sufficiently identified with the grown-up styles to please the most exacting young person. The cape is often added to the young girl's coat and the great musketeer cuffs which we see constantly on mother's autumn coat of both cloth and fur are frequently added.



LEFT—First, a sweater striped in yellow and red on a tan background. Below, the classic black patent leathers give way to either red or blue leather. Last, a gray felt hat with slanting bands of blue ribbon applied to the brown. The necklace is of cork and wood combined.

CENTER—A charming homespun frock in rose brown is sashed and embroidered in rose silk. Next, a diminutive street coat of marine blue broadcloth is matched by a hat with embroidered motif.

In the center an ensemble of green velveteen lines its collarless cape with the plaid surah of the bodice. Fourth, a frock which may be interpreted in brown wool georgette for school wear or in pastel tinted silk crepe for formal wear exploits the hand hemstitching so dear to the Paris designer.

Last, the small boy's shorts occur in green linen and launch a flare. The short-sleeved blouse of white linen is embroidered in green.

OTHER VIEWS OF TODAY'S MODELS.

For the evening coat designed for the young girl, velvet and velveteen in tailored little models, often collarless and sometimes finished with a scarf, constitute a favorite choice. Simple capes in these same fabrics as well as in taffeta are an alternate for such coats and both make much use of white lapin, as a trimming.

The model which is sketched fourth from the left was selected because it may be adapted to both school and afternoon party wear of the girls between the ages of 11 and 16. The former need will be fulfilled by choosing beige wool crêpe—or the more practical brown—and developing it with the same plaited skirt, hemstitching and sash of self material. For this school version a turn-down collar and turn-back cuffs of rose or white or blue may be selected, for the lingerie touch is carried over from adult to juvenile modes.

The afternoon matinée will call out a silk crêpe in pastel or perhaps vivid tint and in this case collar and cuffs of self material hemstitched in response to the general decoration will take the place of the lingerie touch. Speaking in general, hemstitching is one of the most important details of the French couturier who designs for the young person. This trimming, together with plaits and fine tucks, achieves the charm and variety of the majority of the simple one piece frocks for young girls created overseas.

Although the one piece frock is in the ascendant, the jumper is retained in many new autumn frocks. For example, there are diminished versions of the long Vionnet jumper worn by older girls this summer and there are some smart juvenile offerings in which the jumper runs diagonally.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

WOMEN who have a more or less mature figure will find that the dress made by pattern No. 2618 will be becoming and smart looking. It is made with a graceful wrap around tunic, having one side plaited. A fitted girdle hugs the hips and fastens at the left side with decorative buttons. The fronts of the bodice are cut in surplice style and the attached two piece collar is cut in a graceful jabot effect where it laps over the left front.

The back of the dress is quite plain and the skirt is cut in three sections, the wrap around part of the skirt showing beneath the plaits at the left side of the skirt. Two styles of sleeves are given, one being plain and made close fitting by means of a dart seam, while the second type sleeve has an extension at the back, a little shorter than the full length. The edges of this should be finished with a wrong side facing, while the sleeve proper goes to the wrist and is close fitting.

Be sure and run a basting thread down the center front of the waist and skirt pieces, and always see that this center line is not disturbed in any fitting that may be necessary. The dress should be easy to make and pretty when finished. Made of one of the lovely printed crêpes and trimmed with a plain silk crêpe, matching the deepest tone in the print, this will make a charming dress for everyday wear. For more formal wear lipstick red georgette would be stunning.

Pattern No. 3222 is for one of those adorable bloomer frocks for very small maidens, in which they are irresistible looking. This sort of dress is suitable for play, for a stroll in the park, or for parties. It is a complete, comfortable outfit, easily put on and off. The small bloomers are cut in two pieces, and after the seams are finished a casing or hem is laid across the top and at the bottom of each leg, and elastic is run in. Right here a word of caution may not come amiss. Often small children, when uncomfortable (as too tight an elastic, for instance, would make them) do not know enough to tell what troubles them, so be sure to have the elastics only tight enough to hold and not to bind.

Printed sateen, cotton broadcloth, checked gingham, percale, dimity, handkerchief linen, and wool challis are suitable materials to select. Dainty and smart for dress-up occasions are pale blue georgette crêpe, pale pink crêpe de chine, flowered dimity or daffodil yellow organdy.

The applied arm and neck bands used with pattern No. 3429 make it quite individual, and for tennis or general sports wear you could hardly make a better choice for a dress. The plaited effect of the skirt at either side of the front allows plenty of freedom for sports activities, and adding fullness at the hem always adds grace. It is an easy pattern to use, the waist being cut in two pieces, and the skirt also in two pieces.

Perforations on the front part of the skirt pattern show where the plaits are laid. The lines should be plainly marked on your dress material, and the plaits basted in place from the top to the bottom. Press the plaits flat, but leave the bastings in until the dress is finished and the final pressing done.

Waist and skirt are sewed together and a removable belt made of the contrasting material used for the applied bands is worn. This, of course, covers the joining of the two parts. The dress is cut with long shoulders that form short sleeves. If long sleeves are preferred, you will find a pattern for them included.

Nile green shantung, violet flat silk crêpe, printed crêpe de chine, printed rajah silk, and shell pink linen are chic suggestions for this model. In flowered chiffon, georgette crêpe in pastel shade, or printed chiffon voile, it will be charming to wear with a sheer velvet or matching fabric coat for afternoons, for the tea hour or for luncheon.

2618—Woman's and miss' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 40 inch material with ¼ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

3429—Woman's and miss' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 40 inch material with ⅝ yard of 40 inch contrasting.

3222—Child's dress. Sizes 1, 2, and 4 years. Size 4 requires 2½ yards of 40 inch material with ⅝ yard of 32 inch contrasting.

Scorning the Bird in the Hand

Why Is It That So Many Girls Look Over the Heads of the Young Eligibles All Around Them and Wait for an Unseen Hero?

by Doris Blake

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

ARE the most confirmed romanticists the girls who never marry?

Rumor, substantiated by the fact that they are still waiting for their "soul mates," has it that the unmarried are the great romantics of the women world.

The originator of the charge tells of a man and a woman in the same office. They've worked side by side for six years. He is 30. She is 28.

"If she had any sense," says her critic, "she'd see that all she'd have to do is to give the fellow a little encouragement. But she is so hopelessly romantic she still believes her star god must come riding out of the sky. So, this splendid chap doesn't get an inning. Of course, he ought to grab her by the back of the neck and shake the nonsense out of her. But he's shy and the girl's romancing about other men scares him to death."

We don't know who started the propaganda about there being a man especially created by a benign providence for every woman, but we do know that it, as propaganda, got a head start far out of proportion to the marriage evidence.

We know a case similar to the office instance related, except the pair are younger by four and six years. But even at 24 an observant young business woman portrays a peculiarly out-moded emotional state with ravings about fiction and screen heroes. That might have been tolerated before the war, when matinée idols were still something for women to leave home for of a Wednesday afternoon. But with the close-up of life that the years since have permitted them in business contact and in easier social acquaintanceships, it does seem as though their minds have had opportunity to be straightened out on this business of emoting over purely imaginary gods.

There is the making of a perfectly good husband right beside our 24 year old. He is quiet, it is true. But if future happiness is what she is looking for that gentle but uncommonly efficient man alongside her there in her daily world could give her more of it than all her screen and fiction gods combined.

Remote Idol.

Her latest rave, as we understand him to be, is in a manner of speaking, Valentino's successor as the great national female idol, an orchestra leader and singer with a voice accused of having a peculiar sex-laden quality. This rival, incidentally, was what finally sent the young man elsewhere for love and sympathy.

It occurs to me that one of the best cures for the loneliness that is so much and so often complained of is ridding the mind first of the preposterously silly idea of soul mate stuff. Then, with an open mind, permitting the male material close at workaday hand an even break so he may show what potentialities he honestly does possess.

"There isn't a man around there I would marry," commented a twenty-one year old not long ago.

"There" was her place of employment and for another girl a veritable gold mine of marriage opportunity. This young woman had her heart set on marrying money and, of course, her co-workers were too young to have accumulated the necessary bankroll. But there was rich material there—young men in an organization full of possibilities, who must some day become important executives.

Hers, however, would not be classified among the lonely cases. That type of girl doesn't dream good time away waiting for the gold plated soulmate to turn up.

Give Him a Chance.

But of the lonely type who are lonely because they see only in the young men around them workers like themselves—men apart, as it were, from the material of which romantic dreams are fashioned—why not give these boys a chance? It's the only opportunity some girls have for meeting men, or, rather, the best opportunity. To a girl living in a strange city, away from the friendly group that ordinarily surrounds a family, and with few legitimate opportunities for meeting the much wanted suitor, the male co-worker ought not to be dismissed as ineligible. The working day association may rob the youth of the glamorous appeal of other circumstances, but given a chance he can hold out just as promising a future.

Don't set a boy down as uninteresting simply because he happens to be working alongside you. Off duty he might, indeed, be as hopelessly romantic as you are yourself. Anyway, no one is particularly romantic in appeal when he or she is engrossed in the day's work. There is only one way to find out how much genuine romance may lie under that practical exterior. Give it a chance to unfold away from the atmosphere of files and typewriters, machines and counters.

Spared Disillusion.

There's far less disillusion in store for the pair that, working together, see each other as they really are than there is in store for a couple whose acquaintance has to depend on play hours solely.

There are, fortunately for the race, countless numbers of level headed girls who can see future possibilities in the men they meet in their day's occupation. They're not above practicing the craftsmanship by which co-workers of the opposite sex may be attracted. Consequently, they spare their present and their future those painfully lonely hours so frequently complained of.

We're not exactly advocating turning one's business hours into "treasure" hunts. But at that we think it is pretty smart to realize if you want to meet men you have to go where they abound. But if you carry in your consciousness any of the silly prejudices about soulmates, formerly called the Mr. Rights, you might be thrown in a whole den of worthy young fellows and still spend your Sunday evenings mooning alone in your girls' club room or your tiny kitchenette apartment.

Knowing it is a husband you want, after all, our object is to warn you off wasting good years and good opportunities.

We wish to entertain all their friends and relations and a dinner for so large a number is out of the question. What form of entertainment would you suggest? We will have engraved invitations, but do not know just what form they should follow. MARY K."

Wedding anniversaries are celebrated in any number of ways. In this particular instance an afternoon "at home" or an evening reception would be the best choice.

Invitations resemble those for a wedding, but are usually engraved in silver and have the dates at the top of the sheet. If you decide on the evening reception this is the form to use:

1904-1929

Mr. and Mrs. James Marshe request the pleasure of
.....
company at the
Twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage
On Wednesday, the first of July at nine o'clock
Twenty-five Austin avenue
R. S. V. P.

If you have an afternoon "at home," this is the invitation form:

1904-1929

Mr. and Mrs. James Marshe
will be at home on Monday, the first of July from four until seven
Twenty-five Austin avenue

You can decorate the house and the table in silver. For your table at the afternoon reception you might have a long buffet with silver candelabra, a silver face cloth and runners of silver ribbon down the length of the table on each side. There should be a bride's cake, of course, which the "bride" cuts just as she did at her wedding.

Gifts for Anniversaries.

"Dear Miss Bartlett: What are the gifts for the various wedding anniversaries? M. L."

There is some controversy as to the correct gift for the first anniversary, but most authorities list it as paper. The others are:

Second	Cotton
Third	Leather
Fourth	Fruit and flowers
Fifth	Wooden
Sixth	Sugar
Seventh	Woolen
Eighth	India rubber
Ninth	Willow
Tenth	Tin
Eleventh	Steel
Twelfth	Silk and fine linen
Thirteenth	Lace
Fourteenth	Ivory
Fifteenth	Crystal
Twentieth	China
Twenty-fifth	Silver
Thirtieth	Pearl
Fortieth	Ruby
Fiftieth	Golden
Seventy-fifth	Diamond

Correct Wording.

What is the wording of a wedding announcement when the bride is a divorcee who retained her first husband's name?—B. P."

The invitation or announcement is issued by the bride's parents or nearest relatives just as they would be in the case of her first marriage. Her own first and maiden name appear, followed by her former husband's name. Thus:

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith announce the marriage of their daughter
Marjorie Smith Black etc., etc.

Proper Initials.

"In replenishing my household linen (I have been married for four years) I am at a loss as to how it should be monogrammed. Also, what monogram can I have on my personal stationery?—J. F."

Use the initial of your own first name, of your maiden name, and of your husband's name for your personal stationery. You use these initials for your new linen, too, if you want a three letter monogram. If you have only a single letter embroidered on the new linen use the initial of your husband's surname.

Avoid Taking His Arm.

"Does a woman take a man's arm when walking, or does the man take the woman's?—C. B."

Neither. Both walk quite unsupported. In crowds where the woman is apt to be jostled the man can take her elbow to guide or help her. He also helps her from motors and over bumpy or rough crossings. Otherwise he does not take hold of her arm. A woman never takes a man's arm excepting on the most formal occasions, such as going in to supper at a ball or going up the aisle with an usher at a church wedding.

A Word to the Sun Worshipers

by Antoinette Donnelly

In Case You Acquire a Bad Sunburn Instead of that Golden Brown Glow You Wanted, Here Are the First Steps to Take.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—"The summer tan is all right. The peril lies in rapidly acquiring it."

For most of us the above warning of a noted health commissioner may reach us too late for this year's damage. It's probably been done already. But just in case you're still in the process of getting yours, take the health commissioner's word for it that a little sunburn does no harm, but a bad burn is something you may not get over in a hurry.

Personally, I'm wondering how our womenfolk are going to match up the sunburn design on their low necked dinner frocks this fall. They'll all have to be cut bathing suit style or grandma's patchwork quilt won't look half so crazy as certain backs we've seen in the baking.

It's been a great season for the sun worshipers. Some of those who started out with too much enthusiasm got so red the first week out they're not over it yet. The natural tanners may well preen themselves for their luck. Unlike last season or the seasons before, they won't be writing for whitening lotions unless they have tanned an ugly shade.

We hear, however, that the tan mixed skin is in for a continued run of popularity through the fall and winter. I just finished reading an article in a trade paper in which the unpreparedness of the cosmetic manufacturers who did not see the long run due for the tanned skin was stressed. A visionary, it was pointed out, might have seen as far back as seven years ago the way the hand was pointed. There has been a gradual getting away from the white, the pink and the flesh powders, each year seeing just a little more reflection of the present tan hegira.

Treatment for Sunburn.

But it was about sunburns rather than tans we would speak—and prescribe for, too. It's a bit late now to warn the blonde, the red and the tender skinned to haunt the beaches at other hours than when the sun rides high and hot—early morning and late afternoon preferably. Just in case this month does offer fresh casualties, and you have a bad burn to reckon with, cover the burn with a thin paste of baking soda, or cover it with vaseline, olive oil, lard or cream. Then apply a dressing of the same material, or you may use equal parts of lime water and olive oil.

A case of real sunburn, you may have discovered already, calls for an enforced day in bed and very light feeding. Plenty of water has to be taken for there are poisons to be got out of the system following a case of assault and battery by Old Sol.

What I am most concerned about, however, is what has happened to the hair while one baked hatless in an eighty-and-up temperature. I've been around many of the beaches and saw some pretty badly burned heads. They didn't turn red either, fortunately or unfortunately as you view the Titian locked. They were simply burned out, dry as chips, and looking as crisp as breakfast food.

As remarked before, hair beauty in summer, winter, spring or fall, depends upon sheen and luster more than upon color or coiffure. So, it is to help restore this luster as quickly as possible that we advocate the hot oil shampoos, begun at once. I understand, now, that our best hair specialists believe the oil is quite as effective not heated. But I still am impressed with the feeling of the hair after the heated oil is used.

The important thing, however, is to part the hair in small parts and get oil into every last pore, as it were. Massage the scalp for five minutes and don't be afraid to use elbow grease along with the olive oil. You must get the scalp oiled. Before the shampoo and the following the finger massage, I suggest five more minutes of good stiff brushing.

If the hair is badly burned and dried out, it takes almost a month of good care to get it back in nice shape again.

There are a great many enthusiasts for the egg shampoo as a corrective for dry, brittle hair, whether a faulty permament has made it so, or too long exposure to the sun's rays. It's a simple process and worth trying. Wash the hair first with a good castile soap. Then rinse it. Then have four eggs prepared for use. The whites and yokes are beaten separately, then folded together smoothly, to which is added the pint of warm water—not hot, remember, for fear of cooking the egg. Take half the consistency for the first egg wash. Rub it well into the scalp and hair and rinse in warm water.

Repeat with the second half of the egg mixture and rinse several times. Then, dry the hair with a large, soft turkish towel and your hands, using the latter more for further scalp massage. It should come out fairly glossy after a couple of treatments.

If the burning occurred on a dyed head and the resultant shade became, as it does, tinged with green or purple, nothing short of another touching up will help. And then the process of redyeing is complicated over the original treatment. The hair has to be reduced to one single shade before an effective dyeing job is conducted.

To Remove That Red V.

To go back to the sunburned skin, there are hundreds of readers at this moment grappling with the problem of how to get rid of that large red V on the front neck line. In some instances of summer burning, it has been known to hold over into the late fall and even longer. It's never a becoming touch, no matter how popular the sun colored cosmetic rage. Equal parts of glycerin and spirits of camphor is recommended for daily application.

In case you decide that you don't like the coating of tan you accumulated you can use this formula: Benzoinated oxide of zinc ointment, one ounce, and spirits of camphor, two drams. It's a good bleach.

The juice of cucumber contains a bleaching ingredient and is often advised for the red-burned or tanned skin.

Also, stacked up for early fall getting rid of will be the more-than-usual freckle harvest, against which we have a remedy to apply at bedtime and to leave on overnight. It is made of pulverized borax, 30 grains, and two and one-half ounces of lemon juice. The most effective freckle remedies contain mercury and bismuth; therefore, great caution must be observed in their use.

Dr. Irwin C. Sutton, noted dermatologist, gives this formula: Bichloride of mercury, 0.3 gms., and cold cream, 30.0. He warns, however, that the prescription contains a poison, but promises it will do the work with little danger if used carefully. The directions are to clean with benzine the part to be treated and rub in the ointment nightly until a fine scaling occurs. If too much inflammation should occur, he tells you to stop the salve and apply cold cream liberally. The ointment should not be used too often for it may produce a staining more objectionable than the freckles.

Good News! Cubs' Homecoming Next of Sally's Parties

IT'S GLORIOUS news this morning, girls and boys! On our next party of the summer we're going to be at the homecoming game of the Cubs with Cincinnati—and be in the crowd that will welcome the coming national league champions after their long eastern trip!

And that's not all the good news. I'm going to take the girls as well as the boys—and Mr. Veeck, president of the Cubs, has said we'll have a royal party, so I can take one hundred girls and one hundred boys! So get busy, all of you, to win invitations—you've got twice the chance to win you ever had before.

I don't need to tell what a wonderful day we'll have. You all know of course, that the Cubs are on top, all set to go through to the pennant, then their clean-up on the Athletics for the world title. And this is their first bow to the home folks, after nearly a month on the road. So you can be sure they'll give all they've got. Hornsby, Kiki Cuyler, Stephenson, and Hack Wilson of "Murderers' Row" will have their war clubs tuned for home runs, and Guy Bush, leading pitcher in the National league, who we hope will pitch, will be on his toes to turn in an A-1 victory.

Now, girls and boys, here's the plan for the party. All I want to do is tell the boys and girls who'll enjoy this great baseball party most. To help me do that write me a letter, telling me why you'd like to be there and why you want to see the Cubs-Cincinnati game particularly—and you all have your favorite players so tell me who they are and also the most interesting plays you've seen—and that should be simple. With all that in mind you won't find it hard to write a winning letter.

Remember, though, I must have your letter by Thursday morning at the latest, and remember, too, to write your name plainly— and to give your street address, age and grade in school. Now, to your letters.

Below is the winning list of guests for getting to my movie party at the Chicago theater next Thursday, Aug. 22. Your invitations will be sent to you with all the plans for meeting.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde . . .

Here Are Some Suggestions That Will Aid You in Sewing and Pressing

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

NO MATTER what you may be sewing on, if it isn't perfectly smooth it should be made so, for no sewing can be well done if the material is crumpled. So you can see that an ironing board and iron are a necessary part of sewing equipment. A sleeve board is also a convenience, and sometimes where the seam to be pressed belongs to a sash or tie string, for instance, an unvarnished broom handle or even a smaller stick is best to use.

To take out creases that are usually in materials when bought, press on the length on the wrong side, never letting the iron stay long enough in one spot to leave a mark. If the material will stand dampening, a piece of cheese cloth can be wrung tightly out of lukewarm water and laid over the crease, with a piece of heavy muslin over it. Run the iron over lightly, so as to steam the material. Then remove the cheese cloth and press over the muslin. Finally, remove that, pressing the material perfectly dry and smooth. Any of the silk crepes can be pressed with a moderately hot iron, and if the crease proves stubborn, dampen slightly by rubbing with the wet cheesecloth.

Where seams are finished with binding ribbon, these bound edges should be well pressed with the tip of the iron before laying the seam over the round stick to press open. The seam, if pressed on a flat board, will show the outline of the edges on both sides.

When necessary to press silk be sure that the iron is only warm and never press on the right side unless a piece of cloth is laid between the iron and the silk. Never let the iron stay long in one place, either, but keep it moving either straight across or up and down the material.

Pressing tucks so they will look well is something that needs especial care. Stand the iron up on the back end, hold the tucks firmly between the hands, with the tucks running downwards, and run over the iron. Holding them out tight will not only press the tucks well, but will press the material under and between them. The tucks will not have that flattened appearance sometimes seen; but take care that the iron is not hot enough to scorch.

Pressing velvet or any material having a "pile" can be more easily done by two than one. The iron may be held bottom side up by one person, and the velvet is passed wrong side down over the iron by the other person. It is necessary to hold it quite tight so it will keep smooth, and in order not to have the marks of the fingers show, hold a small piece of velvet in each hand, with the pile touching the piece to be pressed. If the pile needs to be raised after pressing, use a soft brush against it. One person can do this pressing, of course, by standing the iron up on the back end.

VOICES

by R. W. ALEXANDER

Murder Proves a Boomerang When Bland Goes Somewhat Too Far in Crushing a Fellow Copra Planter.

THE house had been built upon the slope of a hill, fronting the sea. Below it spread the long green slope of the plantation, a place of avenues between tall trees, of sunlight and shadow and whispering fronds. Below that was the beach and the sea, gold and blue, with to the right the huddle of huts where the natives lived, and the rough long jetty thrust out like a finger pointing to the horizon.

The man came striding up from the village towards the house. He moved with the swing of strength, easily, lightly, for all his size. The lithe brown men at work among the trees saluted him as he passed; but he passed as if they were not there. His face was broad and good humored, his eyes blue. He seemed to smile at something he saw, something others could not see. The twist of laughter hovered always about his mouth.

He came to the house, through a blaze of flowers reached the veranda. Gratefully he stepped into the shade from the white glare of the afternoon sun.

"Hello, Marsh."

The man drowsing in the long cane chair started suddenly to wakefulness.

"Hello, Bland. You caught me napping." He raised his voice. "Fay! Where are you, Fay?"

Bland lifted his battered Panama to the girl who appeared in the doorway. "Afternoon, Mrs. Marsh. Warm, ain't it?"

She smiled at him, moved softly to the side of the man in the chair, put one hand on his shoulder. She was slim, lovely; but fear lay like a shadow in her eyes.

"Get Bland something to drink," her husband said. "What's it to be, Bland?"

Bland moved his big hands. "Anything cool. I leave it to you, Mrs. Marsh." He pulled forward a chair, sat down at the other's invitation. "Lord, but you're comfortable here!"

"Not so bad."

"A pity the place don't pay."

The girl was back again, with two tall glasses. "Here's luck?" Bland said, and emptied his almost at a gulp.

"But it does pay," Marsh said.

"It does, eh?" said the bigger man. "I heard different; but I guess you know best."

"Not as it used to, though, I admit."

"That's only natural. You had no competition before I came. Truth to tell, Marsh, I don't think there's room for two planters on Alaoi."

Marsh sighed. "Maybe not."

"I don't see why not," said the girl quickly. She had seated herself on the side of her husband's chair, one arm about his shoulders. "The demand for copra is so big it can't be met, even now, and it's growing every year. Why isn't there room for two planters on Alaoi?"

"One big plantation has a greater output than two small plantations," Bland said tolerantly. "Traders get to bear about it sooner, have more confidence in it. They buy from the big man in preference to the small man, Mrs. Marsh. There's no sentiment in business, you know." He settled himself more comfortably. "Now, if I could join this place to mine, and extend each a bit, I'd have a plantation as big as most. Putting it bluntly, that's what I want."

"What makes you imagine we're willing to sell?" Marsh asked slowly.

"Things I hear. The native chatter made me think you hadn't been doing too well. You've had bad luck. You're——" Bland hesitated—"well, you're handicapped. It's a hard life, and a man needs all the strength he's got to win out. If you had a manager you could trust, now, things would be different. But, to be frank, as it is you haven't a chance. The thing that amazes me is that you've held out so long."

"These niggers are crooked devils. They can't be trusted an inch. You want to be behind them with a whip all the time."

"I haven't found it so," Marsh said quickly. "Until lately, that is. Now, I admit, that seems to be the case. I can't understand why they changed so suddenly."

"Because they found they could get away with it," said Bland. "Found they could impose on you. That's all."

"Because I'm blind?"

"Well."

"That's what you mean," Marsh said, a note of bitterness in his voice. "I think it myself. I'm no use—the shadow of a man."

"Hush, dear!" the girl whispered. Her arm had tightened about his shoulders. "We'll struggle along, you and I."

The man stirred restlessly beneath her touch. "I'm a hindrance, a dead weight. Why blink facts? I'm no use to you or myself or any one else. Any nigger sodden nigger can get the better of me now. I don't know when they're tricking me, lying to me. They're just voices—they and every one else."

Bland, lolling there in his chair, seemed forgotten.

"Am I not real?" She stooped above him, her hair brushing his face. "Am I no more than a voice?"

An instant he fondled her hand. "God knows you're real enough. You're the only grip I have on things. If I hadn't you——"

"But you have me, and you'll have me always. And I have you." There were tears in her voice. "Does it matter to me that you're blind? Do I love you less because you can't see me, or because you rely on me for so many little things? Sometimes," she said defiantly, "I'm almost glad you're blind. It brings you closer to me; lets me help you more. And I'll help you now."

"How?"

"By calling Slade."

"No!" Marsh said. "Let Slade rest."

"Slade said if ever we were in trouble to send for him. Did he ever say anything he didn't mean?"

"Leave him alone. We owe him enough."

"And he owes us enough."

IMPATIENTLY Marsh came to his feet. He kicked over the glass he had set upon the floor, smashed it.

"There!" he said, bitterly. "I can't move without breaking something. Why should Slade worry about me? I'm not worth it. He owes me nothing."

"He owes you your sight."

"That was bad luck," Marsh said. He moved the length of the veranda, a tall, strong figure of a man. Returning, he stood before them. "He paid me to take risks—he took the same risks himself. If he hadn't followed where no other man would have followed, I'd have been killed that day. He owes me nothing because my luck was out. He fixed me here, hacked this place from the wilderness for me, built the house, brought you to me, gave me everything I have. No man could have done more. Few men would have done half as much. Slade owes me nothing."

"Let him be judge of that," said the girl pleadingly.

"No! He gave me my chance, and I've failed."

"Sell out now, before the crash," Bland said. "I'll give you a fair price."

"Let me think it over," Marsh said, helplessly. "Come again in a few days and I'll give you an answer."

Bland rose, took his hand. "Don't think I'm taking advantage of you, Jim. It's just that I see how hard it is for you, how slight your chance of making good. Lord knows I don't want to put you out. I'd be only too glad to be of help. But there you are. You're blind, and a blind man can't work a plantation. If you had white men under you, you could. They'd know that if you went down you'd drag them with you. But you can't teach a nigger that. He thinks you're out to beat him all the time."

"I suppose so," Marsh said, listlessly.

Bland went down the steps from the veranda, stood among the banks of flowers.

"Think it over, Jim, and I'll come back in a few days. Good-by, Mrs. Marsh."

He was gone among the trees. Marsh felt about him for the chair, sat down. The girl stood watching him in silence. As if aware of her regard, he began to justify himself.

"It's no use struggling on, Fay. Better get out now while the place is still worth something. The longer we wait, the less we get. We can sell our half-interest in the schooner—Harding may buy that. We might raise enough to start a little business somewhere else. If not, we'll find something I can do, anything at all."

"You're losing courage, Jim?"

"Yes."

She moved closer to him, gave him her hand. "We'll fight another bit before we give in."

He laughed, proud of her courage.

That evening, as darkness fell, Fay Marsh left the house on the slope of the hill, moved down between the trees towards the native village. The song of cicadas was in the air, sharp in contrast to the croon of surf on the beach. One by one the stars came out, bright among the trembling leaves. She heard the murmurous voices of lovers, and, a lover herself, smiled.

Li Cheen lived in a little house at the farther end of the village, a small, grave man, very devout. He opened the door to her knock, with much bowing ushered her into his parlor.

"Be seated, honorable lady," he said in his precise English. "This is a happy moment for your servant."

With one slim hand she waved his compliments aside.

"Listen, Li Cheen. We are in trouble."

Li Cheen nodded in the oriental manner by shaking his head. "So I have heard." He pulled a lattice blind down over the single window and the drowsy murmur from without died almost to silence. A candle lit the room, showed her the gods of old China peering at her from every shelf and corner.

"The men won't work, the trees won't yield, the traders won't buy. Why is that, Li Cheen?"

The grave Chinese folded his arms across his middle. "Because, honorable lady, Bland has come to Alaoi."

"Bland? What has Bland to do with it?"

Li Cheen chose to be secretive. "Who knows?" He glanced about him with quick almond eyes. "The spirits have ears."

She moved impatiently. "Tell me what we should do."

Without hesitation he answered. "Send for Slade."

"My husband will not do that."

"Then, honorable lady, do it yourself."

"But I don't know where Slade is. By the time he came it might be too late."

Li Cheen's face crinkled into a smile. "Few there are who know where Slade is. He has vanished like smoke before a breeze. Once, his name was on every tongue, his life stormy as the seas he sailed. Then he sought peace. He went to an island he knew, an island where only the gulls come. And there he has stayed, thinking of the lives of men."

"Then he can't be reached?" said the girl.

Again Li Cheen smiled. "He can be reached by those he calls his friends. And you and your husband are first of those. Each month he sends to me a little box." Li Cheen stooped, drew from a low cupboard a cage with a wire front. "In each are two pigeons."

The girl breathed a quick sigh of relief. "Get me one, Li."

He nodded, went from the room, returned in an instant with a pigeon in his hand. Softly, he crooned to it, with gentle fingers smoothing its smooth feathers. Golden eyed it watched him, seeming unafraid. He put it on the floor, and it strutted about while he searched in a lacquer cabinet for some paper. He found a slip, found a pen, gave both to the girl.

"Here is ink."

She hesitated. "What shall I write?"

"Write 'Come quickly,'" said Li Cheen. "Then he will know that there is need for haste."

Fear came into his eyes as Slade stooped over him.

"Life is hard for men who live in shadow," Li Cheen said.

"Blinded him, eh?" Bland said; and Slade nodded.

"So it was more or less my fault that he lost his sight. I went to Suva for the girl he was going to marry, and she kept him alive. It was up to me to do something for them. Now I hear the place isn't paying. Have you any idea what's wrong?"

"Several," Bland said. "First and most important is that Marsh ain't the niggers' master. He never could be, without his sight. They know that, and work on it. Second is he pays them too much, and they take that as a sign of weakness. Third is that until I came here he had no competition, and he's not used to it.

"But the main thing, Slade, is that he's blind. Running a young plantation is a man's job, and a strong man's job. It's too big a job for a man without his sight."

Bland leaned forward to thump the table with a hard brown fist. "Marsh can't hold out—he knows it and I know it. Soon or late he has to quit. It's only a question of time. It's in my interests that he should quit—I don't deny that. I'm ready to offer him a fair price, to do everything I can to help him find something more suitable. But the longer he holds out the smaller my price will be, because the place ain't receiving the attention it should. That's square enough, you'll admit."

"Square enough," Slade nodded.

BLAND leaned back in his chair. "And there you have it. It's hard on Marsh and his wife; but what can you or I do? A man has to fight his own battles, win or lose. He can't have them fought for him."

"No," Slade agreed. He stood up. "Unless he can't fight himself."

"Well, that's your affair; but I warn you it's a year's work to get that plantation to run smooth. If there's anything I can do, let me know. You'll have a look round, now that you're here?"

"Some other time. I haven't seen Marsh yet."

On the veranda, they shook hands. "Drop over again," Bland said cordially. "We can always offer you a drink, anyway."

"Thanks," Slade said, "I will."

He went back through the trees without sighting Gibbons. But Li Cheen stood at the door of his house, smiling as only an Oriental can smile.

"A deep man," Slade said in answer to the other's unspoken question.

"And a dangerous man."

Slade's gray eyes seemed intent on something in the distance. That was a favorite trick with him when he was absorbed. "You think so? Well, we'll see, we'll see."

He moved on through the village, up the path that led to Marsh's house. He saw natives working among the trees, and stood a while, himself unseen, watching them. Their movements were slow, leisurely; often they paused to chatter together, work forgotten. When, as he moved on again, they saw him, they stood to stare. He said nothing, but passed on.

Marsh was in the veranda, staring with sightless eyes across the vivid flowers. He heard the approaching step, stood up.

"Hello, who ever you are."

"Hello, Jim," Slade said, strangely moved.

"Slade!" Marsh cried, and came forward with outstretched hand. "What brings you here, by all that's wonderful?"

"I was passing by and just dropped in."

Marsh laughed unsteadily, wringing his old captain's hand. "Lord, but it's good to hear your voice again. The roving spirit isn't dead in you yet, eh?"

"I'm afraid not," Slade said. "How's the little lady?"

"Just as wonderful as ever."

"Everything is fine? Business, I mean."

"Couldn't be better."

"Good!" Slade said. "You've made a fine place of it, Jim."

"All this?" Marsh waved one hand toward the smiling flowers. "That's Fay's work. Everything you see, you can put down to her. I did nothing."

The girl came out as he spoke, gave Slade her hand. "I'm glad to see you," she said simply.

"I've just been telling him," Marsh said with some suspicion of haste, "how well we're getting on, Fay."

She smiled at Slade, and her smile held infinite pity and understanding. "You'll stay some time with us, won't you?"

"Well——" He seemed to hesitate, and Marsh broke in.

"You must! We'd like to show you how grateful we are for all you've done. Besides, it's pretty quiet here for us, and we can talk over old times." He sighed. "Lord, the good old times! Life was worth living then." An instant he peered into the years that had gone. "Yes, it's pretty quiet here. We'll be glad to have you, Slade."

"You're lucky to have a neighbor," Slade said.

"Bland? Yes, we're lucky to have him. He's one of the best—a white man clean through. Have you the Shark still?"

"Yes. She's down by the jetty."

"Who's mate now?"

"I've none—just a few Kanakas. I'll pick one up in Sydney."

"I must go over her again, though it'll make we wish to God I had my eyes. Harding is due in any day—you remember Harding?"

SLADE sat down and watched Marsh with kindly gray eyes. The blind man talked and talked, of the days that were past, of the wild days they had known together, of the dangers they had shared. And the girl sat listening, anxious, troubled. Here was a man she did not know, a man who talked familiarly of killing and treachery and midnight forays.

Marsh talked until dusk closed in about them and the cicadas took up their song.

"Time for bed," Slade said, rising.

The girl showed him to his room, stood just within the door.

"You see? He trusts everybody—as he must. He wants you to think we've succeeded, because he's ashamed to admit our failure, and too proud to ask your help. But I've no pride where he's concerned. You'll find what's wrong, won't you?"

"I'll look around," Slade nodded. "Don't worry."

She was gone with a last quick smile, and he undressed at his leisure.

He was stooped over the lamp when a knife came through the open window, smicked at his shoulder, and stood quivering in the wall. A quick breath extinguished the flame—he was in the open, running for the trees, gun in hand. He halted, listened. The night was very still. He moved around, wary and silent, keen eyed. Only the trees were there.

He slept that night on the floor beneath the window, where a man climbing through must step on him, the revolver within easy reach.

SLADE came softly through the shadows, so softly that the native who drowsed against the bole of the palm awakened to his presence only when Slade stood over him. Then he came to his feet, furtive eyed, uncertain.

"Man," Slade said in the native tongue, slapping against his leg the little stick he carried, "is it to show your master pays you at the end of every moon?"

The brown man shuffled his feet. "Lord, the sun was so hot."

Slade tapped him on the chest with the point of the little cane. "And your master is blind? Now know. From this day you work as you are paid to work, whether the sun is hot or the rain cold, whether the wind blows or the stars come out by day. For I am your master's eyes, and I see everything, though you may not see me. And I am your master's ears, and I hear everything, even to the talking of the ghosts. What is your name?"

"Tembi, master."

Slade's eyes were cold as death. "Tembi, you will tell me where you drink the smoke of the poppy, and what man brings it to Alaoi."

But the man was stilled. "Master, I know nothing."

Slade smiled. "And you will know less; for I with my wonderful eyes can see the little ghosts that crowd your path, and know that soon they will set a snare for your spirit."

He went his way, swinging the little cane, leaving a man very badly frightened, but still uncommunicative.

He went down to the house of Li Cheen, and the little yellow man greeted him with a smile. In the old days Li Cheen had been cook aboard the Shark, before Slade left him on Alaoi to watch over the interests of Marsh and his wife.

"Li Cheen," Slade said, "you smoke opium?"

Li Cheen admitted it without shame. "A little; for, as you know, even in anything is madness."

"That is true," Slade nodded. "Where do you get it?"

"It is brought to me, so many times a year," Li Cheen said with a little smile.

"If some were stolen you would miss it?"

"Yes."

"Then where do the natives get the opium they smoke?"

"I did not know of this," Li Cheen said in some surprise. "You are sure?"

"I don't talk to hear my voice," Slade said shortly. "Keep your ears open, and see if you can find out where that stuff is coming from. When you do, let me know."

Slade, returning, met Marsh among the avenues of the trees.

"Well?" Marsh said, almost on the defensive. "See anything wrong?"

Slade took his arm. "Nothing, except that your men are lazy. I suppose that's only natural, though. I'll wake them up a bit."

"I want you to remember you're a guest."

Slade laughed. "Come on down and we'll go over the Shark."

Li Cheen came to Slade that night as the shadows flitted down. "Bland has the opium," he said without preamble. "He sells it to the natives, threatening to sell no more if they give away his secret."

Slade asked no questions as to how he had discovered that. As much as any white man can, he knew the ways of the Oriental.

ABOUT this time Bland sat in a dark room, facing Tembi, the native. Between them was a little lamp with a naked flame that threw shadows into the corners and behind the two men. Tembi squatted on his heels; Bland leaned forward, elbows on knees, watching him.

"This you will do," Bland said, "or this man's spirit will eat yours, and you will wander always in darkness, hearing nothing, seeing nothing, knowing nothing."

The brown man shivered. "Lord, I am afraid."

"Here is courage," Bland said. He dipped the little stick he held into the jar by his side, twirled the sticky mass into a ball, twirled it in the flame of the lamp. It bubbled and smoked, while Tembi watched with fascinated eyes.

"Now," Bland said, and Tembi held out his pipe. Bland dropped the sizzling globe into the bowl, leaned back. Tembi drew the black smoke into his lungs.

"This man is afraid of you," Bland said. "That is why he will kill you unless you kill him first."

Tembi nodded gravely.

"You will go to the house, and watch the room where he sleeps. When the light has been out an hour, creep through the window, and strike quickly. Only then will you be safe."

Tembi's hand dropped to the knife thrust through the string about his middle. "This I will do."

"That is good," Bland said, and signed to him to go.

Tembi came like a shadow to the house on the hill. Among the trees he halted, watching the window of the room where slept the man he was to kill. It was dark, a blind eye staring into the night. He squatted down, waited with all the patience of the east.

After some time, he saw the window glow to brightness. A curtain had been drawn across, and on this a shadow moved, passing back and forth.

When, presently, the light went out, Tembi ran one thumb along the edge of his knife, and was satisfied. It was the time between moons, and the night was very dark, lit only by the glow of the stars. That was as well. There was light enough, and more than enough, for the work he had in hand.

Later, he crept into the open, paused an instant, listening, went forward

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS by Sara Moore

I HAVE A YEN.

I have a yen
To sail to some far isle, to emigrate
To where blue sea horizons bound one's fate—
There friend nor foe would care to penetrate.
But then,

I like a table next the dancing floor
Where Texas Guinan hugs guests at the door;
I often bask where two wild jazz bands roar.
I have a yen.

I have a yen to wear a purple gown or lace like snow;
Again I crave well washed blue calico,
A castle or a knockdown bungalow.
I ken

'Twere gay to lead a prima donna's life,
To serve some farmer as his patient wife,
To wield a paint brush—or a surgeon's knife.
I have a yen.

I have a yen
To be the pet of some slick Wall street champ;
To toss my heart to some newspaper scamp,
To be a mother, or a nun, or vamp;
My pen

Goes wandering across the page to find
Some clew to what I often call my mind.
To just one thing I seem to be inclined—
To have a yen.

HIS SECRETARY.

(Mamie Hickey devotes another thought to the ways of a man.)

I open his letters and answer two-thirds;
And guard his own office from pests he calls "birds";
I "get the right numbers" and answer the phone,
And pick out and order new files—all alone.
I find the lost contract—and point out its flaws,
Delete from his letters some dangerous clause.
The front office rows I must handle and smooth;
His fears, his impatience, and temper I soothe;
Buy tickets, a railroad compartment reserve—
Keep his mind on the job when to golf it might swerve.
I make lunch engagements—or cancel the same,
And call the garage man—his car has gone lame.
And when about sundown the day's work is done,
I'm bushed, but he's ready for play and for fun.
He says, with deep pity, 'tis easy to see,
I need some big strong man to look after me!

THE WINGED SAMPLE CASE.

(Perfected air transportation will solve the selling problems for American manufacturers.—Gentleman in the Pullman diner.)

The drummer is a pioneer who blazes trails for trade;
By slow coach or by horse and rig his erstwhile trips were made . . .
And when the auto stepped time up he swung his car in high.
Ah, soon these giddy Gideons will zoom across the sky.

FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which the rest outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and who would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send cash to The Tribune, but write for the name of the applicant and send direct.

Young Mother Is Deserted.

"I wonder if one of your readers has a baby buggy no longer needed that would pass it on to my young sister-in-sister? Her husband left her about six months before the baby was born and after hospital expenses and doctor bills were paid there was nothing left with which to buy a buggy. M. A."

Most baby carriages are still in good condition long after the young occupants have outgrown them and they could be put to good use in families where the coffers do not permit the buying of all the things that make tiny infants comfortable. If you have one lying about unused won't you give it to this young deserted mother?

A Very Sad Case.

"I am a man almost 70 and out of work. Because of my age it has been impossible to find anything, even though I am perfectly able to do messenger or clerical work or something similar. During my entire life in business I had but two situations, staying in each of them many years, but now there seems to be no place for a man of my age. I have my wife and myself to support and I do not want to accept charity. W. D."

All his life this man has been a steady, honest, plodding worker, devoting his years to the service of others. It doesn't seem quite right, does it, that he should be turned away now for younger, faster hands that are filling his place? What can you do for him?

In Great Need.

"I am a cripple minus one leg and because of my condition I am finding impossible to get a job, even though have had a lot of experience doing printing, electrical and automobile mechanic work. I have no money, my room rent is overdue, and I am in need of clothing. Can you help me? I wear size 40 and shirts 16½. G. G."

He walks the streets day after day in search of work, but because of misfortune that has befallen him there is no room for this fellow in the army of the employed and so his existence becomes a precarious business. Won't you help him, just a bit, by giving him the clothing you can no longer wear?

Supports Four Children.

"Mrs. A. has been left to support her four small children, the oldest of whom is a girl not quite 8 years old. The boys are 6 and 3 years, and there is a baby a month old. She has been trying to support them as best she can, but is having a most difficult time. The children are all badly in need of clothing and have no toys whatever. Mrs. A. is a good manager and able and eager to make over clothing. F. N."

Such courage and determination deserves all the help and coöperation we can give. If you have growing children around the ages of the A. youngsters they undoubtedly have garments still good which they'll not be able to wear again. Won't you give them to this mother?

Letters from Home.

After graduation from college, I spent two years abroad, studying. As I had never been away from home more than three weeks at a time in my whole life, of course I was homesick and of couse I kept close watch of the dates for the arrivals of the mail steamers from home.

A steamer was due. I dreamed of letters from home, five of them. I looked them over and recognized the handwriting on three of them, but could not make out from whom the other two came.

Just at this point, I was awakened by our maid standing in the doorway and holding out my mail. Three letters and two postal cards and the handwriting on the three letters was identical with those three of my dream! P. E. B.

The Tires Were Gone.

Last summer we stopped over night at a noted summer resort. During the night I dreamed some one was trying hard to get away with our car. I awoke suddenly, telling my husband, but he said, "Go back to sleep; you're just dreaming!"

I did, and so did he, but in the morning when he went to our car to see if everything was all right he found that our two new spare tires were gone. E. B. K.

Quite a Shock.

A few weeks ago I received a check for twenty-five dollars for some work done. I went to the bank to cash the check, but the cashier handed it back to me saying, "There are no funds in the bank.

I was worried because the man who had issued the check moved to another town thirty miles away. I drove down several times to get the money but he never could pay.

Shortly after my last trip to this town I dreamed that the man deposited some money at the bank where he was now living. I told my husband but he only laughed and said I'd make another useless trip. I dreamed the same dream three times in succession.

After the third time I drove to this city, went to the bank and presented my check. You will never know how surprised I was when the cashier accepted it and gave me my money! E. M.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel,

The LONG NIGHT

by FRANK R. ADAMS

"The bear has him treed on a hummock about a hundred yards from the ship."

In Retrospect:

THE steamship Rangefinder, bearing Prof. Eric Dahlstrom on an arctic voyage of exploration, has been wrecked and is drifting in the ice, with Prof. Dahlstrom, Judge Cavendish, and Capt. Anderson as sole survivors. Stephen Hard, war correspondent, is dispatched with a relief plane by Mike Levens, managing editor of the New York Chronicle. Hard drops from the plane by parachute. He finds two men in the cabin, both unconscious or dead. He is struck down unconscious by an unseen assailant. By dirigible arrives a second relief party, led by Eve Dahlstrom, the explorer's daughter, and including Leroy Collier, who Eve has promised to marry in return for financing the expedition; Herbert Beverleigh, John Gael, Christopher Brinker, Scandinavian newspaper man; Dr. Waters, and Karl Maussler, a German mechanic. The dirigible is compelled by rising wind to cruise away, leaving these members of the party aboard ship. Dahlstrom is found dead, Cavendish and Hard unconscious—the latter with a crutch in his hand. The captain is missing; the ship's log reveals that the crew has deserted, under the leadership of the mate. Dahlstrom's death is attributed to Hard. Collier convinces the others that the motive might have been a phial of radium. Hard is placed in chains, but later is released to rescue Bill Dayne, mate of the Rangefinder. Hard is placed on trial.

INSTALLMENT VI.

Justice Tempered.

AFTER the meal the mate turned on the radio. It was evening in New York, and one of the great chain hookups was broadcasting a late program of dance music and night club entertainment—songs, merriment, wisecracks, warmth, the atmosphere of mild naughtiness radiating through the chill winter air to be intercepted on its way to the pole by their puny arresting wires and brought into that stuffy, shadow haunted cabin to amuse slightly a group of widely diversified individuals within the blue circle of the icy scythe of death.

You're the cream in my coffee,
You're the salt in my stew, sang the radio.

"I wonder where Dayne really got those supplies," thought Steve.

Each man tells love tales.

"What made Stephen Hard so bitter?" asked Eve, also of herself. The music played a discordant countermelody to her thoughts. "Underneath he is gentle. You can tell that. Could he have killed my father?"

We are the musketeers,
Bold, dashing musketeers.

The orchestra at Richman's Supper club was doing that.

In the Rangefinder cabin Mate Dayne tapped out the tempo as he thought, "That nosey newspaper man thinks I'm a liar. To hell with him. Give him a swift trial and start him walking to find somebody that will believe him." He grinned at the idea.

A tenor was singing:

Ma bell, ma belle,
You are so charming, I'm enchanted with you,
Ma belle, belle,
Your eyes are dazing me and thrilling me, too.
Every smile invites me all the while,
With every look surprising, tantalizing,
Whispering, "Awake me,
Come and take me."

And Leroy Collier was looking at Eve and thinking, "You're like that, you cold little devil, but I'll awake you, all right, now that you're mine. I never saw the woman yet who would not fall when I cracked the whip, and I guess you're no exception even if your devilish aloofness does drive me wild. Well, that's about over now. Whatever else you might do, you'll never go back on your bargain."

Herbert Beverleigh wiped his eye furtively when he thought no one was looking. He wanted to see his wife, and wondered if he ever would. Hereafter he would dance with her and stay out as late as she wanted to and do it willingly.

Dr. Waters played solitaire. Maussler sat stolidly a little apart, doing nothing. John Gael already was asleep.

CHRISTOPHE BRINKER wrote voluminously on his account of the expedition which would probably never be published, and Judge Cavendish surveyed the group with the wise eye of a man who has seen much of humanity pass in review before him and is not to be confused or distracted by the surface appearance of things.

"There is much here that does not meet the eye," he ruminated, while the radio delivered from thousands of miles away the information that "There's a Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder." "This, I should think, would be an excellent place to come at the real truth of things. Will it come out before we die, I wonder? If it doesn't, I suppose it does not matter, but man seeks the truth even on the brink of the grave and asks a question with his last breath. I, for one, regard it as a most interesting experiment and I shall be pleased to take a hand in it, knowing for once that no matter what I do it will not make much difference one way or the other."

Actually the advent of Mate Dayne with his small sled load of supplies had not changed the aspect of the situation much, except to make it possible for them to hang on for a number of days more. The routine of life was resumed and on the next day, or rather after every one had slept as long as they could, the question of continuing the trial of Stephen Hard came up. Those who were in favor of abandoning it found themselves in the minority and even a majority would have availed little, as Dayne, now rating a captainey in the absence of Anderson, was unequivocally determined upon it.

"There's no use beating about the bush," he declared, "and, while I've got to keep my opinion to myself we might just as well prove that Hard killed Dahlstrom and get it over with."

He assumed the presidency of the court which was automatically his by law, even if not by training or temperament. Evidently he relished the trappings of authority and it was noticeable that he had even attempted a shave in honor of the occasion.

"He looks just as evil without his beard as he did with it on," whispered Judge Cavendish to his chained client. "I feel as if I had seen him somewhere before, but I think it is just that I am familiar with his type."

"From constant association with criminals?" questioned Steve, also in a low voice.

The judge laughed and nodded. "Right."

JUDGE CAVENDISH, even in a fur shirt and reindeer pants, gave the impression of the careful grooming and the perfect savoir faire of an accustomed authority on the law of his land. He had on at least a phantom white shirt and a correct high collar.

Christopher Brinker had made no objection to the addition of the judge to the counsel for the defense. Steve generously offered him the opportunity to abjure any partisanship whatever if he wished.

"No," decided Brinker, "I'll carry on with the shock troops. Not that it will make any decided difference, but I think everybody else is against you and it seems like the sporting thing to do."

Steve thanked him.

"I'll just assist the jolly old barrister in working up the case. I don't know any law, but I've heard a few good semi-parlor stories that he could tell at the trial, and that helps no end. I'll let him do all the talking while I'll come in strong on the thinking."

When the trial reopened this time, in spite of the fact that it was rendered grotesque by the ignorance of formalities and the undignified demeanor of the presiding officer, the whole affair seemed to take on a more sinister aspect. Steve felt the menace and so did Judge Cavendish, although the latter did not mention it—rather cried it down, in fact, but his actual instinctive reaction was the same as Steve's.

The fact that Bill Dayne knew little of the law made the proceedings a more barbaric affair, and, therefore, more dangerous to the victim. Steve felt that the farce of the trial was more a preliminary to a sacrifice to a cruel god than a judicial weighing of evidence. With Dayne in the chair he had little chance, and he knew it.

"The court is opened," Dayne declared. "We will now hear the facts about how the prisoner, Stephen Hard, murdered the deceased, Prof. Eric Dahlstrom."

"I object, Mr. Dayne."

Dayne paused, nonplused by the interruption to what was apparently a carefully prepared opening speech. He glared at the offender, Judge Cavendish.

"What are you objecting to?"

The judge replied gently, "I think it is scarcely fair to describe Mr. Hard as a murderer. That presupposes the conclusion which our opponents are attempting to arrive at and which we are just as earnestly endeavoring to confute."

"Don't use words like that," admonished Dayne, "and don't call me Mr. Dayne. Say 'Capt. Dayne' when you speak to me."

However, he changed the wording of his opening speech when he resumed. "We're here to try to find out whether this man Stephen Hard, now under arrest, is guilty of killing Prof. Eric Dahlstrom, commander of this expedition. Are you ready to commence?"

"The prosecution is ready." Roy Collier left his seat and remained standing.

"The defense is ready," said Judge Cavendish without getting up.

"All right, let's hear what you got to say."

"Capt. Dayne," began Collier with due formality, "we intend to prove two things. First, that Prof. Dahlstrom was killed; and, second, that the person who killed him is the prisoner, Mr. Stephen Hard. By saying that we intend to prove Prof. Dahlstrom was killed we mean simply that we intend to establish the fact that he died a violent death at the hands of some outside agency and that he did not expire naturally or as the result of self-inflicted wounds. It is, perhaps, especially favorable to the cause of justice that you, Capt. Dayne, presiding officer of this court, were not present at the time our party arrived and discovered the evidence of this crime, because the facts in the case can now be set before you in logical order and you will be able to get a less biased point of view than any of the rest of us, who are probably confused by our emotional reactions to the brutality of this murder.

"Dr. Waters," continued Collier, "will you please take the stand?"

THE boyish looking young medical man moved up to a seat next to Dayne.

"It is understood," proceeded Collier evenly, "that you and all other witnesses are subject to the customary obligation to speak the truth and nothing but the truth. If this is agreeable to the defense, we will waive the customary swearing of witnesses."

Judge Cavendish nodded. "It is agreeable to the defense."

"A good, sensible idea," echoed Brinker. "What's the use of swearing to tell the truth when you don't intend to anyway, I say? It makes everybody feel uncomfortable."

Collier flushed at the implication, turned toward Brinker to reply, but thought better of it. "Dr. Waters, what, in your opinion, was the cause of the death of the late Prof. Dahlstrom?" he inquired.

Dr. Waters answered with professional briskness, "The deceased met his death from a concussion of the brain and from freezing."

"Concussion of the brain and freezing," repeated Collier. "Which came first?"

"The concussion," Dr. Waters replied unhesitatingly.

"Is that merely a matter of opinion or have you a reason for answering in those exact words?"

"My examination of the body is quite conclusive in that respect," the doctor replied. "A considerable wound accompanied the fracture of the skull, a wound from which blood flowed freely. At the time I examined the body blood was still flowing slightly from the wound although it was freezing as fast as it came out."

Eve caught her breath in a sigh that was half a groan. Judge Cavendish reached across the table and patted her hand.

"Is it necessary, Collier, to go into the rather harrowing details of the finding of Prof. Dahlstrom?"

"I think it is," retorted Collier.

"The girl might just as well get used to it," supplemented Dayne. "She ain't got no business being here, anyway."

Judge Cavendish started up in protest, but Eve caught his eye and motioned to him to let the matter rest.

"Then," continued Collier, "granting that concussion of the brain preceded freezing, the deceased actually met his death from concussion and not from freezing. Is that so, Dr. Waters?"

"Yes," admitted the doctor, "I suppose that is so."

"That's all I wish to establish, Capt. Dayne. Now, Dr. Waters, describe the location of the wound and tell the court how it might have been inflicted."

The doctor looked at Eve to see how she was taking it, and then said, "In my judgment, without having made an absolutely strict surgical examination, the wound which caused Prof. Dahlstrom's death, or at least hastened it, was a fracture of the cerebral cavity in the left hemisphere."

"He means on top of the head over the left eye," said Collier for the benefit of the presiding officer. Turning to Dr. Waters again. "Could such a wound have been self-inflicted?"

"No."

"Then, how could it have been caused?"

"Either by a fall against some solid object, such as the corner of a table, or being struck by some sort of weapon."

"Such as a crutch?" suggested Collier.

"I object."

"Yes," answered the doctor, in spite of the objection.

"I must insist, Capt. Dayne," continued Judge Cavendish, "that that answer be stricken from the records."

"For cripe's sake, don't interrupt all the time," said Dayne sharply. "How can we find out about this murder if nobody can't answer any questions? And how can we strike the answer off the records when we ain't got no records?"

THE judge laughed. Most of the others were smiling, too.

"That will be all for the present, Dr. Waters."

"Just a moment, Dr. Waters," Judge Cavendish detained him.

"I shall want to call you again later but right now I should like to cross-examine you on your reply to one question. You say that the wound which caused Professor Dahlstrom's death might have been inflicted by falling against some solid object?"

"I said it might have been, yes," admitted the doctor, "but the probabilities are against it."

"Why?"

"Because Professor Dahlstrom was seated in a chair and was not near a corner of the table."

"He might have been picked up from the floor and placed in the chair by some one, might he not?"

"Perhaps, but there was blood on the table and none on the floor where he might have lain."

"Did you look on the floor?"

"Yes, I looked on the floor."

"Thank you. I have finished with the witness."

The doctor left the improvised stand.

Collier addressed the court: "My next witness is Miss Eve Dahlstrom. Will you please sit over there, dear?"

Eve stiffened a little at his term of address, but moved to the seat vacated by the doctor.

"I'm sorry," said Collier, "that I have to ask you any questions at all, but I will try to be as brief about it as possible. You were actually the first person to enter this room. Will you please describe to the court just what you saw?"

Eve began. "When I entered the room I noticed that my father was lying face downward across the table. He was wounded," she attested, and then went on hurriedly, "he was wounded as Doctor Waters described. Naturally, I was so shocked and concerned that I did not see much of anything else. I recall vaguely that Judge Cavendish was on the other side of the table and that some one else also was in the room."

"With a crutch held upside down in his hand?"

"I don't know," Eve attested, "Mr. Brinker called our attention to the crutch but I did not see it at the time."

"And that's all, darling, unless the defense wishes to cross-examine."

"No," decided Judge Cavendish swiftly. "I think we can establish the innocence of our client without forcing Miss Dahlstrom to review any further what must be a harrowing chapter in her life."

"That's all, Eve."

IF Collier got the rebuke hidden in Judge Cavendish's refusal to cross-examine, it did not affect him any.

"It seems to me, Captain Dayne," he continued, "that we have established beyond any reasonable doubt that the late Professor Dahlstrom did not die a natural death and that he did not commit suicide or meet with an accident: that he was, in fact, killed by some assailant and that the weapon used was a crutch."

"Captain Dayne," interrupted Judge Cavendish, "the prosecution has not proved that the weapon used was a crutch."

Dayne debated this interruption.

"They may not have proved it, but I think that's what it was," he decided. "The doctor says so."

"But I objected to his testimony," the judge reminded him.

"So you did," admitted Dayne, "but it didn't do no good. I heard him anyway. Go on," he nodded to Collier.

"We have proved beyond reasonable doubt that Professor Dahlstrom was killed by having been beaten over the head by a crutch, and I intend to prove likewise that his assailant was the prisoner, Mr. Stephen Hard. I would like to call Mr. Christopher Brinker."

"I am one of the legal representatives of the defendant," Brinker replied.

"That doesn't make any difference. Miss Dahlstrom, who has just testified, is also the sole member of the jury. Truthful answers to the questions that I shall ask you is all that I shall expect. Please take the stand."

Christopher Brinker moved over to the official chair.

"Mr. Brinker," began Collier, "you heard Miss Dahlstrom's description of all she saw upon entering this cabin. You also heard her statement that her father required all of her attention, which obscured her observation of the other characters of the scene. Will you please tell the court any details that you noticed which escaped Miss Dahlstrom's eye?"

Brinker cleared his throat. "I should say that Miss Dahlstrom noticed practically everything."

"She did not mention who the third unconscious man was at the table. You must have seen him. Who was it?"

Brinker nodded in the direction of Stephen Hard. "The prisoner," he said.

"How was he sitting, lying, or standing?"

"He was lying partly on the floor but with one arm over a revolving chair. You remember that."

"It isn't a case of what I remember. You are to talk about what you saw. How was he lying?"

"Face down."

"Near to the deceased?"

"Yes," he attested, "quite near."

"Did you notice anything else peculiar about the prisoner, anything to which you could call attention?"

"Yes, he had a crutch in his hand."

"Which hand?"

"The right."

"Anything noticeable about the way he was holding it?"

"I object," from Cavendish.

"Keep still," admonished Dayne, "this is the part I want to hear."

"Was there anything peculiar about the way he held the crutch?" repeated Collier.

"Yes," replied Brinker. "It was upside down."

"As if it might have been used as a weapon?"

"I don't know. I have never seen a crutch used as a weapon."

"I will put the question another way. If you were going to use a crutch to beat a carpet or to hit anything with, would you hold it by the heavy end or by the light end?"

"By the light end," Brinker admitted uncomfortably.

"That's all."

"The defense waives cross-examination," said Judge Cavendish, and Brinker returned to his seat somewhat flushed and flustered.

COLLIER called to the stand practically all the other members of the party to verify Brinker's testimony as to the position of the men and the presence of the crutch. From Judge Cavendish he secured the admission by an informal question that Professor Dahlstrom had used the crutch in question, which he had made himself because he had sprained his ankle.

"Now, gentlemen," Collier continued his case, "I wish to call your attention to the fact that a considerable quantity of radium carried on this expedition for scientific purposes and intrusted specifically to Professor Dahlstrom has disappeared. It will be scarcely necessary to call witnesses to establish this disappearance. We are all cognizant of the facts, and unless some one wishes to establish a doubt we will assume they are true. I mention it at this time because it is the intention of the prosecution to prove that robbery was one of the motives for this appalling crime. I am quite aware that later the defense will attempt to establish the fact that the prisoner is not an habitual criminal—not a robber at all, in fact—in other words, that this crime is contrary to the customary conduct of the prisoner and a direct contradiction of his characteristic actions. We propose to anticipate that defense and to prove that the prisoner is a vindictive, revengeful type, that he has been in difficulties with the federal authorities of the United States previous to this time and that he has been known as a trouble maker, an adventurer, and a vagabond for the major part of his life."

Judge Cavendish put his hand on the arm of his client who was growing slightly restive under the taunts of Leroy Collier and was making little chattering noises with his chains.

"Don't pay any attention to this trick. It is only intended to ruin our morale. This chap, Collier, has listened to a couple of criminal trials back in the States, and thinks he knows just as many legal pretzels and didoes as a regular admitted-to-the-bar juggler. But all he's got is just the words. And the funny thing is that this sort of attack is pretty apt to prove a boomerang. Just sit still, if you can, and let me handle it."

AND yet the judge actually did little to "handle it." Instead he sat placidly by and permitted Collier to attack Steve right and left, smiling sometimes and taking a few notes on an old envelope, but for the most part not appearing to be paying close attention.

"Miss Dahlstrom!" snapped Collier. "Excuse me, dear, but will you take the stand again?"

She looked appealing at him, but he insisted. "Only for a few moments," he assured her.

Eve moved to the stand.

"I want you to tell the court when you first met the accused."

Eve frowned in concentration. "It was in October some time, but I can't remember the exact date."

"The exact date is not necessary. Your meeting with him was coincident with what other event in your life?"

"It was the night that my father's last radio message came through. He was the one who brought it to me."

"What was the opinion you formed of him at that time?"

"Why, I scarcely know."

"I mean was he gentlemanly, courteous, kind?"

"No. I should say that he was sarcastic, sneering, and certainly not kind."

"Do you recall anything else that happened?"

"He knocked you down, if that's what you mean, so that you were unable to get up until after he had left the house."

"No, I did not mean that," Collier interrupted, harshly. "That was an accident. I merely slipped on something and hurt my head. What I referred to, were his closing remarks to you—was he complimentary or the reverse?"

Eve flushed. "Quite the reverse."

"Why?"

"I don't know why."

"I can tell you," volunteered Steve.

But even his own counsel silenced him, and Dayne declared, "You're out of order."

Collier recovered in a moment from the interchange, and leaned once more impressively toward his fiancée.

"Without there being any apparent reason, my dear, what did you imply from his actions?"

"Don't call me 'my dear,' please." Eve was not angry, but her sense of the fitness of things was outraged.

"And for that matter, why say imply when you mean infer?" Christopher Brinker contributed, brightly.

"I do not claim to be a purist."

"I should think you would."

Outside began a barking. It was impossible to continue with the court of business in the cabin until the radio has subsided. It did not subside.

"Probably the curs got tangled in their tie lines," explained Dayne. "I guess I'd better look."

He doffed his dignity of office, and hastily put on furs and boots.

As he went out Beverleigh was saying, "I never cared much for dogs. Lily is very fond of them and she has a good Peke, name Man Chu. But he doesn't chew anybody. That's one of Lily's jokes."

"Eskimo dogs are quarrelsome," he said, "but that didn't sound to me like a fight. I think they're frightened."

THAT diagnosis was confirmed almost immediately by the re-entry of the mate.

"Bear got one of the dogs," he explained tersely, "and in about ten minutes he'll lay out the whole team." He snatched a rifle from a rack on the wall containing two. "Come on, if you never seen a polar bear doing his stuff."

It was a welcome interruption, and every one, with the exception of Eve and Judge Cavendish, followed as soon as they could put on outer garments. Steve remained, of course, perforce.

"I'd rather not see Mr. Dayne kill it," she explained, when Collier urged her to come.

"O, but you'll have to get used to hunting, my dear," he told her. "I do a great deal of it, and after we're married I shall want you to go with me."

Eve shuddered and shook her head. "What a curious lust to kill animates mankind," she mused.

There was a shot. The dogs barked more loudly.

"Let's talk about something else."

But before they could start, hurried footsteps were heard on the companionway stairs.

Collier re-entered and snatched the other rifle from the rack.

"Dayne missed," he explained.

"Missed?"

"Yes, or if he hit him it was not in the shoulder. The worst of it is Dayne slipped and dropped his rifle in a crack in the ice. The bear has him treed on a hummock about a hundred yards from the ship."

Several of the other men came down the companionway.

"Dayne's a goner," said Mr. Beverleigh. "I can't bear to look."

"Hurry up with that rifle," urged Gael, standing in the doorway.

"I'm trying to figure out the action," retorted Collier impatiently. "It's easier in here where I can use my fingers. There's ammunition in the magazine, but there's some kind of a safety stop that prevents it from feeding into the chamber."

"Do you mean to say you don't know how to operate that rifle?" Gael demanded.

"No, and I'll bet you don't either."

"I know I don't, but I've never been a soldier. That man out there may be dead by now, and here we stand delaying over some fool safety device that—say, do any of you fellows know anything about this rifle?"

No one else answered, so finally Steve spoke up pleasantly from his position at the mast. "It looks like an obsolete Mannheimer from here—the kind they still use for elephants in Central Africa."

"Can you use it?"

"Hand it to me."

All unthinking, Collier did. Steve snapped it across his chest in the pose of a soldier at "inspection arms." There was a click as he worked the bolt, and the rifle was loaded.

Steve laughed. "I suppose you know I could kill you now, don't you, Collier?" He handled the rifle carelessly with a noisy clashing of chains. "But I'm not going to. Merely give me the key to these locks. No, don't hand it to me—toss it. You're near enough."

Steve caught the padlock key, and keeping his eyes carefully on Collier all the time, snapped off his chains one by one.

Once free, he did not waste any time in conversation. "One side, Collier," he ordered. "And you stay here."

STEVE mounted the companionway stairs.

The three left in the cabin stared at one another. What had Collier by his thoughtlessness let loose upon their little world?

Judge Cavendish knew, but he was the only one. The others were not yet well enough versed in the science of interpreting a man's action from the lines in his face.

Another shot outside, a loud one. The companionway stood open, and Steve apparently had fired as soon as he reached the top of the stairs. How many cartridges did he have? Enough to use one on each of the men?

There was no more shooting. After a moment there was a shout in the distance. Then footsteps on the stairs.

Steve came in alone. He held the rifle in the hollow of his arm.

"Sorry," he said to Eve. "I had to shoot to kill."

"Who?" demanded Collier.

"The bear." Steve turned toward him and grinned. Then to Eve once more. "I'm going to hold this in my hands for just a moment longer, the only rifle in the camp," he sighed and patted the breech, "and then I'm going to hand it to you and snap on my own padlocks."

Eve said nothing. She couldn't.

But the judge spoke for her. "I'm sure it will not be necessary to put on the chains again," he said. "Not after this."

Steve laughed. "It's for my own protection, Gray Brother. Unless I'm chained up I'll get the blame for the next thing that happens, no matter what it is."

WERE you born on the thirty-first of any month?

"You are then a natural homemaker, with artistic tastes and temperament. Generous to a fault, with a warm and tender nature, attracting many others to you. Your love nature is especially strong on the material plane. Be careful to follow your own intuitions and not be too easily influenced by others.

You are eccentric, and dual. You never forget a kindness; also you rarely forget or forgive an injury. Mathematics you like. And you have ability for law, as a singer, and as an actor. Inventive genius you have, and are gifted in blending colors.

Your first name should be a "fire" one, to strengthen and harmonize you. If you have such a name you will have a vital life. If not, you can use one, at least among your intimates, with excellent results.

You are a "fire" person, with an intense, up and down, clear rhythm, doing one thing at a time, and then leaving it definitely for another. Your "lucky" numbers are the "fire" numbers—the 2, 4 and 8; or any number reducing to one of these when its digits are added together.

Take, for example, the number 7757. Adding the digits: 7 plus 7 plus 5 plus 1 equals 26. Adding again: 2 plus 6 equals 8—a harmonious number for you.

Your best days in any month are the 2d, 4th, 8th, 13th, 17th, 20th, 22d, 26th and 31st. You should on these do all important work, and more routine things on the days in between, if you can. These are your "lucky" days—when you are most keen and able.

July-August.

Those born on any day between and including July 22 and July 28, in any year whatsoever, have characteristics of both the July (Cancer) and August (Leo) months. Numerologically speaking, they are combinations of the qualities of the numbers 4 and 5.

The natural liking of the Leo person to sit in the sun, which can at times become inertia, is modified by the Cancer restlessness, which keeps the July-August people seeking change and new pleasures. They are persons who can be either secretive or frank, as best suits their purpose. They are ambitious, but while some of the Cancer-Leo members are willing to work for distinction, the majority depend upon their tact to carry them through. They are emotional, really rich in feeling, and will give of anything they have when their hearts are touched. Their memories are phenomenal.

The men of this month are inclined to demand the utmost integrity and sincerity from their wives, without considering it necessary to give the same. The women are intense in nature, resent unkindness very much, and make especially good mothers.

Those of this July-August combination who are well brought up or well developed have fine characters and are sometimes intellectual geniuses. Every one born at this time is apt to achieve above the average.

August.

Persons born in any year between July 23 and Aug. 22 have the commanding hearts and natures of the Lion, Leo—the astrological symbol of this month, and the qualities numerologically of the number 5.

They are kind of heart, generous, magnetic, emotional, intuitive. Their love nature is strong and ardent, they are devoted to their own—almost fiercely maternal or paternal—and they like every one to love whom they love, and to like what they like—"Love me, love my dog."

While they would rather plan than work or execute—they love the sun, which rules the August person and no other—they have executive ability, and can and often do work hard and most faithfully. Argument, as with the Cancer people, is of no use. Once their minds are made up, they keep silent and determined. They always make and see a point. As individuals they are splendid entertainers, full of enthusiasm, exuberance, and youth, with marked ability to inspire others, to sway audiences, and to move public opinion. Charming, fearless, and impulsive, they are fond of the opposite sex—all five characteristics, as are curiosity and investigation.

There is a fine feeling for food among the Leo born. They know the best markets, the best combinations, and are expert in ordering a tempting dinner.

August-September.

Persons born on any day between and including Aug. 23 and Aug. 28 in any year have a strong combination of the traits of August and September. Such conserve their forces and focus well the love and the intelligence with which they are richly supplied. Women born at this time love everything from their own children to the seed in the ground.

They are as a rule untiring workers who love the good things of the earth, and who appropriate and use them wisely. When educated they are unusually logical and convince others easily, qualities which make them excellent teachers, as well as physicians and metaphysicians.

There is in them more tact than in either the August or September person, and they rarely offend or disturb any one with temper or criticism. The warmth and rashness of Leo is modified by the coolness of Virgo.

Those born in Leo-Virgo are impatient of houses and clothes, unless these are of the finest or more exquisite. For they are out of door people, with all the freedom and beauty of nature to use as a comparison, and they would rather do without than compromise.

Their especial gifts are shown further by their birthdays and their names as a whole.

In the Feminine Realm

Of the 8,346,796 women wage earners in the United States, 1,920,251, or one out of every four, are married.

The biggest business women's club in England is now under construction in Great Russell street, London. The club will be open to all business women of the city regardless of class, creed or nationality, giving opportunities for rest, recreation and self-improvement.

Of the sixty-nine women candidates of all parties in the recent British general election, only thirteen were elected. Some of the women members at Westminster freely admit that they could have made a better showing as women if there had been a larger percentage of good looks among them.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Curry and Chutney with Their Fiery Spices Conjure Up Pictures of the Glamorous Orient

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

MANY weird dishes containing scores of ingredients have gone the way of all the earth, but curry remains, perhaps because it is essentially the most simple of any highly elaborate dish that was ever compounded. In essence it is a sauce, or relish, served with or over plain boiled rice. In practice, however, it may be a whole table full of ingredients, because not only is the curry highly spiced but all sorts of little tid bits like chutney, comfits, and little cooling bits are served along with it. When the business is carried out in a highly theatrical way, as it may be, numerous items of atmosphere are introduced to recall the eater to the fact that this is a dish of the East Indies.

To have a curry served with atmosphere and gusto there should be dark skinned attendants in turbans and immaculate garb explaining it to us. There have been East Indian restaurants in our country with mural decorations in which have figured the gods of India, the sacred white elephant with his trappings, dancing and singing girls and glimpses of what could be imagined as the Himalayas.

To some of us the picture would not be perfect unless there were seated at the tables in dress uniforms English officers of no less rank than colonels. In the amusing history of curry recipes we find that no end of them have had some colonel's title attached to them, and claims have often been made that this colonel or that one was the man to bring home the true and only recipe. First and last there must have been a thousand colonels who took an interest in the compounding of this elaborately spiced relish for making large quantities of one of the greatest staples of the whole round earth go a long way in the most agreeable fashion. We, of course, are mentioning rice.

Strangely enough, we should say that a true curry would be something to inspire men to wish for alcoholic beverages as an accompaniment, while the fact seems to be that the inevitable accompaniment of a curry, whether it was of chicken or lamb, beef or shrimp, or vegetables or fruits, has been tea.

The heighteners of the curry flavor have been in many cases the one of the elements in the curry sauce served plain like chutney and cardamon. Piquantly flavored dried fish called "Bombay duck" is another one of the little items. In fact, almost every conceivable spicy thing may be served in or with the curry.

The Romantic Spices.

If we hark back to the romantic ages of world discoveries, one of the most prominent and engaging interests are the Spice islands of the East Indies, which were the commercial goal of great adventure, and also the means for monarchial aggrandizement. The curry may be considered as a great survival or inheritance from that age, just as surely as the King Arthur legend is a great survival, conquering us in a sense even today, when we find its story presented on the walls of the most ornate of modern buildings. If China conquered the world with its tea, India, though in a much more partial sense, conquered the world with the curry.

There are wet and dry curries and Madras curries and Ceylon curries, representing almost every large city of India, and perhaps the only time we are justified in calling the curry we make a true Indian curry, is to follow what seems to have been a universal custom in making this dish, whether in Bombay or Mandalay. It is to compound the ingredients fresh every morning. It is difficult to keep the curry powder fresh enough even in the most tightly stoppered bottle. In India, we have reason to believe, each kind of meat has its own special seasonings, while no matter what meat we use, we just use the curry powder.

How to Eat a Curry.

There seems to be an extraordinary interest today—I judge this from the number of queries received—as to what fork or spoon or combination of flat silver should be used in eating a given dish of fruit or vegetable. An Englishman says that curry should always be eaten with a spoon and fork. But if the rice is cooked to perfection it can be eaten with a fork almost to the last grain, and if the curry has sufficient body it blends with the rice so that no spoon is needed, even to the last. These queries seem to suggest that people are more anxious as to what piece of silver to use than they are about how to handle it, or than they are about the savors and delicious tastes they are to get with it.

Plain buttered rice, if the rice is wonderfully well cooked, can gratify an educated taste for fine foods, no end. Sweet or unsalted butter, having the finest flavor in almost all cases, should be used, not only when the rice is served with it alone, but a little bit can be used to advantage over the rice, no matter what gravy or sauce is to be added. From this start of plain buttered rice we may work up edible ornaments for boiled rice, with the addition of seasonings and more seasonings until we come to the curry sauce, the most flavorsome of all the sauces made, or it may be all that, although we must grant it is unsafe to promise it will be.

Sweet and Sour Elements.

It is possible to find many people affirming that you can have no true curry without cocoanut. The sweetness there is in cocoanut meat or milk seems just sufficient to season meat in a peculiarly agreeable way, while it loses its own identity in the process. If it does not lose this it can get some disagreeable effects.

Lately, on a menu for a very expensive meal, there was in item called fruit curry, and almost any curry may have to advantage some fruit, preferably the sour apple although raisins may form a delicious part of the curry that is as agreeable as any made. In India it is the tamarind with its delicious type of sourness that is used for the curry, and in the real Indian chutneys and even in some made on the islands of the Pacific we find tamarind and also the green mango has been used. We can tell the mango by the fiber.

American adaptations of curries have included sour apple and lemon juice. Only the least bit of lemon juice is ever justifiable, because with much we may take away a deliciously dainty quality that it is desirable to secure.

Colors of Curry Sauces.

In the part of the world which knows curry best—we are referring to London, which has more Indian curries probably than India, herself—either a muddy curry gravy or a sickening yellow curry sauce are seen, and they are far from ideal among the thousand and one effects that can be secured. To my mind, a curry with a fruity taste and a bright brown glaze is the most elegant of the preparations, when draped over a brilliantly white boiled rice, to tempt the appetite on a hot day, yet just as good on a cool day. There are also red curries, and a bright and glassy look is ideal for them, also.

For the cup of a thick saucelike preparation, enough to season four good servings of boiled rice, cut one-fourth of a pound of pork into the thinnest slices, or dice the pork. Sauté this meat gently in butter, turning it so that it will get well browned on all sides. Burning of any ingredient in a curry ruins it by taking away all its brightness and clean-cutness, and we are here emphasizing that this sauce must have almost a mirrorlike surface.

Push the pork to one side and then in the fat left free stew until soft one large onion cut fine, add one teaspoon of salt, one heaping tablespoon of mango chutney—that made in Hawaii is easy to find in our own groceries—and one cup of cold water. Stir these together until they simmer and then let simmer gently for one hour.

A little fresh ginger, a few raisins or even some grapefruit pulp may be added to this, and if it does not seem hot enough to taste, a little curry powder may be added. Arrange the boiled rice in eclair shaped portions and serve this curry sauce across the middle of it the narrow way, like a saddle. This sauce may be extended, but if it loses its glaze the extending has not been a success, which shows that it is not an easy thing to do.

Another Pork Curry.

Gently stew an onion cut fine in two tablespoons of butter, then cook gently with it, until a nice brown, one pound of pork or pork cut in the thinnest possible slices and these cut across to make small squares. It should be cooked so carefully as not to dry up, which cooking may be accomplished by starting with pan rather hot, then lessening the fire.

Stir into the fat or liquid in the pan, two tablespoons of browned flour mixed with a teaspoon of curry powder and add a cup of meat stock or use water. Stir and cook till smooth, add twelve cloves and eight shelled cardamoms tied in a cloth, and simmer for one hour. A clove of chopped garlic cooked with the onion adds character and will not be noticed by those squeamish about eating this invaluable seasoner.

Chicken Curry.

One pound of cooked chicken cut in small pieces, one onion, two tablespoons of butter, one sour apple, one-fourth cup of ground fresh cocoanut, five cardamom seeds, six cloves, one teaspoon curry powder, one-half teaspoon salt, a few grains of red pepper, two tablespoons of browned flour, one cup of water or chicken stock. Cook the chicken, onion and apple gently in the butter about twenty minutes, or long enough to brown the chicken carefully. Mix the curry powder with the flour, and salt, and stir into the pan; then add the liquid and stir constantly until it boils and is smooth.

Shell the cardamoms, tie them with the cloves in a bit of newly scalded cheesecloth, and add these to the mixture with the cocoanut, which must be stirred in. Simmer for an hour or longer, take out the little cheesecloth fagot, and serve with boiled rice and condiments. This is really better if made the day before it is to be used, then gently and thoroughly heated up. Therefore, it is a good thing for picnic or camp use or for porch cookery.

A Veal Curry.

For a veal curry, to serve three or four persons, take one-half pound, or a little more veal—a good slice, not thick—three onions sliced, two tablespoons of flour, one teaspoon of the curry powder given above, or less, if you like the lightest of seasonings—one-half teaspoon will do—one and one-half cups of cocoanut milk, one tablespoon of marmalade, two tablespoons of raisins, one tablespoon of chopped celery leaves, one-half tablespoon of salt, and the lemon juice if you want it, also a bit of cardamom, etc., and some salt pork for the cooking medium if you want to use it, but some other highly palatable fat can be used.

One ounce of salt pork will, when cut in dice, yield two tablespoons of fat which is enough to cook the onions in gently, and the diced pork cooked till crisp can be in with the whole and no one will ever think of it as pork, when it gets all the seasonings, but only as one of the disappearing elements that help to make a perfect whole.

BEAUTY ANSWERS by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat-chested or flat-footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

R. S.: TO SOFTEN CALLOUSES, soak the feet in hot water for half an hour. Rub the callouses with a piece of pumice stone to take off the hard skin. During the day keep cold cream or vaseline on the spot to keep it soft.

A. J. K.: I HAVE SPLENDID EXercises for reducing the legs and ankles. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for them. Start on this one: Stand erect, hands on hips, right knee raised. Swing the leg in a circle fairly quickly, keeping the toe pointed downward. Swing the leg from the knee only. Repeat with the left leg.

MRS. T. M.: YES, THE TEETH should be brushed after eating candy, also after eating sugar, crackers, cake, pastries or bread. Fruit acids such as grape juice, orange juice and apple, are cleansing to the mouth and gums. Send a stamped addressed envelope for my booklet, "Teeth and Mouth Hygiene."

SADIE AND ROSE: HERE ARE the caloric values of some of the fruits: One average apple, 75 calories; average size banana, 127 calories; one-half cantaloupe, 99 calories; one-half large grapefruit, with sugar, 130 calories; average size orange, 100 calories; average size peach, 50 calories; average size pear, 90 calories.

J. C. L.: WHITEHEADS ARE IMprisoned blackheads, protected from the surface dirt. Soften the skin with hot towels, then open each blemish with a sterilized needle and press out the contents. Daub on peroxide and gently massage with cold cream.

MISS C. H.: VERY OFTEN THE eating of too much meat causes headaches and dopiness. Eat more vegetables and fruits, and drink from six to eight glasses of water daily. If possible, take a three or four mile walk every day. It gives you the fresh air and exercise at the same time.

MRS. F. L. J.: DAILY EXERCISE is essential to the maintenance of good digestion and the proper circulation of the blood. All forms of exercise which produce trunk bending and twisting, including walking, are invaluable in the cure and prevention of constipation. Exercises may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

MISS A. B.: BLEACHING SUPERfluous hair is not harmful and will make it less noticeable. Peroxide may be used for this purpose. It keeps the hair light and at the same time dry, and tends to diminish its growth. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for my leaflet on "Superfluous Hair."

E. W.: CLEANLINESS IS THE most important feature in the care of perspiring feet. Not only must special care be given the feet but to the stockings and shoes, as well. Stockings should be changed every day. After washing the feet apply freely of the following solution: Alcohol, one pint; salicylic acid, two drams. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for other suggestions.

ANNA W.: PEROXIDE OF HYdrogen will bleach the hair on your arms and legs. A stronger formula is composed of a couple of drops of ammonia added to a tablespoonful of peroxide. Depilatories may be used on the arms and legs.

MRS. V. McG.: IF IT IS NECESsary to put the hands into strong soapy water, apply plenty of grease afterwards. Cold cream or a hand lotion may be used. Send a stamped addressed envelope for my booklet on the hands.

M. G. R.: YES, SWIMMING IS A healthful exercise. It is excellent for developing the bust. Keep it up—and soon you'll be able to enjoy the outdoor air with it. Swimming in a pool is recommended, if the pool is kept very clean.

M. R.: A GENERAL RUN DOWN condition will cause the hair to fall out. Build up by eating plenty of nourishing foods, drinking milk daily and spending some time each day in the open air to improve the condition of your blood, as the hair gets its substance from the blood. Send a stamped addressed envelope for my booklet on the hair.

P. G.: WHITEHEADS ARE SMALL cheesy deposits usually found just under the surface of the horny skin and occur frequently on the upper part of the cheeks around the eyes. Soften the skin with hot towels, then open each blemish with a sterilized needle and press out the contents. Daub on peroxide and gently pat with a good cold cream.

J. C.: TRY THE FOLLOWING EXercises for weak arches: Stand and try to clutch the carpet with the toes by turning them under as far as possible. Then relax. Next, stand with toes together, heels three or four inches apart, then raise the feet, with toes together, keeping the heels on the floor. Repeat each exercise ten to thirty times. Exercises should be done in the stocking feet.

MRS. V. N.: WARTS ARE DUE TO an infection of the skin. The following lotion is recommended for warts on the hands. One dram salicylic acid, one ounce flexible collodion. Mix well. Apply with a tiny camel's hair brush for four nights, then soak in hot water and remove as much of the horny substance as possible. Repeat until the wart disappears.

again. The shadows about the house engulfed him.

Beneath the window, a dark, motionless shape, he listened a long time. No sound came from within; he heard only the rustle of the palms and the song of the distant surf. He reached toward the window—the knife in his hand glittered evilly.

THE curtain drew aside with no more than the faintest whisper to tell of its movement. Now the room lay before him, a cave of blackness into which he peered with narrowed eyes. He was not afraid—the smoke of the poppy assured that. But he was cautious with a caution born in him from generations of man killers, patient with their patience, stealthy as a cat. He came of a people who killed treacherously, from behind; their instincts surged in him tonight.

He gripped the wood, drew himself up without a sound. Then it was that from behind two hands took him by the elbows, wrenched him back. Lithe and strong, he struggled in a silent fury, trying to use his knife; but the man who held him had the strength of no other man Tembi had ever known. The hand with the knife was twisted up and back until the curved steel studded to the ground. A heave and Tembi lay flat in the grass, staring up into the face of the man he was to have killed.

"Quiet!" Slade said softly. He had no wish to frighten the girl, or to arouse Marsh to knowledge of what was afoot. "A sound, and you die!"

Tembi, frightened now, lay still.

"Up," Slade said, and pulled him to his feet. "Come; and if you try to run——" He twisted a little the brown wrist he held, and Tembi stiffened in sudden agony.

They went across the open space, skirting the house, entered the shadow of the trees, went downhill toward the village and the murmurous sea. They went in silence but for the soft pad of their feet, and as they went Slade peered about him in the darkness; for he was a man who never made the mistake of underestimating his adversary, and Tembi's knife was not the only steel on Alaoi.

The trees opened out before them, and they saw the dark sea, and the masts of the schooner tall against the sky. The logs of the jetty boomed hollow beneath their feet.

They came to the gangway, and the Kanaka squatted against the rails rose silently.

"Get Tom and Jerry," Slade said, and the brown man vanished, to reappear with two others.

Slade brought Tembi aboard. "Hold this man," he said, and was instantly obeyed. "Bring him below, and lock him up. See that he does not escape. Presently Li Cheen will come to you. Do as he says, for he speaks with my mouth."

He left them there, and went ashore, along the beach towards the village. Without exception the huts were in darkness; yet he knew he was watched as he strode the length of the twisting street, and his fingers closed about the butt of the revolver in his pocket.

LI CHEEN, fully dressed, opened the door to his knock. Often before Slade had noticed that Li Cheen seemed never to sleep. With a movement of his head he refused the Celestial's invitation to enter.

"Go to the schooner," he said shortly. "Aboard her you'll find a man called Tembi, one of Marsh's laborers. He has been taking opium. Stay aboard as long as necessary, and make him talk."

Li Cheen smiled. "He will talk."

"No torture," Slade said warningly. "Bring a pipeful of opium with you, and bribe him with it, and he'll talk soon enough when he begins to feel the need of it."

"There are quicker ways."

"No!" Slade said roughly. "The man is only a tool of Bland's. At the best, I don't imagine he knows much. But learn what he knows."

"It is done," said the yellow man.

"And keep him out of sight of the natives here—don't let them know where he is. I want Bland to think he's disappeared."

"It is done," said the yellow man again.

Back through the trees Slade went, towards the house. He was preoccupied, thoughtful. If Bland were behind this, he was a man more dangerous than appearances would make him seem. The law had not yet come in full force to the islands—none knew that better than Slade; but a white man could not be killed without some trouble following. Bland, it seemed, was ready to take risks. Slade smiled. He had taken risks himself.

He reached the house without incident, entered noiselessly. It had been easy to trick Tembi by slipping out by the front and circling around through the trees.

"Who's there?"

It was Marsh, standing in the door of his room, gun in hand.

"All right, Jim, all right," Slade said soothingly. "I was walking around a bit. I just can't sleep tonight."

Marsh lowered the gun. "Is there something going on? Are you keeping something from me, Slade?"

Slade laughed. "What makes you think that?"

"When a man's blind, he's more sensitive to atmosphere voices. But I suppose I'm wrong." He turned back into his room. "Sorry you can't sleep."

"Don't worry about me."

Harding came to Alaoi in the Cloud the following day. Slade met him at the jetty, shook hands. Harding was a bluff, genial man, gray headed, slow of speech. His blue eyes looked honestly at the world.

"It's good to see you again, Slade." He jerked a thumb in the direction of Marsh's plantation. "Things aren't so well up there, eh?"

"No; that's what brought me here."

"Been here long?"

"Two days. Tell me, Harding, what do you think of Bland?"

Harding was cautious. "I don't know what to think of him—never had much to do with him, personally. But he seems square enough."

"Yes, he seems square enough."

"You think he's double crossing Marsh?"

"I don't know what to think. I'm in deep waters, just at the moment. How's trade?"

"Not so good," Harding said. "Has Marsh a cargo for me?"

"Yes. You'll take it aboard today?"

Harding nodded. "The market's bad; but the prospects are it's going to be worse. No use wasting time."

SLADE superintended the loading of the copra while Harding went up to the house. His voice and his eyes were cold, and the natives worked as they had seldom worked before. The last sack was safely in the hold by midafternoon.

"Good work!" Harding said. "I'd like to stay a day or two; but business is business." He offered his hand. "See you again, maybe?"

"Maybe," Slade said; but there was doubt in his smile.

He watched the schooner move out from the jetty. The wind was light, and she went with but the faintest of ripples about her bow. He saw her go with a faint yearning. The high seas held adventure. He shrugged, turned away. His youth was past, the old free days were gone. Somewhere out in the blue distances whence the sun rose, the little island he had made his own, held peace.

Dusk and the close following darkness found the Cloud but a few short miles from Alaoi. A Kanaka at the helm, she slid across a tranquil sea shadow wreathed and dark, the island a vague bulk astern.

Harding came aft. "Watch out for Misery Reef, Pat."

The Kanaka flashed white teeth in a grin.

Harding went below. The man at the wheel had been with him for years, and knew too well for mistake the reef that stretched across the western end of Alaoi.

The man at the wheel hummed softly a little song of his people, and thought of the slim brown maid who was to be his wife. He thought of her as a knife slid between his ribs and his life went out in a little sigh. Strong arms caught his limp body, lowered it to the deck.

The schooner went on across the lazy swells. Little by little she changed direction, until the reef lay dead ahead. The men of the watch noticed nothing, for the voice of the reef was low tonight.

She struck, sheered off, struck again. A spar crashed to the deck, bringing with it a tangled mass of rigging. She listed, swung drunkenly, and the coral grated against her sides.

Harding came shouting from below, ran aft. The wheel was deserted.

"Pat! Where in hell?" He saw the huddled figure, stooped, saw the pool of blood broken into little streams by the ship's quick lurch. "My God!"

The crew crowded about in startled silence. He turned to them. "Get in sail, quick! Bos, run below and see if she's making water. Hustle!"

The Cloud was making water, but slowly. Harding blessed his luck, got the boats out, tried to tow her off. She would not stir.

"Get the cargo overboard."

Himself he helped to heave the sacks into the sea, until sweat ran into his eyes and his breath came in great gasps. At all costs the ship must be saved.

"That's enough—we'll try her at that."

THE schooner stirred, moved, slid off into deep water. Sail was spread, her bow pointed toward the Bland. But she moved heavily, sluggishly, because of the water in her.

"Man the pumps, there, some of you!"

The creak of the pumps went loud across the quiet sea. Still the water gained, though more slowly now.

"We'll make it!" Harding muttered. "We'll make it!"

It was as the schooner neared the island that Harding's keen eyes picked out a dark speck upon the water. He watched it, saw that it moved, knew it for the head of a swimmer.

"Bos, get out a boat and bring that man in."

He was obeyed, though the swimmer struggled and offered some resistance. Brought aboard, he stood before Harding, a lithe brown man naked as the day he was born, a knife thrust through the string about his middle, each arm held none too gently by one of the crew.

"Get him below," Harding said with a jerk of his head. "I'll want him when we come ashore. He's the man who killed Pat."

The native said something in his own tongue, and spat.

In another hour, the schooner grounded gently on a sandy beach. Harding breathed his relief, relinquished the wheel, saw the port and starboard anchors out. The Cloud was safe now unless a gale blew up; and he thought that unlikely at this season of the year.

"Now bring along that man, two of you. Bos, keep your eyes open until I come back."

IT was a little after midnight when Harding came to Marsh's house. He knocked, heard a stir of movement from within, and knocked again. Slade opened the door. At sight of Harding he slipped the revolver into his pocket.

"Trouble?" he said. "Better come in."

He brought them in, lit a lamp, pulled curtains across the windows. Marsh had joined them now, stared from one to another with his sightless eyes.

Briefly, Harding told them what had happened.

Slade turned to the native. "This is the man?" he said, his gray eyes merciless.

Harding nodded.

Slade fell into the native tongue. "Now you will talk," he said, "or we will stake you out and make you wish you had never been born."

"That is talk," said the man insolently.

"Shut the door," said Slade, and Harding complied. "Now spread him out on the floor. Hold one of his arms, Jim. That's the ticket."

The native struggled; but he had a strong man holding each arm and each leg, and his struggles were futile. Fear came into his eyes as Slade stooped over him.

"Lord, what will you do?"

"I will light a little fire on your stomach," Slade said, "and it will burn until you talk or until you die, as you choose." He tore into small fragments the sheet of paper he had taken from the table, looking up at Marsh. "Where can I find some wood?"

"And if I talk?" said the native, gray lipped.

"Talk, and you go free."

"Lord, I will talk."

"Speak only the truth," Slade said, "for my ears are keen for a lie, and the fire straightens a man's tongue."

The native talked. Bland had told him to do this thing, and had promised him a great reward. It had been easy. He had hidden away aboard the schooner, and when darkness came had stolen on deck and used his knife. "He made no sound," the brown man said proudly. "Then I steered the ship on the reef, as I had been told to do, and swam."

Slade came to his feet. "Keep him until morning," he said, "then let him go. The relatives of the dead man will get him soon enough for justice."

"What are you going to do?" The question came from Marsh.

"I'm going to drop in on Bland."

"Alone?"

"Yes. You stay here and mind Fay."

"Good God!" Marsh said bitterly. "Here I am practically beggared by this man, and I can't lift a finger! Take me with you, Slade."

"No," Slade said firmly. "I can manage this alone, Jim." He turned to Harding. "You'll stay here until I come back?"

"Unless you want help, yes."

"I want no help." He took the revolver from his pocket, slipped it into his belt. In the doorway he turned, smiled back at them. "See you later."

He was gone.

IT was very dark as Slade made his way towards the Bland plantation, so dark that here and there he slowed, feeling his path between the trees. But his sense of direction led him straight, and presently he saw the pale gleam of an open space ahead and glimpsed the dark bulk of the house.

He made no secret of his coming, but went to the door, and knocked. When silence answered him, he knocked again. Then he heard a door open, and steps in the hall.

"Who's there?" The voice was Bland's.

"Slade."

"What the hell do you want?"

"I want to talk to you."

"Couldn't you wait till morning?"

"I'd prefer to get it over right away."

Grumbling, Bland opened the door. "This is the hell of an hour to make a social call."

"Social call be damned," said Slade. "You know why I'm here." He shoved past the big man, into the hall.

"Taking liberties, aren't you?" Bland said, a threat in his voice.

"You'll have reason to say that when I've finished with you."

Bland struck a match, lit a lamp, carried it into one of the rooms off the hall. He was dressed in trousers and shirt, as if he had just risen from bed. "Well, what's it all about?"

"Harding's schooner went aground on Misery Reef tonight."

"What's that go to do with me?"

"Come into the open, Bland," Slade said softly. "You've hidden behind the niggers long enough. You gave them opium to steal away their brains, then told them to do what you were afraid to do yourself. You told them not to work, because Marsh was blind, and couldn't make them work. You told one of them to kill me, and when he failed you sent Tembi to make a clean job of it. How you turned the traders against Marsh I don't know; but you managed it. Then you sent a man aboard the Cloud to run her on Misery Reef, knowing Marsh had a half interest in her, and that her holds were filled with his copra. If that succeeded, you knew he'd have to clear out after selling the place to you. You wanted the place, and you wanted it cheap, and you didn't much mind how you got it. The fact that a man was killed here or there didn't worry you at all.

"But you went too far, and I'm taking a hand in the game. I've broken bigger men than you, Bland. I backed this place from the bush because I owed it to Marsh. I put into it most of the money I had in the world. Do you think I'm going to watch you take it from him, and stand by? Not damn likely! I'll see you in hell first!"

"That's big talk," Bland said easily.

"It's more than talk. Bland, there's no room for you and Marsh on Alaoi!"

"Then he'll have to go," Bland said. "I'm staying."

"No. You're going!"

"That's news to me."

Slade stepped back from him. "You go, or you stay—planted somewhere out among the trees. Take your choice."

Their eyes met, and in Slade's Bland read an inflexible deadliness of purpose, a purpose that could not be mistaken.

"You'll kill me?" he said slowly.

"I will."

THE door opened to break the pregnant silence, and Gibbons entered. He had a revolver in his belt, his thumb hooked close to the butt. Slade knew he had been listening.

"What's all this talk about killing?" he said, his green eyes on Slade. "I'd like to take a hand in it."

An instant they stood, tensed, rigid, masks off, then Gibbons drew.

Slade shot him twice, the two reports blending together almost as one. He fell slackly, the gun still in his hand. Bland leaped forward, swept the lamp to the floor.

The windows were curtained, and the room was very dark. Slade shrank back against the wall silent as a cat, waiting, waiting. No sound of movement came from Bland. He was somewhere over there in the darkness, waiting, too. Was he armed? Slade did not know; but he was taking no chances.

How long they stood there Slade could not guess. Not long, he thought; certainly not so long as it seemed. They heard a step outside, hesitant, slow. The door opened, and they saw, darkly, vague against the shadows of the hall, a man's figure.

"Slade?" It was Marsh's voice.

Bland fired once, and Marsh dropped inside the door, kicking it shut. Then he laughed, and Bland fired again.

"You can't kill me," Marsh said mockingly, and Bland pulled the trigger the third time. "It's dark and you can't see."

There was silence in the room, heavy now with the smell of burned powder.

"I'm coming to you, Bland," Marsh said softly. His voice might have come from any corner.

The minutes dragged on. Slade heard a gasp, a little chuckle, the sound of struggling.

Then Bland said, "Ahhhh!" throatily, just as the match spluttered into flame in Slade's hands.

Bland was dead. While his throat was visible, there could be no doubt of that. "And Marsh——"

"He got me once, through the shoulder," Marsh said. "It's nothing. In the dark he had no advantage over me. You're not hurt, Slade?"

"No," Slade said. "Let me look at your shoulder." He tore the blood sodden shirt. "That's only a scratch. Why did you come?"

Marsh laughed shakily. "Could I have called myself a man if I'd stayed behind? I slipped out, and found my way here—I was here once before, with Fay. But she'll be anxious. We'd better be getting back."

"Yes," Slade said. "We'd better be getting back."

He was thinking of the little island where the seas creamed on the reef, and the gulls yelled all day.

"Yes," he said again. "We'd better be getting back."

YOU AND YOUR CHILDREN

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

High School and College Education Worth More in the End Than Work in the Fields.

WHEAT is not the only thing that is going to be threshed out or thrashed out on the farms all over our country this season. There is a question that is being thrashed out, too. It always has been so—and always will be I suppose. It is the question of whether the children, when they reach a certain age shall continue their schooling.

Especially on smaller farms, where land is to be worked, every pair of strong young hands counts. School stops, summer comes with its constant labor, and the boy who has been at school all winter turns to and does his share like a man. Then comes up the questions—how can he be spared in the fall? Why does he need more education? "I didn't have it and I got along"; won't he be spoiled for good hard work if he gets it, etc.? Back and forth, for and against, families argue this question. There's always the immediate return that a boy's or girl's work means to the family exchequer as against the deferred benefit that their further schooling will mean to them.

Scarcely Realize Struggle.

People in cities, or those whose lives are not tied up with this age long fight of wresting a living from the soil, can scarcely realize the struggle that goes on over this question, and the sacrifice it often involves. Their children just naturally go on going to school until they have either prepared themselves by doing so to earn a living, or as long as their parents can possibly afford it. Country living has problems all its own.

The following letter is purposely unsigned by the writer and comes from a distant part of the country. It requests an answer and this is the only way I can give it. Here is this interesting letter describing vividly what are the usual conditions where this question is being fought out:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans:

"Of course I realize what a terrible breach of etiquette I am making by writing in pencil but we never seem to have anything that any decent family has.

"We are farmers and have the perpetual struggle to make ends meet. We do vegetable gardening and I make butter and cottage cheese to sell. Sometimes in the hot summer I heard some people who want to escape the city heat. Once I had fifteen boarders. They are very nice and don't want a lot of fixings. They seem to like home made bread, cookies, pies, and cakes. I often sell bread, doughnuts etc. to people when they come for eggs and butter.

"Well, now, to get down to business. I am thirty-three years old and the mother of thirteen children. I am expecting another.

"Now, I know you will say the same as I do. Don't you believe a child should have all the educational advantages possible?

"My eldest, a boy, is fifteen. He is in high school. He has been working and supporting himself. He lives with my people in town and they won't take board or room-rent from him. He buys them little presents from time to time to make up this.

"Well, my husband says the boy has to quit school and come and work on the farm. I say no. My husband says that it is too much expense, which isn't true as the boy won't take a cent from us. He says, 'Gee, mother, I couldn't think of taking money from anyone, let alone you, where you need every cent and more so.' But my husband says higher education ruins a person's ability to settle down to work and puts crazy notions in children's heads. The boy wants to be a chemist, a specialist, and I want him to succeed in that ambition.

Children Compensate.

"Oh, how I want my children to be worth while and something more than just common mortals. I aspired to a degree in languages. I just finished high school, my parents had no money, I got in an accident and was unable to go on. Then I got married. I don't regret it. My children compensate for everything. Bob [these are not the real names of course] wants to be a civil engineer. He has worked around here a great deal and can do as much as his father with a hoe of corn or a patch of cabbage.

"Mary wants to be a teacher but that isn't settled because she isn't positive. Either a teacher or an artist. She really can draw beautifully and I am willing to sacrifice anything for the development of any talent God saw fit to give my children.

"You believe in them having a college and university degree, don't you? I have kept up on all subjects the best possible these past years so that the gap that there is sure to be won't be so big when my children fulfil their ambitions.

"I will close. Some day I will write and tell if I succeed in developing my children the way I should. The baby is crying, I shall have to stop. He is quite sick and feels pretty bad."

An Ardent Reader.

Mother Needs Reinforcement.

What ambition for her children's future such a letter shows! How often we read in the lives of great men of such courageous and far-sighted mothers. Many other women who are struggling against odds have such aspirations as these for their children—aspirations which often spring—phoenix-like—from the ashes of their own unfulfilled desires.

This mother wants reinforcement for her own ideas regarding the children's education. Should the boy be allowed to go back to high school and then on to college and university? Should each child be permitted to go ahead with his or her studies, working toward a goal which several of them already envisioned?

Certainly they should. And if each child can do it as the first boy is doing it, without causing any expense to the parents, even more decidedly so.

There might be conditions under which it would be impossible for a boy living on a farm to go on with his schooling, if illness or death entered in. There might be conditions under which it would be unwise—if, for instance, he hated school and would not study, or if he was not normal mentally but could work capably with his hands, as is often the case.

But where children are fired with ambition as these children are it would be wrong to stand in their way. And it often happens that children placed as these are have an actual hunger for education. They value it much more highly than many to whom it comes easily—or who have it thrust upon them. Parents have not the right to deny it to them. They may need them, it might lighten home burdens if the children still in their teens worked in the house and on the farm instead of going on with their education; but there is always their future to be considered, and it cannot be denied that education is an asset in every way. Children with this ambition may make much of themselves and lead a rich, fulfilled life if they can only be allowed to continue working toward it.

As far as being spoiled for hard work is concerned—carving out your own education is good hard work. This would never spoil a boy for hard work—even hard physical work. Playing his way through school and college at some one's expense might—but not working his way through. I know young men working their way through college who welcome a summer of hard muscular labor.

Every One Is Not Fitted.

Farming is a great, fine occupation. It is one of the classic labors of life. But every one is not fitted for it, either on a large scale or a small. To some the arts appeal, others live in a world of ideas, for others there are the various professions, for others, business and the life of cities. Nothing is more stultifying than to try to fit the square peg into a round hole, or vice versa. Though many young men and women leave farms, to study and return to them again drawn by an innate love of the soil, those whose interests are of another kind should be allowed every educational advantage to develop them. Education—however obtained—opens up the world of things and ideas, and so opens up many avenues of mental and spiritual growth—and often along with these opens up the way to what the world calls success.

COMING into their own again as decorative and utilitarian units are screens of varied styles. Practically every well furnished home, large or small, boasts at least one screen. The different types and manifold purposes to which they may be readily adapted recommend them to specially favorable consideration.

One of the original reasons for the use of screens, and one which is still most valuable, is their effectiveness for shutting off an elusive and persistent draft. In a bedroom or behind a comfortable chair placed near a doorway, they are often indispensable for this end, as they do not interfere with the free circulation of air, even though they prevent a direct current where it is not wanted.

Screens fill many other needs as well. Set before a door leading from dining room to kitchen, they cut off all unnecessary glimpses into the working part of the house. If the dining room opens directly into an entrance hall or living room by means of a large open doorway, a screen placed there affords desirable privacy without detracting from the sense of spaciousness that a large opening gives.

In apartments and small houses where all sorts of useful but decidedly undecorative objects have to be stowed away wherever space is available, screens are a godsend. In a one room apartment in New York there is a tiny but complete kitchenette built right into one corner of the room. A decorative three-fold screen so successfully hides the necessary units there that no one who had not been initiated into the secrets of the apartment would ever dream of their existence!

For hiding ugly radiators or registers, those eye-sores which are usually placed in the most conspicuous and ill-advised places, decorative screens are priceless.

Another of the purely useful reasons for employing screens is in using them to enclose a fireplace grouping or in placing them in a corner as a background for a selection of small pieces of furniture. It is often surprising to see what a transforming effect such a little touch will have in bringing a plain uninteresting corner out of oblivion into life.

When it comes to the use of screens merely as decorative units, there is a wide field of possibilities. To give the necessary touch of color, or note of sharp contrast to a room which might otherwise appear flat and boresome, screens of brilliant tone and design may be used successfully. Individual cases suggest special treatments of their own, but there are a number of ways in which screens may be almost universally employed.

Where a large blank space demands some striking, vital note a screen of pictorial subject, such as a Japanese landscape, or one of the modernist conceptions, may be used to advantage. The screen should be fastened flat against the offending blank wall, to add interest to the entire room. Harmony with surroundings must be carefully considered in the subject of such a screen. Whether they serve some practical purpose or whether they are frankly decorative in aim, or even if both of these qualities are combined, the placement of screens must be logical always.

As a rule, those used today are of three or four folds, about five feet six inches to six feet in height, each fold being not more than twenty-one inches wide. The size of the screen may vary, depending on the size of the room and the use for which it is intended.

In her kitchenette apartment one clever young woman has used the screen arrangement shown in figure 1 today. The kitchenette and dining alcove are divided only by a pair of cabinets, with an opening between. In order that her guests need not contemplate the uninteresting lines of stove, sink and refrigerator while dining, she has made a simple and decorative screen to place before the opening. This screen is only four and a half feet in height—high enough to prevent the seated guests from seeing over the top into the kitchenette, but low enough to allow the maidless hostess to carry on a conversation without being completely hidden from view while changing courses. The frame of the screen is painted jade green and the composition board panels are covered with silver paper, decorated with a simple branch and leaf design in black, with the silver faintly showing through.

The making of screens at home is an easy and fascinating pastime. Frames may be made by any carpenter, either professional or amateur, but it is almost as economical, and far less troubles, to buy a ready-made, uncovered frame, with countersunk hinges. Shops specializing in unpainted furniture usually carry a variety of screen frames. One of the most important points to consider in the construction of the frame is that it be made of thoroughly dried lumber, so that it will not warp. The tops may be straight or cut into any desired shape.

For a base to work on, the frame may be covered with any one of the composition boards manufactured today, or with unbleached muslin, stretched tight and tacked on. The latter method is lighter, but not as durable as the former.

As for outside covering, it may be made of almost anything that has any qualities decorative or merely practical to commend it. The materials most effectively used are brocades and damasks, in formal rooms; leather, painted, plain or gilded; toile de Jouy, chintz and cretonne and decorative wall paper. Many wall papers are appropriate and charming for use in this capacity.

To make a wall paper screen [which is one of the easiest and most effective kinds], after the frame and base are complete, the desired paper should be laid on the screen in order to test it for the placing of the design. When the placement is properly measured, the strip should be pasted on with any good wall paper paste. In pasting, brush the paper from the center to the sides, to assure smoothness. As a finish, edges may be trimmed with a wall paper border, or may be bound with leather or flat braid.

After the paper has dried thoroughly, it should be given a finishing coat of shellac, for protection as well as for effect. If the coloring and pattern appear to be too obtrusive, they can be mellowed or antiqued by a coat of varnish, and one or two coats of orange or white shellac. If toile de Jouy, cretonne or chintz is used, the process of antiquing consists of five or six thin coats of shellac. Each coat, of course, must be quite dry before the next is applied.

In Figures 2, 3, and 4 are shown a variety of screens which could easily be made at home. The one in Figure 2 is effective for use in a bedroom with figured draperies. The screen is first covered with plain turquoise blue paper. Then to relieve the plainness, but not too forcefully, to harmonize with the figured draperies, there is a decorative wall paper border used all around the edges.

In Figure 3 the framework of the screen is painted red and the panels are filled with a parchment colored paper with fine cross lines in red. The center top of each panel is decorated with a colorful hunting print, outlined by a narrow band of red. This would be effective for use in a library or man's study.

A very modern feeling is achieved by having each of the three panels cut in a different height, like steps, as shown in Figure 4. This screen is simply covered with a decorative moderne cretonne on a black ground and would be lovely in the corner of a sun room with stick reed furniture.

Best Parties

In a Gypsy Camp.

One of the most novel parties I ever attended was a total surprise to its guests, who had been invited to a friend's house for a quiet evening. Suddenly we heard the stamping of clumsy boots on the porch and undistinguishable cries. The appearance of a gypsy "king" in the doorway was slightly worse than we expected, however. His hands held two revolvers and his yellow sash supported a shining dagger.

One of the girls ran for another door, but her escape was blocked by the appearance of another gypsy of similar character, who proceeded to bind her eyes, arms and legs. We then observed that we were completely surrounded by the rough gang. They bound us and we were marched out the door with pistols against our ribs. We were pushed into an antiquated auto and whirled around so many corners that we were glad to be let out.

The scene that met our eyes was that of a gypsy camp. We were unbound by some of the female members of the tribe and introduced to Carmaleta, the mind reader, whose curious tricks mystified us to a superlative degree. After being let in on gypsy secrets, taking part in a gypsy serenade, having our palms read, and other gypsy stunts similar to those mentioned, we were given buns and hot dogs of unknown origin.

While enjoying our lunch a mounted sheriff approached with the command to "move on." We were told to help break camp, after which we would be released.

So ended a most interesting party.

Animals.

The best party I remember was an animal party. Even the invitations had animals walking across the top.

We played a game where each kiddie imitated an animal. Whoever guessed right had the next turn. We also played "Pin the Tail on the Donkey," "Who Has Seen My Sheep?" "Goats in the Turnip Field," "Cat and Mouse," and many more about animals.

When the lucky winners got their prizes they were different kinds of animal toys.

You should have seen the cake. Instead of a birthday cake with candles there were animal crackers with colored icing walking around the top of the cake. It looked so cute.

We had candy animals, cookies in the shape of animals, and ice cream in animal molds.

A Flower Party.

The best party I ever attended was one given as a flower party. All the guests were to be dressed as flowers. The rooms were charmingly decorated to represent a garden. All the games were in some way connected with flowers and instead of place cards, miniature dolls garbed as flowers were used.

Altogether, it was the most amusing and best party I ever went to.

Pet Economies

Tell us about your pet economy or an odd economy of some one you know and we'll pay you $1 if we print your letter. Address Economy, Sunday Tribune.

Ruined Their Appetites.

When I was a small girl my sisters, cousins, and I used to go to visit my aunt in the country every once in a while. She was as stingy as they make them. About an hour before dinner was ready she would take the largest head of cabbage she could find, stick the butcher knife away down in it, insert a penny in the slot thus made, and then make us kids eat the cabbage until we got to the penny.

Of course, the one who got the penny kept it. Needless to say, when dinner was ready we weren't hungry after eating all that cabbage. Aunty had accomplished her purpose.

J. H. S.

Free Breakfasts.

My neighbor boasts of never having cooked a breakfast in five years and this is her pet economy. She lives in a ten flat apartment and is friendly with all the tenants.

One day she knocks at my door and invites herself in and laughingly asks if breakfast is ready. The next day she calls at another neighbor's, and so on, so she has breakfast every ten days or so at my place. But the limit was reached the other morning when she received unexpected company, and that morning she ushered in four instead of one. None of us has the nerve to shirk her, so she still continues her pet economy.

P. M.

Uses Burnt Matches.

I am not Scotch and I do not believe I am stingy. Nevertheless, my pet economy is a petty one. There is no patent lighter on my gas range and it is necessary to use matches to light a fire. I save all the extinguished matches in a clean sardine tin and whenever I must light a fresh burner when another is already burning, I use a dead match for the purpose, lighting it from the burner then in action.

I have scorched my fingers many times and I realize the process wastes plenty of time. Still I continue to do it.

Why? Psychologists please step forward.

A. A. V.

Afraid of Being Cheated.

I have a friend who is liberal in many ways. He plays billiards and cards, at which he bets heavily. During a party he will always be willing to get something to eat from a store. He treats his friends to drinks, sodas, or eats, but once when in a drug store he wanted to get two two cent stamps.

He didn't get them, however, as he said he would get gypped if he put a nickel in the stamp machine and only got four cents' worth of stamps back.

Many people are queer that way, for some reason or other.

R. A.

Saves Soot.

I do not buy fertilizer, but instead save the soot that collects in the furnace. Each week during the winter I spread this on the vegetable garden, flower beds, or lawn.

Soot makes the soil rich, fine, and easily worked, and also darkens it so that it absorbs the sun's rays more rapidly and produces rapid growth.

We have the earliest garden in the neighborhood, due, I believe, to this application of soot.

GOOD morning!

Thomas Meighan does a good deal more for "The Argyle Case" than "The Argyle Case" does for him. As the famous investigator who unravels the mystery of the slaying of old Mr. Argyle, the big, good looking Irishman has been considerably hampered by direction that calls upon him to do not only the improbable but the impossible. NO detective can see out of the back of his head—I don't care how good he is. [No, Sherlock Jr., there wasn't a mirror in front of him.] Nor does he set boxes of cigars loaded with TNT on radiators.

You movie critics will probably discover more discrepancies along these lines than this one did, for I always go to see a picture hoping to be pleased with it, whereas you—or many of you—pussyfoot into a theater armed with telescopes, measuring tapes, books on etiquette, etymology, criminology, architecture, ancient history, biology—otherwise, how did you know that the snake in "The Letter" was a cobra instead of a python?—and, pad in hand and pencil ready, crouch to spring on each unlucky error, pin it down squirming and torture it and its propagators at leisure. You're not only funny that way, you're uncanny that way.

Ready to Be Pleased.

Well, as I started to say, I went to see "The Argyle Case" entirely predisposed in its favor, feeling that NO picture could go FAR wrong boasting Thomas Meighan as its star and having a supporting cast all dressed up with H. B. Warner, Lila Lee and Gladys Brockwell. [The last, poor darling, is no more!] AND I enjoyed it comparatively well, for while one lack, from the start, I think, a pretty good hunch as to the correct solution of the problem that confronts Alexander Kayton et al., one isn't really sure who did the killing until the great Kayton comes right out and says tag to the murderer, who, seeing that all hope is fled, admits with a nonchalance he achieves without aid of a cigaret that he, indeed, is IT.

Mr. Meighan [looking yummier than ever, girls] comports himself in as businesslike and realistic fashion as he is permitted to. His histrionic flesh probably crept at crudities, but, gentleman and actor that he is, he goes smiling through all sequences to the best of his ability.

Charming Heroine.

Miss Lee is charming as the heroine, suspected, alas, of sending her benefactor to another world. H. B. Warner as attorney for and friend of herself and the late Mr. Argyle is—H. B. Warner—whom you will like and who has, unquestionably, one of the most delightful speaking voices on the screen. Mr. Meighan's, by the way, is mighty pleasing and all others in the piece register acceptably.

Gladys Brockwell did well with her role, and minor parts are as well played as they could be under the circumstances.

"The Argyle Case," adapted from the old stage thriller by Harriet Ford and Harvey O'Higgins, has been well enough staged and photographed; moves along fairly fast and gives you considerable to guess about.

I hope you will enjoy the picture. It's an all talker.

Sits aBOUTem.

IF, BY ANY CHANCE, you read my review on "Thunder," featuring Lon Chaney, you may remember that I didn't know what a "nut splitter" is. Supposing you are the same, I'll print some information on the subject just received from a correspondent who says she doesn't suppose I'd really give "three whoops in Omaha" to know what one is, but she'll enlighten me just the same. She incloses a clipping. I'd give at least five whoops—in Omaha, too—and here's the glad news: A "nut splitter" or "nut buster" is a workman who, on the job of repairing freight cars, with sledge hammer and chisel bar, breaks the nuts that "cling tenaciously on column and box bolts."

Is that clear to you?

CLIPPED from Photoplay:

"If for nothing else Carmel Myers' name will go down in history as one of the few picture gals who knows how to behave at her own wedding. If you had witnessed some of the three ring circuses that pass as weddings in Hollywood, you'd know how amazing it was:

"That she invited only her real friends (most film brides use the telephone book as their guest list).

"That, having been married once before, she wore crême instead of white (most divorcées use flowing veils).

"That her every move was dignified

Talking Child of Movies Is Getting to Be Some Boy

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—[Special.] The moon being right and everything else, including their dispositions, being wrong, movie critics hereabouts have been wasting good type deploring the creeping approach toward manhood of that lusty young fellow, the talkie. They have half heartedly been demanding that he cast aside his adolescence and walk and talk like a man. Certain of these Men of Vision have even gone so far as to request some one to do something about it.

Hearing and reading such bedotted plaints, your eastern observer became considerably nonplused, which is much worse than being slightly nonplused. He had been of the opinion that the talkie was striding along in seven league boots and was every inch a man or at least every other inch.

So, to alleviate this nonpluseed condition, your correspondent pointed his beard into the wind and set out for Astoria, Long Island, where Paramount makes talking pictures.

There he found that some one already had done something about putting long pants on Mr. and Mrs. Motion Picture's son, Talkie.

Russia to the Rescue.

Rouben Mamoulian, the young man from Russia, who stood Broadway on its left ear by his staging of "Porgy" and "Wings Over Europe" last season for the Theater Guild, has turned his attention to the camera and microphone, and something new has happened to talkie technique. He has just completed "Applause," with Helen Morgan in the leading rôle, and his first job as a director is going to make the Hollywood megaphone boys knock wood when the film hits Broadway.

Young Mr. Mamoulian was jabbering away on all ten fingers with a taxi driver when your delver after facts hove to at the studio.

"What's wrong?" he was asked.

"Did he try to short change you?"

"No, no," said Mr. Mamoulian, "he is a dear friend of mine who was a captain in the Russian army."

The ex-captain drove away in a cloud of dust and the young director consented to an interview.

Motion All the Time.

"The traveling camera," he explained, "is the basis of our experiment in filming 'Applause.' It is not a new departure in motion picture making, but cameramen tell me that at least 85 per cent of the scenes were photographed in motion. About 20 per cent of the total footage of a picture in motion has been the record in the past. Why, we even followed a scene all around the block and the actors were talking all the while. It was not easy."

Mr. Mamoulian stepped right in from the Theatre Guild and tackled the hardest scenes first. That was revolutionary in itself. From the beginning he did everything just a bit differently.

"With this freedom of motion," he said, "it is seldom necessary to cut from a long shot to a close-up. Instead, we move the camera forward or backward—as the action of the story dictates. Nor is it necessary to cut when a character goes from one room to another; we simply follow them with the camera. I am convinced this method will produce a smoother continuity of dramatic action and a greater degree of intimacy between the audience and the screen. The audience will not be conscious of the camera movement."

A Director's Opinion.

Mr. Mamoulian went somewhere to do something and the still somewhat nonplused correspondent went somewhere else to find Victor Schertzinger, the director and theme song writer lately come from Hollywood to make a few pictures in the east.

Mr. Schertzinger was found standing in a corner while a couple of painters were dolling up his office. He is a portly, jolly fellow, who looks like a director and wears the kind of a soft hat that directors are supposed to wear.

"Are the talkies growing up fast enough to suit you?" he was asked.

"Well, let's get out from under this fan and I'll tell you," he suggested. "I don't like fans," he confided, "they give me colds and pneumonia and things. The talkies are growing fast enough. They are growing so fast that when I am making a picture I always want to stop in the middle and start over to catch up with the innovations. We have more to work with than ever before, and every picture should be a little better than the last one.

"Next month I am going to direct Jeanne Eagels and Clive Brook in an all talking production of the 'Laughing Lady.' That is the play that Ethel Barrymore appeared in on Broadway several seasons ago. We hope to be able to show the public a trick or two in talkie technique that has not been done before."

Filming Sherlock Holmes.

Downstairs in the studio Basil Dean was directing "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" and the talkies were growing up with every click of the camera. Mr. Dean's greeting was:

"Walk light and when you hear three bells—don't walk."

Betty Lawford—the pretty girl in "Gentlemen of the Press," was aiding Phillips Holmes in putting a touch of romance into "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" when Clive Brook, who is old Sherlock himself, came off the set to say hello.

"Paramount must like you to rush you through two pictures without a halt," it was suggested.

"Possibly," admitted Mr. Brook, "but I probably will get a long rest later. Did you ever hear about Wiggins? No. Well, Wiggins is our joke town in England. When an actor begins popping off about his long runs or popularity there always is some one about to remark that the long run probably took place on the pier at Wiggins, and there isn't a pier in Wiggins."

Your delver laughed politely and wondered a tiny bit about English jokes.

Colored Shorts.

Over in Warner brothers Vitaphone studio in Brooklyn they are doing their bit toward educating young Mr. Talkie. This week they are specializing in colors. The first all-colored short subjects are ready for the cutting room.

George Arliss has been in town for a brief visit, hurrying on to London, where he will rest until December. The talkies have just about won him from the stage.

Operas Cover Wide Range of Foreign Nations

Eight Scores Offer Unique Opportunities.

By Edward Moore.

SINCE vacation time brings thoughts of many lands and languages other than our own, this is as good a time as any to consider the wide geographical distribution of opera. Somebody must have been looking over an operatic repertoire when he evolved the idea that art knows no boundaries. Certainly opera knows no locale.

The eight operas to be heard at Ravinia this week will be sung in three different languages, Italian, French, and Spanish. Their composers represent four different nations and they themselves are laid in six different countries. As for the artists who will sing in them, their list of birthplaces looks like a report of the immigration bureau.

"Lucia di Lammermoor," tonight's bill, was composed by the Italian, Gaetano Donizetti. Its story is based on "The Bride of Lammermoor," by the Scotch Sir Walter Scott. It will be sung by Florence Macbeth and Mario Chamlee, both Americans, Giuseppe Denise, Virgilio Lazzari, and Lodovico Oliviero, Italians, and Pholine Falco, Dutch, and conducted by Gennaro Papi, Italian.

"Manon Lescaut," in the Puccini setting, up for tomorrow night, is the Italian version of the French story by Abbé Prevost. Its scenes are set in France and Louisiana, its singers are international. Lucrezia Bori is Spanish, Giovanni Martinelli, Italian, Ina Bourskaya, Polish, José Mojica, Mexican, Desire Defrere, Belgian, Paolo Ananian, Armenian, and Giordano Paltrinieri and Louis D'Angelo, Italian.

International in Scope.

"Martha," on Tuesday night, is about the most international of all. Its story is laid in England in the time of Queen Anne, though the plot was originally French, being it its first form a pantomime named "Harriette, ou la Servante de Greenwiche," put together for the use of the French dancer, Adèle Dumilatre.

Friedrich von Flotow, its composer, was of German birth, though having pursued his musical studies and spent part of his life in France. But the first performance of the work was in Vienna, to a German libretto by Wilhelm Frederich Riese. It became better known in London, where it was sung first at Covent Garden and afterward at Drury Lane, where the Irish ballad, "The Last Rose of Summer," and the Italian, "M'Appari," were added to its score.

In the Ravinia performance three of the cast, Miss Macbeth, Miss Swarthout, and Mr. Chamlee, are Americans; three more, Mr. Lazzari, Mr. Trevisan, and Mr. D'Angelo, are Italians, and the conductor, Louis Hasselmans, is a Frenchman of Flemish extraction. All of which points undoubtedly add up to the reason why it will be sung in Italian.

"Faust," Wednesday night's bill, is the French opera of Charles Gounod, based upon the German dramatic poem by Goethe. It will have a French Marguerite, Yvonne Gall, a French Mephistopheles, Léon Rothier, an Italian Faust, Mr. Martinelli, and an Italian Valentine, Mr. Danise.

Italian Story, French Locale.

Thursday's "La Rondine" is an Italian story on a French locale, with Miss Bori, Spanish, Miss Macbeth, American, Edward Johnson, Canadian, and Armand Tokatyan, Armenian, in the cast. Italy, Russia, Holland, and the United States are further represented in the remainder of the cast, which includes Mr. D'Angelo, Mr. Cehanovsky, Mr. Paltrinieri, Miss Maxwell, Miss Falco, Miss Swarthout, Miss Page, and Mr. Strawbridge.

"Un Ballo in Maschera" on Thursday night presents other international confusion. An Italian opera—it is one of Verdi's—its scene was first laid in Sweden, then, for political reasons and by police orders, transferred to colonial Boston, thereby showing that humor can be found in unexpected sources. Elisabeth Rethberg, who has

A FINE ACTOR.

VITTORIO TREVISAN.
[Moffett Photo.]

Mr. Trevisan is famous for his impersonation of comic characters of the old school in opera. His repute is entirely justified, but it rests on the more fundamental fact that he is a great actor, regardless of school or age. The picture represents him as the unforgettable escristan in the first act of "Tosca."

Coming Season to Witness Great Flood of New Plays

By John Chapman.

[For the vacationing Mantle.]

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — Some demon statistician, who has noted down every utterance of every producer, whether he be of the big time class or the shoestring variety, has figured out that the coming season will bring 300 shows to Broadway—if everybody lives up to his published intentions. While that number is considered a little too ambitious, a visit to the various rehearsal halls and to the stage doors of certain theaters would indicate that a fair start is being made. The market for actors and chorus girls is looking up and if you ask any producer what he thinks of the changes for the theater business he will read you a speech as full of optimism as the remarks of a head coach at the season's first football rally for freshmen.

Although the show business is not supposed to leap into life until after Labor day, certain preliminary stirrings have brought the first offerings of William A. Brady and David Belasco in the same week, and the presence of Dorothy Stone in a show that neither contains nor was ever intended for her beloved and battered father, Fred.

Belasco Refuses to Act His Age.

Mr. Belasco has removed "Nima's" bombproof steel jacketing from the orchestra pit, boxes, and proscenium arch of his playhouse and has installed "It's a Wiz Child," a comedy by Laurence E. Johnson. At the highly successful opening, Father Belasco made the customary second act curtain speech, in which he explained the utterly frivolous character of his production by stating:

"I'm not 75. I'm only 21." This utterance served even further to complicate the matter of Mr Belasco's age. When "It's a Wiz Child" was tried out in Atlantic City a while ago Mr. Belasco celebrated a birthday—his seventy-fifth, to all accounts. But, according to several supposedly reliable press clippings, he had his seventy-fifth birthday last year; according to "Who's Who" he should now be 70, and according to certain records in a stage collection in the public library he is 76. However, what are mere records when one has a play like "It's a Wiz Child" to judge him by? He is doubtless nearer 21.

The new comedy is another in the series which makes illegitimacy funny. Its chief delight is the smooth perfection of the cast, coming at a time when many producers are complaining that so many of our best actors and actresses have joined the big microphone migration to the sound studios of California. The least that can be said of any of the players is that he is adequate, and most of them are splendid.

Farce Has Broad Aspects.

It is a delicately complicated farce that Messrs. Johnson and Belasco have built by dint of rewriting the thing some twenty times. The Stantons' house maid, one Annie, has been forced to give up her job because of unblessed expectancy. Certain members of the Stanton household wonder why the iceman, Cool Kelly, does not marry her, but it is explained that Kelly is not responsible. Some one says "no self-respecting man would marry a woman under those circumstances."

Joyce Stanton, young and impressionable, is engaged to the town banker, G. A. Appleby—a rich, pompous and bigoted little fellow. There is not much romance in Appleby, and Joyce quite suddenly falls in love with a poor young clerk. She informs Appleby that the engagement is off. The banker will not take a simple no for an answer and Joyce remembers the remark about the self-respecting Cool Kelly. Whereupon she quite charmingly and untruthfully announces to her fiancé that the stork has singled her out for a visit and he beats an utterly ungentlemanly retreat.

Upon this foundation are built many complications. There is the problem of who is going to take care of Annie—a problem that significantly worries Joyce's young brother, Bill. There is the question of who is going to marry Joyce. Appleby doesn't want to, the youth she fell in love with doesn't seem to be the man, and James Stevens, the family lawyer, would marry Joyce in a minute, only he hasn't sense enough to tell her he loves her. For good measure, Otho Peabody, a weak-willed shrimp, and Alice, his domineering wife, are introduced—Alice being Joyce's cousin.

The two outstanding characterizations of the play are Sidney Toler's portrayal of Cool Kelly and Lella Bennett's version of the slavey who has come to serve the Stantons during the unfortunate Annie's absence. The comedy is undeniably one for adults, but it's happily free from leering innuendoes.

Much College Whoopee in This One.

Mr. Brady, having decided that he has rested long enough on the laurels and profits of "Street Scene," has busied himself long enough to produce a piece from the pen of Arthur P. Brash, called "Nowadays." It is a melodrama of college scenes in which

This and That Thing About the Theater

And This Means About the Actors, Also.

By Frederick Donaghey.

THAT the Studebaker will be restored next month to the uses of articulate drama is indicated in a bulletin from New-York to the effect that a play called "Signed X Y Z" will be put into that theater by George M. Cohan. It is not his play; that is, he credits the authorship to Sam Forrest, who for many years has served Mr. Cohan as a stage-director. Mr. Forrest may be remembered as an actor in the stock company of the Garrick Theater back in the days when it was called the Dearborn—the days when the leading-woman was Miss Mary Ryan, who was (and is) Mrs. Forrest when not performing. The date given for "Signed X Y Z" in the Studebaker is September 16. . . . John T. Doyle, Walter Gilbert, Miss Kay Vaughan, and Miss Alice Fischer are named among the players.

Jack Pearl is going That Way—meaning that he is brooding deeply over the fact that nobody has as yet taken the place that for years belonged to David Warfield. All the comical fellows who "play Dutch" [that is actors' vernacular] get That Way in time. Even so sane a clown as the late Sam Bernard had moments when he tried to make 'em cry; and one of the joyous recollections of my kidhood has to do with his reciting the gorgeous doggerel called "The Face on the Floor" (and commonly referred to as "The Face on the Barroom Floor") in deadly earnest. Louis Mann has had the Warfield notion through a generation. Lew Fields liked to think he can bring the tears. . . . As to Mr. Pearl, who is so funny in "Pleasure-Bound," I had no suspicion until, some nights back, I met him in the foyer of the Grand Opera-House, where, ignoring the onlookers and the listeners-in, he told me what a great play "Pleasure-Bound" was when it was called "Well! Well! Well!" There are vestiges of the original in the gay show in the Grand; and it is easy to discern that, in the original, Mr. Pearl had a chance to do what he calls "some real acting." I prefer him as he is when he explains to Mr. Hillebrand why both his twin nieces are called Minnie.

Ed Wynn, it turns out, is not to go into the new issue of George White's Scandals, but will, instead, have a piece prepared for him by himself, Mr. White, and the firm of De Sylva, Brown, and Henderson, who supplied the rimes and music for "Good News" and "Follow Thru!" The piece may be called "Cricketa," after the character Mr. Wynn had in "Manhattan Mary."

One of the countless tales concerning the efforts of the sound-film magnates to obtain material is that Pathé will stage a play in New-York for Miss Ann Harding, who seems to have made good as a sound-film actress in "Paris-Bound." The tale has it that, whether a success or a flop, the play will be held in New-York for twelve weeks, at the end of which time it will be converted into celluloid and noise for Miss Harding's use.

One of the Messrs. Shubert's plans for taking care of their many Manhattan theaters is to organize a company for the revival of some of the late Victor Herbert's operettas. He wrote many; and "Mlle. Modiste" (of course!), "Babes in Toyland," "Sweethearts," "The Fortune-Teller," and "Naughty Marietta" are tentatively named for revival. "Mlle. Modiste" dates back to 1905, when it had Miss Fritzi Scheff as its star. "Babes in Toyland" was one of the Hamlin extravaganzas in the Grand Opera-House. "The Fortune-Teller" was put on late in the 'Nineties as a conveyance for Miss Alice Nellson. "Naughty Marietta," which held some of Herbert's best tunes, was designed for and used by Miss Emma Trentini.

O. B. Clarence, a good London actor, is to be in "Murder On the Second Floor," an imported melodrama soon to be staged in New-York. Miss Lenore Harris also will be in it.

Having hit upon prosperity with a piece named "Let Us Be Gay!" Rachel Crothers calls one of her unstaged pieces "Let Us Be Good!"

Miss Lenore Ulric is making soundmovies, but is expected to appear in the Autumn in "The Sandy Hooker." Sidney Blackmer is to be her principal associate of the cast.

For the reason, 'tis said, that Doctor Rockwell desires to have done with his tonsils, the Messrs. Shubert last night temporarily shut down their New-York show named "Broadway Nights." The Doctor has been in it with Miss Odette Myrtil, who was so good in "White Lilacs."

Wages of importance are proffered W. C. Fields if he will be so good as to return to the issue of Earl Carroll's Vanities shown last year in New-York. Mr. Carroll is eager to exhibit the show on tour.

the leading soprano part, is German; Julia Claussen is Swedish; Miss Macboth represents Minnesota, and Mr. Martinelli, Mr. Danise and several others, Italy.

Miss Bori and Mr. Martinelli will repeat the double bill of "The Secret of Suzanne," and "La Vida Breve" on Saturday night. The first is by Wolf-Ferrari, half German and half Italian, and the scene is laid in Piedmont, close to the border of France. The second, by Manuel de Falla, is Spanish locale, Spanish music, and sung in Spanish, and if you study the cast you will find that it is Spanish, Armenian, Italian, Polish, Belgian, Dutch, Russian, French and American.

Bohemian Music.

And while speaking of the internationalism of the week, one must not forget the national concert with which the week's activities will begin this afternoon. It is called "An Afternoon of Bohemian Music and Bohemian Composers" and will be given by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Eric DeLamarter. Jacques Gordon, violinist, will be the soloist. This concert will be dedicated to the Bohemian Arts club of Chicago, and the guest of honor will be Ladislav Urban, Czecho-Slovakian vice consul, who will make a brief address. The orchestral numbers will include works by Dvorak and Smetana, and Mr. Gordon's violin group will include the "Slavonic Dance," by Dvorak-Kreisler; "Poème," by Fibich, and "Songs of Home," by Smetana. Like all of the Sunday afternoon concerts at Ravinia this concert will be open to the public and there will be no charge for seats, the general admission at the gate covering everything.

Thursday afternoon the regular children's concert and entertainment will be given, the Chicago Symphony orchestra being under the direction of Mr. DeLamarter. Swain's birds will furnish the entertainment part of the program. Eagle, said to be the only trained eagle on the stage, will be a feature of this entertainment, and surely, there could be nothing more American than an eagle. Children 12 years of age and under will be admitted free.

Revival of "Don Quichotte."

The most recent bulletin from the Civic Opera company is an exceptionally interesting one, for it tells of the coming revival of Massenet's "Don Quichotte." It was done at the Auditorium sixteen years ago, Nov. 26, 1913, at which time the name part was sung by Vanni-Marcoux, La Belle Dulcinée, by Mary Garden, and Sancho Panza by Hector Dufranne. Mr. Vanni-Marcoux will have his old part in the revival, the other two being done by Hallie Stiles and Desiré Defrere.

Memories of it are that it is one of Massenet's best. Raoul Gunsbourgh, manager of the Monte Carlo opera, would seem to have been responsible for it, at least for Massenet's choice of the subject. In 1904 a play was made from the Cervantes novel by Jacques le Lorraine, which pleased Gunsbourg so that he asked Massenet to arrange it as an opera. Before its completion, however, le Lorraine died, and Henri Cain was called in to assist Massenet on the "comedie-lyrique." It was first produced at Monte Carlo Feb. 19, 1910.

There have been other musical treatments of the Cervantes hero. Wilhelm Klenzel, composer of "Kuhreigen," produced an opera of the same name in 1898 which was highly successful in Germany. Chicago concertgoers are familiar with Richard Strauss' symphonic poem, "Don Quixote," when Mr. Stock gives it an occasional performance.

In the Massenet opera about the only scene taken from the original story is the one with the windmills. To it Massenet wrote music which was something of a departure from his usual style, for while the well known Massenet melody is much in evidence, there are passages which in their direct simplicity go back almost to the manner of Lully and Rameau.

A Letter from Michigan.

"Dear Mr. Moore: From time to time I have read in 'The Voice of the People' and elsewhere laments for the future of American music.

"Dire prophecies, moans, and groans over American taste in music, the much mooted question of opera in English, the cry of 'foreign domination' in the field of fine music.

"I would have liked to have had a few of those Jeremiahs with me Sunday evening at Interlochen. I suppose most of your readers who are really interested in music, and particularly American music, are familiar with the National High school orchestra and band camps. Some probably have heard a concert in the Interlochen bowl. Let them pass this by, for it is addressed to the many thousands who have not been so lucky.

"You and I have been a bit more fortunate than the average American music lover, for we have had the privilege of hearing the best that Europe has to offer, both in the educational and the entertainment field in Europe. If you have been at Interlochen, I am sure you will bear me out in the flat statement that there is nothing in the world like it.

"Primarily, the orchestra and band camp, to which youngsters from 15 to 19 years of age, boys and girls, come to study, is an educational and an inspirational institution. Whatever its entertainment values—and they are many—they are secondary. To me, they were more interesting for the results attained, and for the opportunities they offer these young musicians to display their talents and their progress, than as an evening's music to be heard and perhaps forgotten.

Picked Musicians.

"And the camp itself, where these boys and girls lead a healthy outdoor life for a summer, the while proving their stuff to others as well as themselves, marks probably the greatest advance yet made in musical education in the United States. These students are supported by scholarships, by their parents, or perhaps by a combination of both. They are the chosen youth of music in this country, all of them the best of their cities, from Maine to California. They meet other talent of their own ages, they have excellent instruction in solo and ensemble playing, in composition and in orchestration.

"Twice a week they come before their public—a public of summer resorters from all parts of the country, many driving as much as a hundred miles for the concerts. On Wednesday evenings the band and orchestra divide honors. To the band alone belong Sunday afternoons, and to the orchestra Sunday evenings.

"They are content to stand on the results, and the results, if last Sunday evening's concert may be taken as a criterion, are almost unbelievably good. I have noticed on their past programs notations of the Beethoven ninth, the Brahms first, Dvorak's 'New World,' and others in the standard répertoire of all the great orchestras of the world; symphonic poems of Strauss, a Mozart symphony, a number of Rimsky-Korsakoff, perhaps a bit of Scribain.

"Last Sunday night's program was All-American. But before we sit down to listen to the music let us look the bowl over. We had come, perhaps, the average distance—fifty miles by motor car, having our supper en route. We arrived before dusk had fallen, and had a glimpse of the twin lakes, Wabekaness and Wabekanetta, between which the town of Interlochen lies. The music students are camped in comfortable cottages on the banks of Wabekanetta. As we drove up they were on their way to the bowl for their concert.

A Charming Setting.

"We bought our tickets—a nominal charge of fifty cents is made—and followed the crowds to the arena. There is a little clearing on the side of a hill. At the bottom, and facing away from the lake, is the stage, a rustic cabin effect with log beamed ceiling, which is most pleasing to the eye, but rather tough on the acoustics. Before it, a fountain, sending its spray as high as the stage roof, and shot through with red and green lights. Then benches, rough, but serviceable, filling the clearing and stretching back under the uncut trees. Ship's lanterns, lashed sailor fashion to the trees with proper square knots, light the arena.

"Overhead, a twilight sky. Beyond the stage, outlined against the afterglow, a gnarled and twisted, stunted pine. And hanging in its branches, the silver of a half moon. Almost too perfect, too theatrical, to be real.

"We take our seats. The fountain ceases playing, and a woman appears on the empty stage to tell us something of the evening's program. She explains that it is all to be American and, therefore, all modern. There are two guest conductors, Carl Busch and Leo Sowerby, both interpreting their own compositions. We are to have a song, an elegy for strings [and what strings!] and 'Minnehaha's Vision,' by Busch. Sowerby has composed a symphonic poem, based on Sandburg's 'Prairie,' and bearing the same title. He has dedicated it to the National High School orchestra, and it is to have its first performance anywhere tonight. Then he will give us 'The Irish Washerwoman.'

"After the guests have finished, Mr. Maddy, the musical director of the camp, will conduct Ernest Bloch's 'America,' and will the audience please be the chorus?

"The orchestra members file in and take their places, boys in white shirts and blue trousers, girls in white sweaters and dark blue bloomers with dark blue stockings. A young man, who appears to be more or less of a general factotum, gives them the pitch and there is much tuning of instruments.

Two Guest Conductors.

"Mr. Busch makes his appearance. He wears a blue coat, white trousers, and a winning smile. Decorous applause from us. Tumultuous reception from the orchestra. Mr. Busch has the music stand adjusted to his liking. A hush, the baton is raised, and the first number opens on muted strings.

"Mr. Sowerby follows Mr. Busch, who is sped on his way with that wholehearted adulation of youth expressed in the old fashioned way of clapping, pounding and whistling. Mr. Sowerby has a brown coat, white trousers, blond hair and a boyish grin. 'Grand stuff,' say the youngsters. 'Here's a fellow who likes us well enough to dedicate a real symphonic work to us. Ecco! He is one of us. Let's hope Mr. Busch doesn't mind our enthusiasm for this youthful rival for our affections. It's tough to have two guest conductors in one night.'

"'Prairie,' to our well nigh untutored ears, is a knockout. It packs a real punch, and we join the orchestra in telling Mr. Sowerby so when he has finished. Then he makes us all happy with 'The Irish Washerwoman,' and the orchestra as well as ourselves cheer him to the echo. Many curtain calls. A brief bow to us, and then a lot of bows to these boys and girls who so frankly adore him. He returns their applause with applause of his own, in which we heartily join.

"Then the intermission. We look the audience over. Dirt farmers and millionaire resorters, old and young, rich and poor. How can we get this enthusiasm for fine music in this out-of-the-way corner of Michigan? I don't know, unless it's because these kids are all we may have dreamed that our kids will be. Maybe it's because Americans appreciate great music. Maybe it's a little of both.

"We hardly leave our places. Overhead the sky is deep, deep blue, and the stars are out. The silver slice of a half-moon has moved to the left and hidden away in the trees. We catch a glimpse of it now and again through the gently swaying branches of poplar, oak and pine.

Improvised Pipe Organ.

"The orchestra returns and Mr. Maddy takes his place on the conductor's stand. He explains to us that the score of 'America' calls for a pipe organ in the finale, but as no generous donor has come forward with the price of same, they have improvised one, using the saxophones, horns and other instruments from the band. He rehearses us in our part, to the accompaniment of this 'pipe organ,' and we catch the spirit. We are willing, although somewhat unversed, choristers. We do our best. After three rehearsals of the hymn he either decides we will do [he has about two thousand of us] or that we never will do any better and he'd better make the best of a bad job.

"The rehearsing of that hymn has given us perfect familiarity with the dominant theme of the symphony. We recognize the secondary themes—'Old Hundred,' 'Pop Goes the Weasel,' 'Swanee River,' and lots of others. We realize that America has a folk music after all. We are lost in admiration for the solo instruments, for the ensemble, for the woodwinds, the brass, the strings. And above all for that charming young concert 'master' (yes, she's a girl), who inspires the violins to outdo themselves.

"We are on our feet before Mr. Maddy asks us to stand, anticipating the hymn by a good three measures, and ready to sing as soon as he gives us our cue. Probably a worse chorus never sang the words, but I doubt if any chorus anywhere put more real heart into them. For here, before us, was young America, on the upgrade, young America doing the things Walt Whitman dreamed for us.

"We were strangely silent during the drive home under the stars. As we arrived at our lakeside cottage, we snapped out of it. 'No need to worry about young America musically,' said our host, a man who has been identified with educational work in America for more than forty years.

"There certainly isn't.

"Yours, "J."

Musical Bits.

A repeated hearing of "La Campana Sommersa" confirms the opinion that Ravinia has put over a notable achievement which only just falls short of being a great one. That it is not a great one is because the score just falls short of being great music. It is good music, wrought by a man who knows his orchestra and his theater to a high degree of expertness.' Mood is there, atmosphere is there, half a dozen exquisite scenes are there, and Respighi realizes as few operatic composers do the value of ending an act with dramatic effectiveness.

Where it falls short is in failing to contain a final, transfiguring musical moment that shall set the whole thing ablaze. You will search in vain for a "Wotans Abschied" or an "O Patria Mia" or anything that can be remotely classified with these numbers, though there is so much intelligence and color throughout the score that you continually hope that the next item will reveal something of the sort. And one must confess that the last act is an anti-climax. To be sure, this is not altogether uncommon among operas.

But with what merits the score possesses, with an uncommonly striking libretto, with a performance that in its greater outlines and nearly all of its details is about as near to perfection as one is likely to find in a fallible world, "La Campana Sommersa" shows all the signs of being a success.

Cesare Formichi, popular Italian baritone of the Chicago Civic Opera, has been busy since the first of July in France. He sang two performances at Vichy and several at Aix-les-Bains. In September Mr. Formichi leaves Paris for Berlin, where he is scheduled for a concert and will also make a concert tour of Scandinavia. October first will find him back at the Opéra Comique in Paris for performances of "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame" and "Tosca," and he will open the season at Bordeaux on Oct. 16 with a performance of "Rigoletto." Almost immediately thereafter he will sail for New York and come to Chicago for the opening performance in the new Civic Opera house.

Hans Muenzer, concert master of the Chicago Theater Symphony orchestra, will be starred in the Paganini violin concerto with the orchestra accompanying during the present week, playing from the orchestra pit. Joseph Hoffman, cellist, and Rudolph Wagner, pianist, the other two members of the trio, are also members of the Chicago Theater Symphony orchestra and will have supporting solo numbers in this Paganini program.

SHE'S pictured with some of her right shoulder missing; but, then, something had to go in order that she might get all the hand in. Mr. Connelly is that way with his clients; and Miss Brinkley's is a nice-looking hand. She's in "Pleasure-Bound," and has been since, nine weeks ago tomorrow night, it was first shown in Chicago. Her chore therein is to be the heroine in what is left of the original play. The Messrs. Shubert, as has been explained ere now, preferred a good show to an indifferent libretto.

Flood of New Shows for the Coming Season

Broadway Threatened by Theatrical Inundation.

By John Chapman.

the keynote is sounded by a detective who cries:

"Good God! What is this world coming to?"

"Nowadays" starts out as a campus comedy, with three highly attractive co-eds discussing sex in a bald and crude manner. Handsome Boyce Butler, who just doesn't care for women at all, is the object of conquest by all three, but one quickly drops out. Of the remaining two, one has retained traces of demure girlishness. The third, Paula Newhall, is a rich, high spirited baby who has "got" many a man, and she bets the demure lass $50 that she can get Boyce Butler.

Boyd is tricked into falling off the water wagon and is lured by Paula to a room at a certain Mrs. Fisher's, where their tryst is interrupted by a drunken bootlegger who wants to sell Boyd some more liquor. A fight results and Paula aids Boyd in what looks like a losing battle, by killing the bootlegger with a well aimed smack on the head with a bottle.

Of course, college students can't carry on that way without paying for it, and Paula must commit suicide. The first night audience unexpectedly found the detective's remark to be funny. Mr. Brash has been pretty rough on our students, and not the least of his unkindnesses lies in making an undergraduate address a girl named Jean Wing as Miss Lean Thing or Miss Mean Sting.

"Show Girl" Gets an Overhauling.

Florence Ziegfeld, undismayed by the illness of Ruby Keeler Jolson and her consequent elimination from the title rôle of "Show Girl," has snatched Dorothy Stone from the company of her father and Will Rogers out in Hollywood and has thrust her in the breach. At the same time he has done some carpenter work that leaves the production in an improved state—a second edition of "Show Girl" he calls it.

When it was announced that Miss Stone was to assume the Keeler rôle, certain main stem wiseacres shook their heads in disapproval. "She isn't," they said, "the type." And heretofore she had always played under the lucky star of the Stone family, dancing with Papa Fred or being encouraged by Fred's generous and kindly substitute, Will Rogers. She needed that family backing, said the wiseacres.

Dorothy made her debut in "Show Girl" with less than a week's preparation and earned what was no less than an ovation through tireless hard work, boundless good spirits, a nice singing voice, and good dancing. Her Dixie Dugan was nothing like Ruby Keeler's, but it went over. "Show Girl" now has two children of famous actors who have for the first time cut loose from family ties and are standing upon their own twinkling feet. The other is Eddie Foy Jr., who got his opportunity to appear in something besides a Foy act when one sister fell ill and another got married.

Introduces Two New Songs.

In otherwise fixing up his show, which had fallen below the usual market value of a Ziegfeld production, the girl glorifier has grafted upon the George Gershwin score two tunes by Vincent Youmans. Only one of them, "Mississippi," was heard at Dorothy Stone's début. It was, as the boys say, a good number and doubtless it will soon find its way to the broadcast studios and the phonograph discs.

Item: Not all stage folk, it appears, are unversed in the ways of commerce nor do they twiddle their thumbs during the summer months while waiting for some one to give them jobs. For example, this paragraph, hopefully submitted by a press agent who must keep his meal ticket before the public:

"Miss ——— ———, the vaudeville headliner, announces that her gasoline station at Atlantic beach is 'breaking all attendance records' and is reporting capacity performance at all times. According to the singer, the 'buy' is heavy and every indication points to a 'complete sell out' every day. In actual dollars and cents the station is grossing well over $2,000 weekly, which 'take' includes receipts from the tearoom annex. Not so bad, eh!" No?

OLD-TIMER

HARRY TIGHE

He's in "Follow Thru!" wherein he plays a fat man who has taken in a deal of money in manufacturing something for women called girdles. Mr. Tighe is a veteran. He is remembered as one of Mort H. Singer's actors in the La Salle piece called "The Golden Girl."

Music Notes

The Associated Glee Clubs of America, which held its third triennial meet in New York last May, is considering postponing its 1932 meet and holding it in Chicago during the 1933 Century of Progress exposition, according to a letter received by Rufus C. Dawes, president of the world's fair, from Robert M. Van Sant of Baltimore, national vice president of the musical organization.

Explaining that the Associated Glee Clubs of America at present has a membership of 100 glee clubs in all parts of the country, Mr. Van Sant expressed the belief that a monster meet to be held in Chicago during the world's fair would do much to swell the membership and to stimulate interest in music throughout the United States.

"The feature of our third triennial meet in New York," Mr. Van Sant wrote, "was a concert in which nearly 4,000 men, representing sixty glee clubs from all over the country, participated. There were nearly 17,000 persons in the audience at Madison Square garden.

"It would be a wonderful thing for Chicago, and eternally to its credit, if in connection with its world's fair, celebrating its own centennial year, it would be the means of stimulating a tremendous interest in male chorus work in the United States, which would increase in the years to come until America, like some of our foreign countries, is truly a singing nation."

A series of open air band concerts will be given under the sponsorship of the Chicago Federation of Musicians in Grant park during the month of September. The first is announced to take place on Labor day.

Robert Ringling was in Chicago for a few days last week after a successful season in Cincinnati. He is going to Canada for a two weeks' holiday and then returning to Chicago, where he will remain throughout the Civic Opera season.

Shy at Air Mail.

LE BOURGET, France.—(AP)—A survey of this aviation center shows that French business men are not taking to the air mail. Only one-seventh of the traffic here is of French origin. Some observers believe the double postage charged for domestic air mail has much to do with it.

Planes Ordered Down.

HAVANA.—(AP)— The war department has evolved a system of signals to order down planes which appear over Cuban territory without governmental permission. Three smoke bombs will be the day signal and three star bombs producing green lights will be the night sign.

Plays and Such of Ten Years Ago in Chicago Theaters

SUBJOINED are news of and comments on plays and shows printed in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of August 17, 1919—the date most nearly corresponding to today. The excerpts are verbatim, and not rewrites or summarizations.

One of the odd things about the strike in the theaters is that there is a better and a wiser friend to them than George M. Cohan.

The foregoing paragraph classified ten years ago as a personal. But the actors believed it then and believe it now; and Mr. Cohan was as good a friend as they could well have had.

Thomas A. Wise, who with William Courtenay and Grant Mitchell constitutes the triumvirate known as The Big Three of the strike in Chicago, was interviewed by the Daily News Tuesday on the subject of the actors' wrongs. "It is not a question of money, as some of the managers are trying to make the public believe," said he. "What we want is extra pay for Sunday-night performances."

True, Mr. Wise didn't say that they waived the extra pay in money.

"Take It from Me!" a musical play with Miss Zoš Barnett in its leading rôle, will reach the Studebaker tonight after a career of popularity in the East.

It caught the fancy of the populace, and ran a long time. . . . Miss Barnett has not been hereabout of late.

Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield are about ready to be starred in "Look Who's Here!" a musical comedy by Frank Mandel and Edward Paulton, with Silvio Hein writing the tunes.

And soon afterward they were ready to withdraw.

The third of Raymond Hitchcock's Hitchy-Koo series has lyrics and music by Cole Porter, a Yale veteran who used tobe too good at that sort of thing for public understanding.

Mr. Porter is of late come into his own as a composer of popular music.

F. Ziegfeld went on strike last week. He raised his scale for the Follies from $3.00 to $3.50 for all lower-floor seats, and got it without argument from the public. . . . Mr. Ziegfeld advertises his Follies as "A National Institution." Mr. Hitchcock acclaims his Hitchy-Koo "A National Necessity."

And see what they cost nowadays! That is, for any Ziegfeld show.

Messrs. Cohan & Harris will send their murder - mystery drama, "The Acquittal," to the Grand in Chicago before presenting it in New York, the reason being that there are too many of the same kind on Broadway.

"The Acquittal" was fair melodrama. The author, Rita Weimann, has not scored since then.

Mrs. Chauncey Olcott and Miss Grace Heyer have penned a drama called "Lusmore"; and it will be done in New-York in a week or two at Henry Miller's Theater. It is about Ireland in the Middle Ages, and is mystical.

"Lesmore" is among the forgotten things of the American stage.

The former Mrs. Harry R. Guggenheim, known to the Theater as Miss Janet Beecher, was married last week to Dr. Richard Horace Hoffman, of New York.

Miss Beecher is active again in her calling, and is expected here in "Courage."

The Messrs. Selwyn have sold their rights in "Buddies" to Donald Brian, Wallace Eddinger, and Peggy Wood, who are starring in it.

"Buddies" was the most popular of the slushy things that were staged on the heels of the Armistice.

The Reverend Thomas Dixon's bolshevik play, "The Red Dawn," was revealed in New-York last week, and didn't make precisely the intended impression. One reviewer reports it to have been "so helplessly clumsy and preposterous" that the audience "gave way to helpless and honest merriment." It is further intimated that the drama is "violent and incredible," and is not likely to survive long enough to be brought to these parts.

Dixon tried hard for years to break into the Theater, and succeeded only to the extent that "The Clansman" won attention as something wherewith to stir up anti-Negro feeling in the larger cities.

"Three Wise Fools," which impends at Powers', is distinguished as the only play in years which ran simultaneously in New-York, London, Australia, and Honolulu. In Hawaii, it is reported to have broken all previous local records.

And "Three Wise Fools" was awful stuff. Miss Helen Mencken acted in it here, in 1919, in Powers'.

Miss Tallulah Bankhead, daughter of the Alabama statesman, is acting the first rôle in Rachel Crother's "39 East," and is said by New-York newspapers to be pretty good.

Miss Bankhead, while an unknown as yet in the experience of Chicago theater-goers, has for some seasons been a somebody of the London stage.

Twenty Years Ago

GOING back through the files to twenty years ago, or to the corresponding Sunday of 1909, the interests of theater-goers were catered to in THE TRIBUNE of August 18 by the paragraphs that follow.

Miss Billie Burke will resume her season in "Love-Watches" at Des Moines (Ia.) September 6. She will continue her tour as far West as San Francisco, returning to Chicago for the month of December, where she will give final performances of "Love-Watches" while rehearsing a new play. At the conclusion of Miss Marie Tempest's engagement at the Lyceum Theater, New-York, Miss Burke will give the formal première of the new piece. Her leading-man this season will be Vernon Steele, a young English actor hailing from the London Playhouse.

Miss Burke was a popular young woman in those days. The play wasn't much . . . Mr. Ziegfeld says he is about to put her forward again as a star.

Again Eva Tanguay can shake her curly locks and scream defiantly "I don't care"; for Mr. Ziegfeld has secured her signature to a contract which, it is said, calls for the payment of the largest salary ever given a female musical-comedy star. Engaged temporarily to take the place of Nora Bayes in the Follies of 1909, Miss Tanguay immediately scored so pronouncedly that managerial wisdom has deemed it advisable to make her a permanent feature of the latest Jardin de Paris revue; and she will be the featured member of the cast when the road-tour begins in September.

Even at her best (which wasn't impressive to the writer of these memoranda), Miss Tanguay didn't seem to belong in the Ziegfeld Follies, although she had a vast box-office value.

Lew Fields relieved considerable suspense during the last week by announcing the title of his new play and the name of the new prima-donna who is to appear in "The Rose of Algeria." Don't tell anyone; but "The Rose" is our old friend "Algeria" in disguise. The new singer is Miss Lillian Hörlein, for five years prima-donna in the Berlin Wintergarten, and an actress of acknowledged merit. In addition to being the possessor of a voice heralded as one of the best in light opera, Miss Hörlein is a beautiful woman. The new play which Mr. Fields has picked out for himself is a three-act farce by Edgar Smith, with music by Victor Herbert; and it will be known as "Old Dutch." For his support, the comedian has engaged already Alice Dovey, Ada Lewis, Clara Palmer, John E. Jenshaw, Vernon Castle, and Charles Judels. "Old Dutch" will be tried on the dog somewhere adjacent to New-York on September 27, and after a week or two on the road will be introduced to the glare of Broadway.

"The Rose of Algeria" failed by its new title, too . . . . "Old Dutch" was a weakling.

William Norris is to have the leading comedy-rôle in "The King of Caledonia," the English musical success which the Shuberts secured with Sam Bernard in mind. However, Samuel could not see it that way at all, after he had journeyed all the way to Lunnon-town to look the piece over. His plaint was that the character of the Duke was much too serious for his methods and his audiences; and he refused flatly to have anything to do with it. Now Mr. Norris will play His Grace, succeeding Huntley Wright, who created the part on the other side. The music of "The King of Caledonia" was composed by Sidney Jones, and the book and lyrics by Frederick Lonsdale and Adrian Ross.

"The King of Caldonia" failed, regardless of Mr. Norris. He died not long since.

In her forthcoming tour in "The Test," Miss Blanche Walsh will travel for fifty-two weeks before returning to New-York. She will cover more than 30,000 miles, and will visit every city of importance in the United States and Northwest Canada. The entire tour will be made in a private car. "The Test" is from the pen of the Yiddish dramatist, Jacob Gordin, recently deceased. Miss Walsh made a successful appearance in the play last year; but her season was cut short by a serious illness and an enforced retirement of several months' duration.

Miss Walsh had her following. Her play, "The Test," was said at the time to be an original work by Jules Eckert Goodman.

"Great Moments from Great Plays," the vaudeville-sketch arranged by Amelia Bingham and presented by her for two weeks last season at the American Music-Hall, seems to have taken Londoners by storm, judging from the published accounts of Miss Bingham's reception at the London Palace. So confident is the actress of her new position that she is arranging to put on "A Modern Magdalen," the play by Haddon Chambers which she presented at Powers' just seven years ago this Fall. The company brought here at that time was the last of the Bingham "all-star" casts; and it was a truly-notable organization, including, as it did, in addition to Miss Bingham, Henry E. Dixey, Wilton Lackaye, Hobart Bosworth, Joseph Holland, Ferdinand Gottschalk, and Mrs. Madge Carr Cooke.

Miss Bingham kept going until the end, although she never got back the vogue she had in "The Climbers" and "A Modern Magdalen." The latter piece is remembered chiefly for Lackaye's acting,—although Dixey, too, was immensely liked by many.

Vincent Serrano has a busy time mapped out for himself during the next few months. He has been engaged by Liebler & Co. to create the rôle of Paul Potter in "A Little Brother of the Rich," a dramatization by Joseph Medill Patterson and Miss Harriet Ford of the former's novel. The première of this play will take place at the Grand Opera-House; but meantime Mr. Serrano will be seen as Count Victor de Savergne in "Foreign Exchange." When H. B. Warner, who will play the "lead" in "Foreign Exchange," leaves that Booth Tarkington-Harry Leon Wilson comedy to take up his work in Edwin Milton Royle's sequel to "The Squaw-man," the part to be originated by Mr. Warner will be assumed by Mr. Serrano. In all, Mr. Serrano will be called on to create two rôles and prepare a third before November 1.

"Foreign Exchange" failed. So also did the sequel to "The Squaw-Man." Mr. Serrano was quite good as Potter in "A Little Brother of the Rich."

New in Manhattan.

Two novelties are bulletined for the week in the New-York theaters. One is called "Getting Even," is by Nathaniel Wilson (hitherto unknown to dramaturgy), and is without a cast containing celebrities. The other is "A Noble Rogue," is by Kenyon Scott (who describes it as "a musical melodrama"), and is in possession of Paul Gilmore as its principal actor. Mr. Gilmore years ago was a small-town star.

Current Chicago Playbills.

"Follow Thru!" Olympic, fourth week; "After Dark," Woods, ninth and final week; "Pleasure-Bound," Grand Opera-House, tenth week; "The Nut-Farm," Cort, sixteenth week.

TO TAKE A NEW ROLE

EDITH MASON.
[De Gueldre Photo.]

IT is looking a bit to the future, but Miss Mason has already been announced for the part of Iris in Mascagni's opera of the same name. As far as the Civic Opera company is concerned, the opera will be a novelty, though it was once sung years ago at the Auditorium, before Chicago had its own operatic organization. This will raise Miss Mason's Italian-Japanese roles to two, for she is celebrated on two continents for her performance in "Mme. Butterfly."

The Voice of the Movie Fan

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE SIDE of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal reply send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE.

Stand Up for Lon Chaney.

Dear Miss Tinee: In answer to D. J.'s letter will state that the costume Chaney wore in "Fast Is East" couldn't be improved. He was supposed to be a native, like the rest in the cast, in a tropical country where people go practically nude because of the stifling heat.

Furthermore, he wore more than one clean shirt, if the critic noticed.

He probably overlooked the fact that you are only a movie critic and not a costume designer. Your reviews are excellent, Mae. I don't see anything wrong with them. J. GIELLO.

Editor's Note: I thank you.

Want 'Em True to Life.

Dear Mae: It is with great interest that we read your accounts of the latest movies and the letters you publish from the fans. However, we have never before ventured to pour out our thoughts as so many have done, but after seeing "The Drag" we feel it almost a duty to contribute something to add to its favor and popularity.

Why can't we have more pictures that are really true to life? All these that have been shown lately are so unnatural. People like "Mary Dugan," "Madame X" and Katherine Mills [Ruth Chatterton again] in "Charming Sinners," together with many of our other popular cinema and talkie heroes and heroines do not and cannot exist in real life.

Not only have the movies drifted from the true side of everyday life, but they have also been weaned away from their educational purpose. When in the United States do courts allow dummies to appear in the scenes of judgment, or where do courts tolerate open perjury, as shown in the "Trial of Mary Dugan"?

Hoping for more real pictures in the near future, we are M. AND B.

P. S.—Yes, Mae, we enjoy the movies, but love to learn. We are glad to hear or rather read that you enjoyed your vacation.

Editor's note: Thank you. Interesting letter.

Calls "Heaven" a Flop.

Dear Miss Tinee: I have never written to you before, but don't you think they made a big mistake when they had Vilma Banky talk in "This Is Heaven"? She always was on my list of favorites, but never again! She can't even say "no" right.

Give us Americans that can talk our language! That picture "This Is Heaven," surely was a flop.

DISILLUSIONED.

Editor's note: It must be awful to be "disillusioned."

Still They Argue!

Dear Miss Tinee: The snake that acted in "The Letter" was a cobra. My father and the man next door had a big fight about it. My father said it was a cobra, and the man next door said it was a python. My father won. The policeman (naturally such a thing would be apprehended), not having seen the picture, was doubtful but presumed the right had been, as always, victorious.

Too bad this was not threshed out sooner and saved you many sleepless nights, likewise these others who have been painfully trying to educate you in zoology.

Evidently this particular scene caused more of a sensation than the flawless acting of Miss Eagels.

After all these trifles, Miss Tinee, isn't it a pleasure just to know there are such superb actors as Jeanne Eagels and several others I could name?

Yours truly, GEORGE H. CRAIG.

Editor's Note: Yes. But when have you been sleeping, George? The python-cobra question was argued and settled in this column weeks ago.

Other Places Besides the Loop.

Dear Miss Tinee: Is it necessary for a picture to show in the loop to be good? If I am not mistaken, ten people attend movies outside the loop to one in the loop. In fact, I am told that few Chicago people, particularly north or south side people go to loop movies. As long as newspaper writers keep using the word "outlying," etc., so long will Chicago continue a Main street town. Yours truly, ANN F. ANDREWS.

"Gentlemen of the Press" was the second finest picture I have ever seen —"Arizona" being first.

Editors note—High praise indeed! Thanks for your interest.

The Best Movie I Ever Saw

If you will tell us what movie, in your opinion, rates above all the others you've seen, and why this particular movie is deserving of praise, we'll pay $1 for your letter if we print it. Address Best Movies, Chicago Tribune.

The Inimitable One.

No film can compare with "Innocents of Paris" for the simple reason that there isn't an actor in our movies who has the magnetic charm of the French actor, Maurice Chevalier. Not that I'm partial to Frenchmen, on the contrary, I have always felt that too much fuss was made about France and its people. But Chevalier has "it" in such measure that one is fascinated throughout the picture.

The little boy, David, is a second Jackie Coogan. The settings are truly Parisian. But Maurice is 99 per cent of the show, and he is 100 per cent personality, stepping out of the picture to meet you! A. T.

Liked Fanny Brice.

Fanny Brice in "My Man," to my estimation is the best play of the season. Some talent! And she surely can use it. How real the scenery, surroundings, and her actions! It was one big hit. And O, on her wedding night, how she sang "My Man," with her heart breaking, although her friends did not know it.

Why, every one in the audience blew their noses or actually wept. It is a play never to be forgotten. I surely hope she will be in more. E. A.

Superb Show of Oriental Rugs

Institute Has Collection of James F. Ballard

History Woven in These Rare Antiques.

By Eleanor Jewett.

AMONG the summer exhibits at the Art institute there is one which up to now has not been mentioned, except for a passing word, in these columns. The exhibit is of oriental rugs, a collection of priceless masterpieces lent by James F. Ballard of St. Louis. The Art institute news letter of a week or so ago carries a hymn of praise woven about them which it seems a shame not to reprint. The sentences that run so smoothly on the tongue give a tremendously vivid picture of the soft and worn loveliness of these rugs.

It seems, so starts the letter, that few of us realize that oriental rugs have a sentimental value. They are bought usually as a matter of decoration for our homes and we delight in their soft blend of lovely colors without trying to trace the past in their weave. Yet each rug has a history, especially these which are antiques and date back four or five centuries. In the rug making districts in the Asiatic countries—Persia, Afghanistan, Beloochistan, Armenia, India and so on—whole families spend years in the weaving of one rug. One member of the family works for a while, then another takes up the weaving and then another until a half dozen have taken their turns, working from a small colored sketch as a model.

A World Wide Search.

Some of the choicest rugs made in these countries are now to be found in the Art Institute galleries. Mr. Ballard has spent fortunes in their purchase and has traveled over 350,000 miles, over various parts of the world, in their search. If these rugs had tongues and could give voice, what marvelous stories they could tell! They could entertain us for many more than a thousand and one nights. These rugs have been witnesses to scenes of passion and love, courage, religion, mystery, tragedy and death. They have been through feuds and survived traditions. Their experience is enormous.

It is safe to say that each one of the one hundred and six rugs in this exhibition has had at least twenty-five owners, each of whom believed it his for life. The priceless carpets have shared the fortunes of their owners, passing through scenes of robbery, pillage, looting, war, bloodshed and murder, as well as peace. They have journeyed far across hot desert sands on the swaying backs of camels and have graced the tent walls of chiefs. They have embellished and warmed the harems of despots. They are rich in history. We may well look at them with a little awe mingled with our interest. What stories they could tell, if they could speak!

Chicagoans Buy Fountain.

A little piece of information about the Swedish fountain which has recently been bought to be installed in Chicago may not be out of place here. One of the most famous sculptors today is Carl Milles of Sweden. A brilliant piece of work by him, "The Fountain of the Tritons," was seen abroad by Tage Palm, a Chicagoan and a member of the Swedish Arts and Crafts society. The fountain was designed for a civic decoration in his own country, but Mr. Palm induced the sculptor to agree to part with it for a site abroad. As soon as the agreement was reached, several Chicago business men got together and arranged for its purchase, deciding to give it to Chicago.

The men are Albert I. Appleton, Vincent Bendix, Charles S. Peterson, E. P. Strandberg, F. A. Thulin, J. P. Seeberg, Adolph Lindstrom, Roy W. Wilson, E. G. Grundstrom, Nels Shoan, Herbert R. Hedman, and E. C. Carson. The purchase of the fountain has been mistakenly attributed to a trustee of the Art institute as a gift to the museum, so this truer statement clears up the error and gives the credit where credit is due.

Quaint Mementos.

A little bit out of the way, in corridor G-27 of Gunsaulus hall in the Art institute, there hangs a colored print on cloth, made to commemorate the Chicago World's Fair of 1893. Stars brightly twinkle across the red and blue vivid vertical stripes, each one bearing the name of a state. At intervals, neatly spaced, medallions of the "Landing of Columbus" and hemispheres of the "New World" alternate with "E Pluribus Unum." It is rather a fascinating design worked out in red, white and blue.

Near it hangs a print made earlier, about 1829, in shades of blue. It is a cleverly patriotic print. The frigate Constitution stands out clearly against a background of tumultuous clouds and surrounded by portraits of all the Presidents, from Washington to Jackson. The sister ships of Old Ironsides were the President, the United States, and the Constellation, but none of them live as does the memory of the unbeatable Constitution. She is a magnificent creation in this old fashioned and quaint print.

Show by Two Artists.

An exhibition of work by two Chicago artists, Katherine Patton and Hubert Ropp, is current in the Alden studios at Highland Park. The artists are showing portraits, theme pictures and decorative sketches. Modernism has influenced the work of both painters, but it is possibly a modernism that has compromised—a hybrid modernism pleasing to the radical and not displeasing to the conservative, both of whom, indeed, it captivates by its clever rope-walking on the line of the extreme.

A clever use has been made of a certain new building material and there are some interesting low relief effects in this heavy board. Two of these carved panels have been obtained by Good Housekeeping officials to afford a decorative note in one of their modern rooms.

Painting in Maine.

Florence White Williams has left recently for Maine, where she will paint in the Boothbay region. H. Amiard Oberteuffer and her husband, both artists of note, are there teaching and Tunis Ponsen, the young Chicago painter, is working under their criticism. Marguerite Calkins Tayler, an artist from Wilmette, is spending August there, too. Florence White Williams has been teaching one day a week this summer. She is as versatile an artist as Chicago holds.

Students at the National Academy of Art, 230 East Ohio street, are elated because three of their members captured the three prizes offered by the National Confectioners association for the best posters to be used during the week of Oct. 13 through 19, for window and billboard display.

The poster which will be used is the work of Mrs. Eunice Brown Peek. Her color, composition and lettering made her the winner of the first award. Benjamin Rubisoff won the second prize and Clifford D. Eitel the third.

Louis Pesman, instructor in this class, encourages his students to work on such practical problems because he feels that it helps to develop a professional point of view. In his own words, he thinks "The classroom should be as much like the working studio as possible."

Apparently Chicago has a new institution in churches. A long sheet of news from the St. Stephens' Episcopal church, 3533 North Albany avenue, brings a refreshing picture to dance before one's imagination of artists gift-laden with their own creative work hastening to lay it before the church, and the church with welcoming hands accepting sketches, etchings, prints, drawings and poems and quickly decking herself in them to her own embellishment and the undying fame of the artist. A romantic name has been given the church, "The Little Church at the End of the Road." Already many beautiful gifts have been arranged on its walls. The latest group to be dedicated is a series of three etchings by Helen Forman. A lithograph by Nora Ulrich of New York, "A Christmas Tree for the Birdies," is to be dedicated.

The Palette and Chisel club has appointed Otto Hake and John McDonnell as a committee to gather offerings from members and especially mementos to the deceased members, to whose memory a clump of trees in the Garden of Memory, which surrounds the church, has been dedicated.

"SELF PORTRAIT," by Marcena Barton, to be found in Miss Barton's brilliant one-man show of paintings in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The exhibit will continue into October.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

NEW YORK offers no openings for armchair playgoers, and all of the operas being sung this week at Ravinia and that have literary associations have already been met by armchair playgoers this year. But, as has been said before, "Of the making of books there is no end and books about the drama as well as plays themselves are always coming from the presses. Three of last season's most popular plays—one of them still one of Broadway's most luminous successes—have been published lately: "Holiday," "Kibitzer," and "Let Us Be Gay."

RACHEL CROTHERS, author of "Let Us Be Gay."

"Holiday" was of its kind the best play of the season. It was sentient, amusing, at times brilliant, and its plot was one which appealed to an intelligent rather than a sensuous audience. Philip Barry made of "Holiday" a grand evening's entertainment for the cognoscenti. As a matter of fact, the not so knowing liked it, too, and it achieved a popularity which even Mr. Barry's plays have not always attained, and he is one of the most popular of the American dramatists.

"Holiday" is about a young man who wants to live before he dies. That his heart plays him the trick of leaping into flame over the kind of girl who wants money and position and regularity and conventionality is just too bad. His spirit triumphs over his heart, and that is, as they say, that.

The play was written for Hope Williams, to whom the published play is dedicated, and she starred in it, not as the girl who was conventional but as that girl's sister, ally inclined but as that girl's sister, who revolted passionately and violently against everything that too much money and too much social position means.

There are brilliant lines here and there, and the characterizations are, at times, immense. The brother of the two girls, too lazy to struggle against temptation but not really caring a scrap about yielding; the husband and wife who have little money but all the fun in the world, and the heroine who hates life so fiercely that she would never do a dirty trick to anybody to add to the rottenness of things, but who knows—uncompromisingly—that they are rotten, are all exceedingly well done.

There was another literary interest in the production of "Holiday" in New York in the fact that Donald Ogden Stewart acted in it. Incidentally, Mr. Stewart has made a comedy from his latest book, "Father William," and rehearsals of it are scheduled to begin Sept. 2.

Try reading "Holiday" aloud. It is stimulating reading.

"Kibitzer" either coined a word for the American slanguage or it brought into more popular use one already recognized. At any rate, since the production of the play "Kibitzer" is used up and down the street for that officious person who always tells everybody what to do and is always wrong—you know, the back seat driver.

"Kibitzer" is about an old cigar store owner who knows so much about stocks and horse racings and assorted other get rich quick schemes that he almost succeeds in ruining a lot of lives, including his own. It is by Jo Swerling and Edward G. Robinson.

"Let Us Be Gay," by Rachel Crothers, is one of the few remaining dramas in the heated season in New York. It was produced Feb. 21, with the kleagle-ess of the armchair playgoers among those present. She went with St. John Ervine, who was then visiting dramatic critic for the New York World and the most unpopular writing man in New York at the moment because, so far as I could gather from the gossip of the lit'ry circles, he had called the Marx Brothers something which sounded a lot like hams, and the Messrs. Marx were at that time enjoying a fling on Park avenue and the more esoteric purlieus of Sutton place, and if there is one thing that New York does it is stick together in the matter of its transitory idols.

Anyway, "Let Us Be Gay," delighted Mr. Ervine, as it did everybody else in the audience. It was as snappy a comedy and as up to date a line of quips as if the author had been one of the bright young crowd that think thirty the brink of the grave instead of a woman with white hair who looks like one of Vogue's most successful "matron types." It is about a husband and a wife who disagreed in a prologue about the matter of having affairs. The wife left him because he had done some experimenting and she couldn't bear the thought of bringing her children up under his influence.

The play proper—that is, the play itself, as Mr. Jack Donahue would say—begins with their meeting at a house party after the wife has spent a few years in Paris and other educational points. Nobody knows that they have been husband and wife; it's so easy to manage things of that sort with a name like Smith. The wife's plea is "Let Us Be Gay"—and they are!

It's very modern and amusing and—gay!

Freak Fish Pays Annual Visit to Film Celebrities

Beach Parties and Much Food Result.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 17.—[Special Correspondence.]—"A Grunion, an Onion, and You," is the week's suggestion for a theme song.

Hollywood's flaming youth with a hearty appetite betook itself nightly to the beach all the way from Malibu, where the tents of the movie mighty are pitched, to the lower reaches of Hermosa beach to see the west coast's most celebrated freak fish come into the local shore for his once a year visit in the full moon. Life for many a New York stage star spending the first summer in Hollywood for the talkies was enlivened when Hollywood's fairy tale about the grunion came true.

The grunion are small fish, similar to smelt. They take three, four, or five nights in succession at high tide to run. They swarm up on to the sand to spawn and after each wave brings in its quota it withdraws, leaving the squirming fish on the sands. Any one with a scorn for cold sea water at midnight and who has a bucket can fill it with fine fish by dodging the breakers and snatching the prey by hand.

Seeing Is Believing.

This tale is patiently told by the movie veterans to each newcomer from New York, who greets it with a guffaw and refuses to fall for it. Any one acquainted with other wonders, such as how a movie star can get a $15,000 car on a $100 a week salary, should not halt at believing in grunion.

The grunion verified themselves royally this week, and many of the film folk built big beach fires and roasted the delicacy.

Clara Bow made her fiance, Harry Richman, believe in grunion, by throwing a party at her Malibu beach home. Louise Fazenda left the First National studios in makeup to get down to her beach house to see that the annual call was properly received. Sue Carrol and Nick Stuart gathered a band of the young folk, and, throwing to the winds all discretion about the 8 o'clock call on the set, roasted the tasty fish by midnight fires.

Bill Beaudine was more unlucky. The director flung a midnight party, with celebrated guests, at his oceanside cottage, and all the celebrities kept the date except the grunion.

Driven Out by the Tourists.

Fads in Hollywood cafes ebb and flow. The restaurant of Armstrong & Carlton, which was the much sought eating place of Charles Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks five years ago, has been totally deserted. It closed its doors some months ago. New cafes, such as the Moscow inn and the slightly older Russian Eagle, flourish.

The Montmarte, once the place of all places to eat, where the stars gathered, is now suffering from such an invasion of tourists that the stars have been obliged to betake themselves elsewhere to lunch in comfort.

The Brown Derby, another new and popular eating place, had Gary Cooper and Lupe Valez lunching together, Gary in shirt sleeves and suspenders, shirt open at the neck, and Lupe in her Indian costume from "Tiger Rose." Gary is just back from his Montana ranch. Lupe was lamenting that Gary will be in Hollywood, making "Medals" for Paramount, while she goes to Florida for her next picture.

Miss Hurst's Geography.

Hollywood has been getting a chortle over Fanny Hurst's story, "Give the Little Girl a Big Hand," which is being filmed as Billie Dove's vehicle under the name of "The Broadway Hostess." In the story the big oil magnate goes from Texas to Fresno, Cal., to make whoopee in a night club. Geography can't be any object to Fanny, for Chicago would have been nearer to Texas than Fresno and anyway Fresno ain't that kind of a town.

A night club in Fresno is about as scarce as anything one could think of. All the folks up there do is raise raisins, the best in the country, and have a yearly raisin festival, to which they invite a movie star as king or queen of Raisin week.

A One-Reel Overture.

An innovation in one reel pictures is being offered by United Artists. This week a preview was given of "The Overture of 1812," by Tschaikowsky, presented with a pictorial background showing Napoleon's entrance to Moscow and the burning of the city by the patriotic Russians. A symphony orchestra of 70 pieces under Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld's baton played the music for the microphone.

This is the first of a series to be made by Dr. Reisenfeld, chief music master for United Artists.

Subsidies Refused.

STRASBOURG, France.—(AP)—The French cabinet this year refused to give the usual subsidies to national and municipal theaters here because the mayor and city council are all autonomists and some of them a re also communists. Frenchmen criticized the action as detrimental to the effort to teach Alsatians to use the French language.

RETURNING

GEORGE SIDNEY

He's due next Sunday night in the Woods in "Kibitzer." Mr. Sidney will by then have been a long time away from Chicago, where he hasn't performed since, early in 1924, he and Louis Mann were co-stars in "Give and Take," in the La Salle. He was soon thereafter called to Hollywood to take over the rôle of Potash in some Potash-Perlmutter films intended for the uses of the late Barney Bernard.

I UNDERSTAND that the Dorothy-Mackaill-Jack Mulhall team has been finally broken up. Jack is to have Lois Wilson for his leading woman in a new series, and Dorothy, back from her vacation in Honolulu, is starting work in "The Woman on the Jury."

GEORGE BANCROFT, who has been yachting for a couple of weeks, has started work on "The Mighty." Dorothy Revier, borrowed from Columbia, will be his leading lady.

TWENTY YEARS AGO A. J. Balaban was earning $10 a week in a Chicago woolen mill. Sept. 1 he goes to New York to take charge of the stage production department of the Fublix theaters. And this is said to be the biggest stage job in the world, involving the provision of stage entertainment for some 1,000 theaters throughout America.

The rise of these Balaban boys has been one of the wonders of the modern business world, and on Aug. 22 at the Stevens hotel a farewell dinner will be given A. J. Balaban by a civic committee at which many notables of the motion picture world will endeavor to demonstrate to the guest of honor just what they think of him.

See you tomorrow.

Wrong Number.

The motorist had an accident with his light car on the road. He limped to a telephone booth and called up the nearest garage.

"Hello," he said, "I've turned turtle. Can you do anything for me?"

"I'm afraid not," came the sweet feminine reply. "You've got the wrong number. What you want is the zoo." S. V.

Back to Nook.

A Wall street broker, desiring eleven clerks, asked the following question on an examination: "Who formed the first company?"

A bright youth, a bit puzzled, but not to be floored, wrote: "Noah successfully floated a company while the rest of the world was in liquidation." His application was accepted. K. G.

Polo Tournament Calls Out Sports Lovers

NEW GRANDSTAND AT ONWENTSIA POLO FIELD.

MRS. A. G. SHENSTONE, MRS. CHARLES C. HAFFNER JR., MRS. STUART H. OTIS, MISS ANGELA JOHNSTON, and MRS JAY N. WHIPPLE.

MRS. MELVIN P. WAMBOLDT, MRS. JOHN HAWKINS, MRS. JAMES HERBERT MITCHELL, and MRS. WILLIAM R. ODELL JR.

THE inter-circuit polo championship tournament was played during the last week at Onwentsia, where a new grandstand with a blue and gold striped roof, a bleachers, open boxes, and parking spaces have been constructed. The spectators at the opening on Monday afternoon included Mrs. Melvin P. Wamboldt, Mrs. John Hawkins, Mrs. James Herbert Mitchell, Mrs. William R. Odell Jr., Mrs. A. G. Shenstone, who is visiting from London, England; Mrs. Charles C. Haffner Jr., Mrs. Stuart H. Otis, Miss Angela Johnston, and Mrs. Jay N. Whipple.

Zuloaga Is at Work on Picture of Mrs. Garrett

Ambassador's Wife Visited Here Recently.

By Mme. X.

ONE of the memorable social events of last spring was the visit to one of Chicago's most conspicuous bachelors, Eames MacVeagh, of two noted women of the great world, Vittoria Colonna, Princess Chatani, Duchess de Teano [these are the titles of one woman] of Rome, Italy, and Mrs. John W. Garrett of Baltimore, U. S. A. They were much entertained by their host and his friends and made a charming impression on all who met them. The prince achieved a great hit with American of the sterner sex by announcing that the most interesting product of our civilization was our business men. It was the first time that they had been discovered. The American woman has long been the subject of song and fable. So have our California redwoods, Niagara falls, and the Grand cañon, but it took a descendant of Michaelangelo's exquisite friend to show this intelligent discrimination. No less intelligent, discriminating, and charming than the princess is her fellow guest, Mrs. Garrett. Therefore, when the latter's husband was recently appointed by President Hoover ambassador to Italy all who had met her here felt that from every point of view it was a happy selection for an important post. Mr. Garrett is one of our all too small band of trained diplomatists, having made our foreign affairs his specialty for years. Among other such posts was the embassy at the Argentine republic, which he filled successfully a few years ago. Both the Garretts are linguists, always an advantage in these positions. They are also cultivated, well read, and generally delightful acquisitions in any circle in which they may find themselves.

The June musicals which Mrs. Garrett gives each year at her Baltimore residence, Evergreen House, are the chief musical events of their kind there. For a week they fill the pavilion in her gardens daily with music lovers. Her place is a spacious and lovely enclosure set well within the town limits of Baltimore.

Knows Many Celebrities.

Mrs. Garrett knows intimately many famous people; including Mme. Lucrezia Bori, whom she visited here three years ago in a cottage the diva occupied on the northern edge of Highland Park. Mrs. Garrett is abroad just now in Spain, where Zuloaga, the great Spanish painter, is making a portrait of her. They started this in Paris, but found the French capital too hot for successful work, so adjourned to his villa set in the hills of northern Spain. The portrait reproduced in this section of the W. G. N. is, I think, an earlier work by him. In it she wears a Spanish costume in which she looks every inch a native of the Iberian peninsula. Her type is animated; her coloring richly brunette.

As the mistress of the American embassy at Rome she will fill an important post and will be a great addition to the social life there. The society of the Eternal City is one of the most cosmopolitan in Europe. Besides the large diplomatic circle people of all countries and many outlooks gather there. Some are drawn thither by the city's wealth of historic and artistic treasures, some by the climate and the fact that living is easy and not so expensive as in other world capitals, though this theory has been a little upset of late years. Rome, like other European centers, having grown more expensive for Americans than at any time within the memory of man.

Others make their homes in Rome just for the delight of living in the midst of so many lovely things and places. It seems far removed from the hurrying business of the world today, though its present rulers are doing wonders to put it on the map industrially.

All the Wealth of the Past.

As an abode Rome offers much to the cultivated and imaginative. It has had a tradition for consecutive existence and culture for four thousand years. The foundations of its modern buildings disturb the mighty stones of temples and dwellings erected centuries ago. Yet, in spite of this great age it is as youthful in spirit as it was when Romulus and Remus first put the rude stones that marked its outer edges.

Modern Italy is trying an experiment in government which runs counter to all of our long cherished theories as to what makes for the greatest happiness of the greatest number. If Mussolini succeeds eventually in proving the value of his creed we shall all have to make a profound change in our theories and beliefs. To do what Italy is trying to do is a proof of a youthful, even if, as some think, a misguided spirit.

Apropos of nothing at all, a rather amusing and well vouched for story came recently from England about the custom there of direct reward for political services. It is connected with two of the most conspicuous personages in today's doings there, Lord Birkenhead and Lloyd George. In return for promised financial aid during a political campaign some years ago when Lloyd George was in power, he promised F. E. Smith, a brilliant legal light and able politician, a peerage. Mr. Smith chose the name Birkenhead for this title.

On being pressed by Lloyd George for the promised check, although the title had not yet been conferred, Mr. Smith promptly said, "Why, certainly," and made it out, signing it "Birkenhead," thereby, as the Britisher remarked, showing that a title did not make a gentleman, also that—well, that "Taffy was a Welshman."

Made a Baronet.

A matter of interest to his many friends and admirers was the recent raising of Sir Robert Baden-Powell from a knighthood to a baronetcy. The exact difference in altitude I don't know, but it is considered more desirable to be a baronet than to be a knight. When Sir Robert was given the right, some years ago, to write himself Maj. Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell, it was a tardy recognition of his great services to his country in his conduct of the heroic and valiant defense of Mafeking during the Boer war in 1901-02.

Also it was a tribute to his service to the empire in the creation and founding of the Boy Scouts, an enterprise, which he conceived, initiated, and fostered and which has spread all over the globe. It is not too much to say that this is the most important organization of the youth ever achieved. It would be hard to overestimate the value of the high ideals and standards promoted in the coming generations by the Boy Scouts.

Those whose memoirs date back nearly three decades, will remember the wild celebration in London when the news came through of the raising of the siege of Mafeking, a town in South Africa which was beleaguered many months by the Boers. London went wild that night and Robert Baden-Powell could have had anything he wanted from his fellow countrymen at that moment. But when time elapsed and it was found that he had permitted postage stamps to be printed with his image and used to send mail out of the beleaguered town, the conservative government then in power felt that an indignity to the royal family had been perpetrated. Up to then their likenesses were the only portraits adorning postage stamps. Postage stamps knew not the images of mere civilians, even if those commoners had undergone great dangers and hardships and won great victories for their country. This is said to be the reason why Maj. Gen. Robert Baden-Powell waited nearly two decades for the privilege of writing himself as Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell.

To a dyed-in-the-wool American such titles are beginning to look quaint and old fashioned. Kings and queens are almost out of date. Look to what pass Mussolini has reduced that mild monarch, King Victor Emmanuel of Italy. His own son, Crown Prince Umberto, is rebelling from the obscurity into which he and his father are being shoved by the amazing ex-school teacher. When will the latter stretch out his hand and make himself Benito primo, head of the new dynasty of the Mussolini? Perhaps he, too, thinks titles are out of date and that of dictator is higher than that of king.

Mrs. Martin Returns.

Mrs. Horace Martin's friends in this part of the world are all delighted that she is returning to make Lake Forest her summer residence. On the death of her husband, some years ago, she sold her house on Mayflower road to Lloyd Laflin. Since that time she has returned several times for the warm season leasing different abodes in the community. She is induced to make her present decision not only by the fact that she has many friends in Lake Forest, but also because of Ravinia's splendid grand opera.

Recently she bought a piece of property in what might be called the Holt grove, a lovely wooded square almost touching the town's chief business section, yet as remote from the world as thick foliage can make it. The tract is bordered on one side by Green Bay road; on two others by Deerpath and Westminster avenues. The William E. Clows Jr.'s beautiful new house is on the southwest corner of this square. Also situated in the grove are the residences of the Albert Potters and the Randolph Owsleys. Mrs. Dorr Bradley is planning to build soon on one of the pieces of property set in this grove.

Mrs. Martin's plans for a house sound most charming. She has always been a student and great admirer of the English poet, John Keats. When a campaign was on foot five or six years ago to raise money to help the movement in England to buy his house in Hampstead, London, and make of it a shrine and museum of Keatsiana, Mrs. Martin accepted the position of Chicago chairman to assist this enterprise. Alfred Hamill was local chairman and between them they raised a tidy sum to aid the project.

Therefore, when she decided to make for herself a home here that should resemble the quaint and historic shrine to Keats, it seems especially fitting.

Keats was a great admirer of Italy and spent many years in Rome, ultimately dying there. His home in the Piazza di Spagna bears a tablet to this effect and his grave in the Protestant cemetery bears this inscription:

"Here lies one whose name was writ in water." Under which melancholy phrase his name is cut on the broad stone that covers it. So it was quite natural that when he built himself a home in Hampstead, at that time a suburb of London, he should have selected an Italian style of architecture. It stands today, a picturesque white brick structure, with a sloping, tiled roof, suggesting an abode in north Italy, such as can be found on the shores of Lake Como. This style of house will look charming repeated in the quiet seclusion of a Lake Forest grove.

Bridge Players Gather.

A merry house party is now going on at Tor Court, Pittsfield, Mass., where Mrs. Warren Salisbury is following a custom of several years by entertaining a small group of friends with whom she is accustomed to play "bridge" during the winter season in Chicago. Mrs. Samuel T. Chase and Mrs. Keane Addington left Lake Forest ten days ago for Tor Court, and were joined there by Mrs. Lockwood Honoré. All four are expert "contractors," and well used to each other's game, so they will put in a lively and cheerful fortnight in that lovely place. Mrs. Salisbury's house is one of the handsomest in that region. It overlooks Lake Onteora and has a fine view of old Graylock, one of the loftiest of the Berkshire hills.

The modern form of bridge, generally known as "contract," is quite different from the old game of bridge whist and about as much like the grandpa of the game, good old-fashioned whist, as a modern man's golf suit is like great-grandfather's high stock, ruffled shirt, long skirted coat, and tight trousers. In those long dead days whist was a gentleman's game, to be played soberly and studiously. Stakes were customary, though not inevitable, and the play was never what you call high. Today what is called low stakes would seem confiscatory to those ancestors of the present card players. To play with the "contract" devotee one must have an invincible card sense, a good temper (even a mild disposition), and a well equipped pocketbook. The first question when you sit down to a table of players of contract bridge is:

"Do you play the Vanderbilt convention?"

It happens to be a mode of playing which it is said that no Vanderbilt plays, and some of them don't even know it. That question settled, the cards are rapidly dealt, fiercely clutched, closely studied, quickly played, with a few muttered objurgations, and before you know it the game is over and you are harshly questioned as to why you played certain cards in certain ways, cards of whose existence you have no recollection.

The proper answer is quickly to toss back a gibe as to a deuce of spades wantonly thrown away by your caviling partner, or an omitted lead that would have thrown the game to your side of the quartet instead of handing it to your exulting adversaries. There would be fewer divorces today if husbands and wives were never permitted to play at the same table.

Some of the more adventurous bridgites will make no bid lower than that of "game," and, failing this, play round after round of "hotsies." If you don't know what a hotsy is you don't know anything of this day's swift pace toward bankruptcy. It's figuring deals in scores consisting of a thousand or two each hand. At 2½ cents a point a hand can add or take from the player anywhere from $50 to $100 and more.

"Contract" Is Aptly Named.

"Contract" is a good name for the game as it contracts your heart throbs, your purse and your outlook. This account of the game is written by one who'd like to play it seven days a week, but, owing to the force of circumstances over which she has absolutely no control, can only indulge herself occasionally. Each time she plays it fate gives her a good, heavy swat and says in everything but words, "My dear, you ought not to play cards for money that you haven't got."

If anything would cure the writer of this misbegotten desire to play this fearsome game it would be the fact that to do so evenings, which is her leisure time, would deprive her of the chance to go to Ravinia, which is the great privilege of north shore dwellers. This would be a real deprivation. No other community in the world has such a priceless possession. It is one of which people of all walks of life avail themselves. This quality of universality of appeal and opportunity is one which Louis Eckstein, Ravinia's deus ex machina, likes to emphasize. Ravinia draws to it the well to do and those of small means. There the millionaire rubs shoulders with the day laborer. The society woman in low necked evening dress sits next to the young girl in sports attire. The musically inclined hobnobs with the benighted citizen who is gradually getting to be a real lover of music—for persistent attendance on the fine concerts and splendid operas which Chicagoans can enjoy cannot fail, in the long run, to make us what we Americans are not by nature: a really musical nation; and by-go doing open to us what an eastern newspaper writer, quoted last week in the W-G-N, termed, "An adventure of the senses, where voluptuous scenery, voluptuous costumes, voluptuous music and voluptuous voices all combine to produce a pleasant sort of intoxication that has nothing to do with profundity whatever." He might also have said that it was an intoxication with no painful physical after effects, such as a dizzy head and a qualmish stomach.

Two New Works Presented.

Ravinia has presented two new operatic works this summer which have attracted large and enthusiastic audiences. Puccini's, "La Rondine," and Respighi's, "La Campana Sommersa," or "Sunken Bell," as it reads in English. Both of them were given brilliantly and in such a manner as to make it seem impossible for any other set of artists to reach the high standard achieved by this company. Certainly no one could ever equal Miss Bori in the former opera, while in the latter Mme. Rethberg and Martinelli reached amazing heights in singing.

Ravinia was a much more suitable and sympathetic setting for the "Sunken Bell" than was New York's Metropolitan opera house. The sylvan surroundings of that classic myth fitted in so perfectly with those and scenes of that fantastic story that it made the performance an ensemble musical stunt successfully accomplished. Many who had heard the opera in New York without any special enjoyment found themselves in a much more sympathetic mood here and changed their opinion of the piece.

It was to present this opera last spring in Rome that Martinelli and Respighi were both commanded by Mussolini, while a pressing invitation was also given Mme. Rethberg, which she accepted. The occasion was one of the greatest musical events in Italy for many a moon.

THIS interesting portrait of Mrs. John W. Garrett of Baltimore, wife of the new ambassador to Italy, was painted by Zuloaga, the famous Spanish artist, who is now at work on another picture of her. Like all his works, it has a purely Spanish flair.

Horse Show and Polo Enliven the 'Dog Days'

By Mildred Jaklon.

ABOUT a fortnight more of these "dog days" and society will be returning to stir things up a bit.

These aren't dog days for the polo players, however. They are having a most strenuous time. All last week there was the intercircuit championship tournament at Onwentsia, with the finals being played yesterday afternoon [see sports section for the results], and this week there is to be the 12-goal tournament at the Oak Brook club at Hinsdale.

It is a little difficult to assimilate these polo classifications all at once, but as far as an uninitiated observer can tell, the contest at Onwentsia was strictly a team affair and the matches at Oak Brook will be played by teams made up of players from various regular teams. Mrs. Paul Butler, wife of the captain of the Oak Brook team, must needs go west for her hay fever, and so will not be on hand to help entertain the visiting players. The visitors don't go in for much entertaining, however, as they feel it is necessary to keep in training for the games.

Wedding of the Week.

It probably doesn't seem like a "dog days" season for Miss Patricia O'Gorman either, for her wedding to Louis Edward Hart Jr. is to take place on Wednesday, and there are many prenuptial parties being given out at Wheaton, where the bride-to-be and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold N. Scott of 325 Fullerton parkway, are staying for the summer and where the wedding is to take place.

The service is to be read at 4:30 o'clock at the Trinity Episcopal church, and will be followed by a reception at the Casino of the Chicago Golf club.

Junior Horse Show.

Another event for the week on the society calendar is the junior horse show to be given by Maj. and Mrs. William A. Rafferty at Martindale farm in Highland Park on Saturday afternoon. The committee for the horse show is composed of various of the youthful riders of the town, all of whom have distinguished themselves as equestrians. They include Fred Hodgdon Jr., Isabelle Tennant, Martha Jane Thomas, Jack White, Theodora Winters, and Mary Wood, and the advisory committee is Mrs. C. C. Hopkins, Martin Insull, Maj. Rafferty, Marshall E. Sampsell, Mrs. William E. Swift, W. G. Tennant, and Gen. Robert E. Wood.

British Players to Voice Plaint Against Talkies

LONDON.—(AP)—The grievances of British musicians against the talkie films and American jazz bands will be voiced in a resolution to be presented to the sixty-first annual Trades Union congress in Belfast Sept. 2.

The musicians' union will ask the government to "make it compulsory that wherever such films or mechanical devices are presented, a substantial part of the program shall be accompanied by a human orchestra."

A further resolution will seek to place the same restriction on "foreign musicians, especially Americans, entering this country as are placed on British musicians entering others."

The agenda of the congress will further include general discussions and resolutions dealing with various aspects of workmen's compensation, factory regulation, wages, hours, and conditions of labor.

One resolution will be offered condemning the policy of reconditioning slum dwellings and urging instead the building of new houses and the improvement of transportation facilities to enable workers to travel to and from their employment.

The miners' federation will propose the appointment of a committee to deal with the question of reorganization in the principal industries on the basis of one union for each industry, and the Transport and General Workers' union will seek complete reorganization of the various transport services.

French Medics Try to Curb Foreigners

PARIS.—(AP)—French medical students are trying to prevent the government from granting special privileges to foreign students.

They object, in a petition sent the minister of public instruction, to a proposed decree enabling foreign students, naturalized French, to qualify by presenting school certificates from their own countries instead of taking the French baccalaureat, equivalent to about two years in American colleges.

They also object to foreign students being able to avoid military service by becoming naturalized after their thirtieth birthday, thereby getting the benefits both of foreign and French citizenship.

These objections are based chiefly upon fear of rapid increase in the number of licensed physicians, already considered too numerous to make prosperity certain.

Sable Farm Succeeds.

MOSCOW.—(AP)—The fur farm established last autumn near Moscow has met with special success in that for the first time sables have bred in captivity. Ten young were born to the 54 sables on the farm. Minks, ermines, raccoons, and foxes also were produced.

Carlsbad Draws Notables from All the World

By Another Name It's Just as Popular.

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CARLSBAD, Czecho-Slovakia, Aug. 7.—Many of our countrymen, some of them well known globe trotters who are often seen in Paris, are again taking the celebrated Carlsbad waters. While this resort, in what was once Bohemia, still shows a trace of German influence both in language and personnel, there are also marks of the growing national consciousness of Czecho-Slovakians.

The Czech name for the resort, Karlovy, is now much employed in central Europe as well as in London and in Paris, but it often confuses the traveler in his quest for the ancient Carlsbad. Everywhere, also, the word kaiser is replaced by the word, "geysir." The great statue of the late emperor of Austria, Franz Josef, in the center of the town, has been taken down and has been replaced by a statue of Beethoven.

Increase in Building.

Along with this growth of Czech atmosphere is a remarkable increase in building. New villas and apartment houses are rapidly being erected on the available land around the town. None of these changes, however, affect the agreeableness of the ancient town, or, it is almost needless to add, diminish the efficacy of its healing waters.

A quite cosmopolitan group can be seen at 7 o'clock each morning taking the prescribed long walk with cup in hand, sipping as they go to the steaming waters so rich in soda, iron, and sulphur. The effect of this strict regimen on the high and obdurate livers is soon reflected in the smiling faces of the patients.

If many of the sufferers do not at once burst into song, Carlsbad is, nevertheless this year as hitherto, attracting such celebrated musicians as Richard Strauss and Fritz Kreisler. The Kreislers are stopping nearby at Marienbad as the guests of Mrs. Leon Graves, and motor the Carlsbad. Mrs. Kreisler has been seriously ill, but she is now much better.

Plenty of Music.

At the famous Carlsbad spring the orchestra plays all the morning, while in the afternoon there are several good bands in the principal gardens. On Wednesday afternoons the concerts in the gardens always draw a brilliant assemblage to hear several symphonic poems by Smetana, such as his "Vltava," also his "Sarka," not often heard outside of central Europe.

No one can stay long in Carlsbad without realizing how proud the Czechs are of their national composer, Smetana, whose "Battered Bride," heard for the first time in Paris a few months ago at the Opera Comique, elicited great enthusiasm.

Several well known American bankers are now in Carlsbad. Jules Bache has just completed a cure there, as have also his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Miller. Later they are going to Le Touquat.

James Speyer is among the regulars, and also Mr. and Mrs. James A. Burden of New York. Emil Winter, the Pittsburgh banker, and his wife, are also here, and acknowledge having spent twenty-five summers at Carlsbad. Miss Anne Morgan, who is with Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, has just completed a cure at Marienbad. They are returning to Paris, and then the former is going directly to Scotland where the shooting season is calling some of our compatriots from the continent.

Plans for Saratoga.

Bernard Baruch is joining his family here. Mr. Baruch not only takes an annual Carlsbad cure, but he has had experts make a thorough analysis of the waters and a study of general conditions with the intention of promoting a scheme to turn Saratoga Springs into an American Carlsbad. Some of the leading Carlsbad physicians are seriously considering the proposition of going to Saratoga, where certain of the properties of the waters are supposed to be similar to those of Carlsbad.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hutton and their daughter, Eleanor, have succeeded in taking off a few pounds at Carlsbad and have started home. Also, Gurnee Munn and his wife, whose fondness for animals is well known, have left with a flock of canaries to add to their thirty-five dogs and the several goats which they have shipped to Le Touquet, where they have a villa for their children.

Formerly Visited by Royalty.

One of the most exclusive hotels here is the Koenigsvilla, where the imperial family of Austria formerly stopped. It was once the favorite spot of the tragic Empress Elizabeth, who never missed a summer there until she was assassinated in 1897.

When the empress first came to Koenigsville the hotel was surrounded by a meadow. Like all having a cure there, she used to take her early morning walk and have breakfast in the woods, where she had a glass of milk fresh from the cow. It is said that one of her eccentricities was a fondness for stable odors, and that she insisted on having her morning milk where she could smell the cows.

2 Million Shortage Found in Books of Woman Financier

PARIS.—(AP)—It took many months for experts to agree on a shortage of $2,000,000 in the accounts of the half dozen allied corporations that closed their doors when Madame Marthe Hanau, get-rich-quick woman financier, was arrested last December.

The liabilities are given in a 546-page report as a little more than $7,000,000 and the assets as a bit more than $5,000,000. That takes into account a million dollars Madame Hanau had to her personal account.

People had almost forgotten the affair which late last year stirred parliament both as a matter of public interest and of politics, for there were charges that two cabinet ministers were involved. It turned out that Jean Hennessy, minister of agriculture, was one of those "mentioned" because he was the chief backer of the social organ, "Le Quotidien," a paper of wide circulation, which farmed out its financial page to the Hanau crowd and published the "financial advice" which the Hanau high pressure salesmen wrote.

Madame Hanau still is in Saint Lazare prison and many of her staff also are behind bars, awaiting indictment. They have had hearings before the investigating magistrates, but until the experts' report had been digested the exact form of the charges could not be determined.

The report alleges that Madame Hanau or her agents sold without authority many millions of francs' worth of securities sent to her organizations by clients. Large profits were promised customers and many of these testified they were paid promptly.

Madame Hanau maintained her affairs were conducted honestly and that police action caused a shrinkage of assets, although she denied there was any deficit.

This woman money master owned her own office building and had the collaboration of many eminent persons in her principal newspaper, which was supposed to specialize in peace.

Workers Gladly Buy Their Jobs at Monte Carlo

MONTE CARLO.—(AP)—Working without salary and paying from $100 to $400 yearly for the privilege is the situation of thousands of employés on the Riviera, especially at this resort.

Ye there is money in it for the worker. It costs approximately $500 for a man to prove himself through the long course the local casino gives for prospective croupiers. If the fails to pass the final tests he has lost his money. If he passes he becomes a croupier—without salary. But his income from tips averages from $500 to $600 monthly during six months of the year and from $200 to $300 for the other six months.

In adition he gets two months' vacation, with $200 a month allowance, special house rental, and the opportunity of buying everything from an automobile to a pound of butter at cost, plus 5 per cent, at the market run by the casino for the benefit of its 3,800 employés.

As a result of this system most of the croupiers at Monte Carlo are several times franc millionaires.

For $50 a month a good waiter may get a position in any of the de luxe restaurants. He pays the money to the head waiter and gives him 25 per cent of all tips.

All these employés have threatened to strike if put on salaries.

Child Artist Shows Paintings in London

LONDON.—(AP)—Peggy Somerville, 11, is holding her regular annual art exhibition here with 62 paintings on the line, including a number of gypsy scenes.

Her first exhibition was held eight years ago under the auspices of the Royal Drawing society. Last year her oil paintings were all sold on the first day.

Painting comes natural to Peggy. Her father is Charles Somerville, a landscape and portrait artist, and her four brothers and 14 year old sister also are painters. She is a phenomenally rapid worker, some of her best oils having been turned out in half an hour.

As might be expected, she hates arithmetic, but likes music, literature and dancing.

IN THE WRONG POCKET

In the Feminine Realm

THREE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-TWO applications for patents were filed by women in England last year.

Women hold at least 25 per cent of the postmasterships of the third and fourth classes in Iowa.

Because women have proved so efficient in police work in Poland, the government is training sixty more for the service.

Among the postwar women millionaires in France there are quite a number who made their wealth from the most arduous kind of manual labor—farming, pig raising, metal dealing and even rag picking.

Mountess Margit Bethlen, wife of the prime minister of Hungary, is a noted dramatic writer and producer.

A campaign in favor of woman suffrage is being actively pushed in Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

Miss Frances Shakerly of Trigony, Scotland, who hast just celebrated her ninety-eighth birthday, is still producing paintings. She reads and writes without the aid of glasses. She has taught in Sunday school continuously for 78 years.

Miss Mary Joyce West, aged 22 and armless, of Leicester, England, is completing plans for making a tour of Europe in her leg-propelled cripple's chair. She will make the tour pay for itself by selling handwork fancy articles which she has made herself. She plans to work her way through France, Belgium, Switzerland, and Italy.

Madame Lucie Dejardin is the first woman to be elected to a seat in the lower chamber of the Belgian government. She defeated her communist opponent, Comrade von Overstraeten, and is an ardent supporter of all measures tending to lighten the burden of her sex.

Thirty-one women, ranging from 18 to 40 years of age, are at the controls of airplanes at ten airports and flying schools which surround Los Angeles, Calif. They are flying for instruction, soloing in rented planes or taking afternoon flights for recreation. Four of the feminine flyers own and pilot their own ships.

The old styles for women in Turkey are rapidly disappearing and modern styles of the New World are taking their place. In place of the old baggy trousers which they used to wear, the present pantaloons are minus the bag. A Norfolk jacket, with cream silk shirt, soft collar and tie, completes the ensemble.

Grand Duchess Marie of Russia Goes Into Trade

Takes Job as Style Adviser in Smart Shop.

By Nancy Randolph.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—[Special.]—Having been a guest in New York early in the year, and a much sought after one at that, her royal highness, the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, is returning—to go into trade. Her decision doesn't come as a great surprise to the noted matrons who entertained the daughter of the cousin of the late czar, for it has been no secret that the family funds have long been conspicuous by their absence.

In fact, many of the most notable members of the Romanoff circles have been almost in want. Few of them have had as good fortune as Prince Serge Obolensky, who married Alice Astor and her millions, or the Grand Duke Dmitri, brother of the Grand Duchess Marie, who married Audrey Emery.

A Glorified "Job."

Still, the grand duchess is going into business in a fashion that is decidedly swagger, for she has accepted a position as style advisor to one of the largest of the Fifth avenue dress-making shops. It will be more a glorified position than a "job," with a salary quite commensurate with the importance of her highness—and, of course, the canny business people expect the value of Marie's name to offset the sum paid her.

Even in the establishment where she is to preside, Marie won't be alone. Prince Matchabelli has been with the same firm for some time, in charge of his own perfumes, and two lesser princesses, one a cousin of Obolensky, are among the mannikins.

As a "job," Marie's new place is quite the thing. At least three times each year she will go abroad to see what is happening in the world of fashion, and visit with the notables of the European capitals. Here in town she is expected to take the lead in the Russian colony, and with the support of Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. William B. Leeds [Princess Xenia] and Princess Obolensky, bring that somewhat woe-begone colony into a brilliant social limelight.

At any rate, considering how dull the winter will be, the arrival of the grand duchess may be a well needed blessing. And, of course, she will never have to work so hard that she won't be able to devote enough time to matters social.

May Leave for Paris.

Mrs. Frederick Martin Davies is somewhat lost these days. Just at present she has been the guest of Mrs. Edward Van Ingen at Southampton, and even the luncheons and dinners for her haven't kept her from an inclination to take the first boat for Paris.

Mrs. Martin, of course, is the mother of Emily O'Neill Davies Vanderbilt Thayer—or more prosaically, Mrs. Sigourney Thayer, who has once more totally immersed herself in the delights of Paris.

All the while Emily was Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt, and lived in Paris, her mother kept close by. Now she feels the separation, and Southampton gossips are of the opinion that it won't be at all long before Mrs. Martin packs her odds and ends and departs for the Paris apartment and a keen outlook on just what Emily is doing.

Polo in the Offing.

What with visiting Englishmen and natives arriving by every boat, town is getting simply all excited about the polo which the first weeks of September will bring. The open championships at the Meadowbrook club in Westbury will be the mecca of the fashionables, and despite the fact it will not be an officially international matter, the followers of the game will be out in force.

Meadowbrook's field is famous. This summer's heat, however, has done no end of destruction to turf, and just as the tennis courts at Forrest Hills are in poor condition, so the turf at Meadowbrook is far from that emerald green that—mixed, metaphorically speaking—is the very pink of condition. However, with good watering between now and September the powers that be hope to have the number one field in perfect condition.

What with Sanford, Guest, the Roarks, the Hoppings and others now here, the polo will bring out practically every player of note in this section. There is much interest in whether or not Devereux Milburn, acclaimed by the British as well as Americans as the greatest back that ever lived, will play. Down at Aiken in the spring of '28, Milburn took a bad fall that fractured his collar bone. Since then he has not played, this year.

Saratoga Season Is Gay.

Every one is at Saratoga still. This last week the season reached its height and from now until the end of the month the gayety will continue unabated. Most of the cottages are occupied, dinners and luncheons galore are being given, the horse sales draw vast crowds, and the night life goes on apace, notwithstanding the presence of legal authorities with an ear cocked for the click of the roulette wheels.

Harry Payne Whitney's guests this week included C. K. McCormick, Maj. Louis A. Beard and Col. R. H. Williams.

Hot Headed Cubans Still Resorting to Duels Despite Ban

HAVANA.—(AP)—The famous old Plaza de Armas in Havana, where Spanish dons once took wrongs, actual or imaginary, for settlement by duel, is now but a mere park wherein the aged bask in the sun and the rising generation play beneath the gigantic "ceiba" trees that once filtered early morning light on bared blades or shining pistols.

The Plaza de Armas passed into history as a dueling field some ten years ago, when the Cuban government ruled against settlement of differences between gentlemen on the field of honor and imposed drastic punishment for violators.

The law reads that there shall be no dueling, but the proud blood of Cubans demands personal satisfaction for injuries or insults. The habits of generations of Spanish grandees have not yet been eclipsed by the swift strides of modernity in Cuba. Dueling remains, but is seldom heard of publicly.

Cloaked figures continue to make their stealthy way through the still morning hours to isolated and secluded spots near Havana, there to settle grievances by ball or blade. An automobile whisking through Havana streets in the early morning hours may often convey a mortally wounded man who has expiated his wrongs on the field of honor. Entrance into a hospital is under the guise of an operation; death under the report of septic poisoning. So it is said.

There is an occasional report of a duel in Havana newspapers. But it is considered more expedient and sensible to ignore dueling than it is to trace down the protagonists and thereby open wide an official eye now slyly closed to sanguinary settlement of personal quarrels.

Fencing academies flourish in Havana. Young men and old practice there for the express purpose of "keeping fit." One of the most efficient fencing schools in all of Cuba is at the Havana Reporters club. Cuban reporters who are allowed the privilege of personal expression and considerable editorial comment in news stories are often principles in encounters.

Politicians may be classified second, for they often enter into heated argument on the street and end in a palm grove with pistol or blade. Recently two federal senators entered into an impassioned argument which found its release on the field of honor. The demand for personal satisfaction was entered on the floor of the senate. A mere scratch erased the incident. Satisfaction had been rendered and the men are now on friendly terms. The law passed up the incident.

Cuba may lay claim to having blotted out dueling, but it is always wise to know how to parry and thrust, aim and fire before offering insult to the true Cuban, who, although boyish, blithe, and debonair, can often become bold with the call of the centuries when it comes to blotting out insults in blood.

MY GREATEST THRILL

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

An Awful Scare.

I can easily recall the night when I received my greatest thrill. I was then 12, and my family lived on the outskirts of the city. The grocer, butcher, etc., were all located nearer town, and I, as errand boy of the family, was obliged to travel the intervening distance frequently.

At night the trip was fearsome. The streets were unlighted and lonely and every sound instilled fright. Usually these noises meant nothing, but only served to make the trip more distasteful.

One night I was returning from the grocer's and was running, as usual. I had noted nothing startling when I passed a few moments earlier, but now, at the darkest of the shadowy spots, the glimpse of a huddled form in the middle of the untraveled road seemed to freeze the marrow in my bones. Somehow I marshaled enough courage to take a step nearer, which revealed that it was a MAN!

I remember that he lay motionless and still, but I tarried no longer. My heart stopped beating, it seemed, and cold shivers chilled me through and through, but my legs didn't fail me, and I reached home in almost no time. So frightened was I that I made no mention of the incident to any one until weeks later. I heard and knew nothing as to who the man was and how he came to be there. M. W. J.

Two Glowing Eyes.

When a lad of 6 we lived on a farm in the west and I went one day in the early fall with my father and older brother, aged 17, to our timber lot some ten miles away to get a load of wood. The distance being so great, it was the custom to remain over night and fell some extra trees. This we thought great fun.

Before turning in my brother told some bear stories and said: "You would wish you hadn't come if a big bear or something should come along in the night."

I tried to say bravely, "I ain't afraid of bears," but just the same it kept me awake awhile, and it was not long until the barking of a dog or something else awoke me. On sitting up I saw two glowing eyes, like balls of fire, just beyond the range of the dying embers of our camp fire.

Too frightened to shout, I nudged my brother and whispered to him in trembling voice, "Tom, wake up; there's a big bear or tiger or something out there." I was glad to find he seemed a little scared himself, but just as he was about leveling his double barreled shotgun at the two eyes, the something went "m-e-w" and a big tom cat stepped out within the light of our camp fire—a visitor from a farm house not far away.

In later years I shot real bears in the Canadians wilds but was never as much frightened by them as by the two glowing eyes. F. A. M.

A Great Game.

To me nothing is more thrilling than a football game, and my greatest thrill came at the game played between Notre Dame and Southern California at Chicago, Nov. 26th, '27. The thrill as those blanket clad players ran on to the field, and the cheers of some hundred thousand people sent a thrill through every one present.

From the time the ball soared into the air at the kick-off and fell into the hands of a receiver—'till the final whistle sent the people away, some happy, (I know I was) there was one thrill after another. I must say that day had the greatest thrill for me. C. E.

In a Tornado.

My father, with his wife and four children, had recently settled on our Iowa farm, having just come from Vermont, where "twisters" were unknown and unheard of. One July afternoon we children stood transfixed as a fairy-like scene rose from the western horizon—gorgeous castles with domes and pillars of pure gold piled one on another, higher and even higher. As they reached the zenith a sharp flash of lightning made us scurry for the house.

Scarcely were we inside with father and mother when a giant hand reached down, grasped our perfectly good new house, lifted it from its foundation high into the air, and then set it down again—but slightly to the east of its original position, so that the east side of the house rested on the ground and the west side on the west foundation wall. So neatly was it done that we were not even jolted from our places.

There was a savage roar outside—we huddled together in terror. Again the giant power grasped the house, again lifting it high in the air, tearing it into kindling wood, and carrying it and practically every stick of furniture, every household furnishing into a region so remote that they were never seen again; while the six human beings and the dog were gently lowered to the ground near to where the house had stood.

We were all together and none were hurt, save for slight bruises, but we were all homeless. The whole affair lasted not more than three minutes, but the thrill has persisted through these fifty intervening years. C. G. G.

Absolute Powers of Pope Shown by Vatican City Law

VATICAN CITY.—(AP)—The absolute power of the pope in church affairs is further emphasized by the fundamental laws of twenty-one articles promulgated for Vatican City following the ratification of the lateran treaties with Italy.

By the fundamental laws the legislation and administration of Vatican City, together with all judicial powers therein, are made to depend directly and only upon the pontiff. Pius XI. designates himself alone as the fountain head of power and the source of law within the new political entity.

Thus the laws with reference to Vatican City bear out the teaching of canon law, which holds that the pope is the supreme head of the church, subject to no control from outside. The college of cardinals comes into play only in consistories which approve new cardinals, in the conclave which elects a new pope, in councils wherein the pope proclaims a new doctrine, and in committees and congregations appointed for specific duties. Canon law say the pope is infallible when, in conjunction with the college of cardinals, he proclaims a dogma of faith or morals.

The fundamental laws start off by saying: "The supreme pontiff, sovereign of the state of Vatican City, has the fullness of the legislative, executive, and judicial powers." Should the throne of St. Peter be vacant, the college of cardinals has power to make laws only during that vacancy, and even then those laws will not continue valid unless confirmed by the succeeding pontiff.

All those powers confirmed to the pope more than 300 years ago in the canon law code of 1607 are carefuly preserved. The powers delegated to other dignitaries are circumscribed and made to hang on the pleasure of the holy father.

For instance, the power to make particular regulations to cover specific codes may be intrusted by the pope to the governor of the Vatican state—Commendatore Serafini. But the governor is responsible to the pope and no one else, and receives his orders directly from the pontiff.

The judicial power is more specifically delegated to other bodies; but even here the pope retains the upper hand. In civil cases the judicial power within the Vatican City will be exercised by three courts—a tribunal of first instance, the Roman rota sitting as a court of appeal, and the supreme tribunal as a court of last resort.

The privilege of appointing judges of these courts rests solely with the pontiff. He has also the right to remove judges at will.

The pardoning power resides also in the pope alone. The fundamental laws declare there remain reserved to the pontiff "the faculty of granting pardon, amnesty, indults, and condonements."

The fundamental laws are another step in the centuries old contest of power between the papacy and the cardinals. This contest was aired in several councils of the church, wherein the cardinals sought to circumscribe the supreme power of the pope and make it depend upon them. In some cases kings and emperors, irritated by the vigorous stand of the pope, sided with the cardinals. But today the pope is undisputed master.

Jury System for Whole of Poland

WARSAW.—(AP)—A unified penal code providing for the introduction of the jury system in criminal cases and a ten-year imprisonment sentence for political offenses has been put into effect in Poland.

The new code, which will replace the four codes introduced after the partition of Poland by the Russians, the Austrians, and the Germans, will bring all parts of the country under a single system. Until its passage the jury system was used only in that part of Poland which was Austrian before the war.

Members of the Polish feminist movement object to a special decree which provides that no woman can serve on a jury. They argue that the Polish constitution gives equal rights to men and women and says that "public offices are available to any citizen."

Annual Vacation for Convicts Is Prussian Scheme

BERLIN. — (AP) — An annual two weeks' vacation from prison is planned as one of the latest penal reforms for Prussia. A halfway stage between imprisonment and freedom has been arranged by which convicts may become gradually readapted to life in a normal community, much as a deep sea diver is gradually returned to normal air pressure after a visit to the depths.

By a new ruling to go into effect Oct. 1, the prisoners also will be classified into groups according to their "capacity for education," the degree of their crimes, and the length of their sentences.

Judge Gentz of the Prussian ministry of justice said that in the halfway stage to freedom the last few months of a prisoner's sentence may be spent in apprenticeship to a tradesman in his chosen line of work, outside the prison, so that his days will be passed on parole and only his nights in the cell or prison dormitory.

The two weeks' annual vacation is planned only for long term prisoners with exceptionally good records.

The division of the prisoners into categories or classes, Judge Gentz added, is planned to prevent contamination of first offenders by habitual or confirmed criminals, and to offer special advantages to all those mentally equipped for education.

In the sections for nearly all ages and types, except the incorrigible and mentally deficient, self government will be instituted, in the hope of developing in the prisoner a sense of respect for the self-made laws of a democracy.

6 Cent Pension for 40 Years' Service

GUILFORD, England.—(AP)—What is believed to be the world's smallest pension is collected here weekly by Charles Pearce, 72, retired railway embploye. A veteran of 40 years' service, he draws 6 cents a week.

He explains that the company originally paid him $2.46 a week. Later he qualified for a government old age pension of $2.40, whereupon his railroad pension was reduced by that amount.

It is not the amount that leads him to collect his due, but the fact that so long as he collects it he remains on the company's books. And while on the books he is entitled to one free pass a year, with the privilege of quarter-fare tickets for family.

Sunshine and health

A Protective Skin Examination

Recognizing the fact that skin or mucous membrane manifestations may be due to a social disease, the Institute has developed a special dermatological department. The medical men in charge are highly trained and experienced in every way. All patients showing any signs of skin trouble are given this special service at no extra charge, as part of the general examination which is $3.00.

Successive Treatment or Consultation	1.00
Kahn and Wassermann Blood Test	1.00
Urinalysis	.25
Intravenous injections of Neosalvarsan or Tryparsamide	3.00
Six consecutive daily treatments in Urological or Gynecological departments	4.00

Fees for other necessary medical services are equally low.

A SUMMER'S DAY—clear skies and sparkling sunshine overhead—a sandy beach—cool surf under foot—nature's greatest contribution to health and happiness.

The health giving qualities of sunshine are universally recognized. Individual and community health depends in a great measure upon the quantity of sunshine available throughout the year to the greatest number. Yet countless people are denied the full curative value of this great natural health tonic because of embarrassing skin disorders which modern styles may disclose.

While skin diseases are numerous and many of a chronic nature difficult to cure, there are those which may be due to a more serious underlying condition like a social disease. Recognition of such cases is aided by means of the Wassermann and Kahn blood tests. When diagnosed, continued treatment rapidly controls the outward manifestations and causes complete disappearance of the embarrassing symptoms.

The skin often shows the first sign of a social disease. It appears at site of infection on any part of the body. Diagnosis can then be made by means of the so called Darkfield examination, long before it can be detected in the blood by the Wassermann and Kahn Tests. Treatment instituted at this time will effect an early cure and prevent serious involvement of the heart, brain—spinal cord and other organs of the body, with their resulting afflictions. In addition social diseases are also a quite common cause of unhappy marriages, due to sterility and dangerous operations to women.

For full protection, the best medical opinion advocates regular health examinations for all, including blood and other laboratory tests, whether ill health is suspected or not. Consult your doctor or come to the Public Health Institute. It was organized by public-spirited men to diagnose and treat social diseases. Operated not for profit the fees are low. Treatments are available even to those without immediate funds.

Catholics Petition Pope for New Honor for Virgin Mary

By the Rev. John Evans.

DAVID DARRAH, TRIBUNE correspondent at Rome, writing on the eve of the Feast of the Assumption which is observed by all Catholics each year on Aug. 15, states that a movement has been started to induce the pope to proclaim the Assumption of the Virgin Mary as an official dogma of the Catholic church through an appeal to the pontiff by seventy Italian bishops and numerous heads of religious orders. The movement means that the petitioning leaders desire to change the status of the doctrine from one which is informally but practically uniformly held by the whole Catholic church to one which is officially held as "of the faith."

The dogmatic statement of the doctrine of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, which affirms her ascension into heaven bodily as well as spiritually, it is held by the petitioning leaders, will have considerable influence in the Catholic church's efforts in favor of the dignity of Italian women and will give weight to the growing protest against exaggerated fashions in women's dress.

According to David Darrah, the petition is designed as a "plebiscite of Catholics throughout the world to honor, through the Virgin Mary, the sanctity of women's dress, and to obtain from the church a dogmatic definition of her glory through her assumption of heaven." The Catholic press of Rome indicates that the pope may accede to the petition when he summons the ecumenical council of bishops some time in 1930.

On Dec. 8, 1854, Pope Pius IX. defined the doctrine of the immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary as "of the faith." This dogma bears close relationship with the doctrine of the Assumption. As is true of the doctrine of the assumption, the doctrine of the immaculate conception, or the understanding that the Virgin Mary was without taint of original or racial sin, has been held for ages by the Catholic church, though the doctrine was not officially declared as binding upon Catholics until the middle of the 19th century.

The doctrine of the immaculate conception of the Virgin Mary is often confused with the doctrine of the virgin birth of Christ, as though the doctrines were identical. This is not the case, though it may be said that there is a distant theological relationship between the two, as there is always a relationship between all doctrines in any well developed theological system. The doctrine of the Immaculate Conception declares that the mother of Christ was born without taint of original sin, whereas the doctrine of the virgin birth teaches that Christ was conceived miraculously and without a human father.

Belief in the miraculous ascent or the Assumption of the Virgin Mary into heaven comes into ecclesiastical literature and teaching through traditional sources which are said to reach back to the Apostle St. John. Gregory of Tours gives an account of the miracle which tells of all the apostles being gathered about the dying Virgin and as they watched Jesus appeared with his angels and he committed the soul of his mother to the Archangel Michael. The next day, as they were carrying the body to the grave, Christ appeared again and carried the body with him again into heaven.

The account is amplified by St. John of Damascus in certain homilies which are read in Catholic churches during the octave of the Feast of the Assumption.

A list of the thirty-eight largest Presbyterian churches in America prepared by Dr. L. S. Mudge, stated clerk of the general assembly, includes three Chicago congregations. Fourth Presbyterian church, of which Dr. John Timothy Stone is the pastor, ranks fourteenth in the denomination with 2,624 members. The First Presbyterian church of Chicago ranks twenty-fourth, with 2,264 members while the Buena Memorial follows as the thirty-fourth on the list with more than 2,000 members.

The Drexel Park Presbyterian church, according to Dr. Mudge's figures, has shown the greatest growth of any of the Chicago congregations during the last year. Only 11 congregations in the whole communion had larger increases in membership. A total of 165 new members were received.

Among the 296 presbyteries in the church, the Chicago presbytery now ranks second with a total of 49,377 members. The Pittsburgh presbytery, with 69,537 members, is the largest. Among the forty-six synods the Illinois synod ranks fifth.

The Northern Presbyterian church, known as the Presbyterian church in the U. S. A., for the first time in its history has passed the 2,000,000 mark, according to Dr. Mudge. The growth during the last year over the entire body exceeded the 40,000 mark. The Sunday school membership enrolled is 1,895,313, a decrease of 18,000 members.

The policy adopted by the church to dissolve the congregations which have only a nominal existence and to unite them with more flourishing congregations, Dr. Mudge's report pointed out, has brought a decrease of seventy-one to the total number of congregations in the church. The report also shows forty-one less ministers on the rolls of the church than the 1928 records.

Nearly $1,000,000 more than in 1928 was given by Presbyterians for congregational expenses, while national and foreign missions gained more than $300,000. The total Presbyterian offerings for the last year, including congregational expense, national and foreign missions and miscellaneous benevolences reached $65,113,110, which is a half million more than the denomination ever secured previously.

The Belden Avenue Baptist church of Chicago, Rev. Thomas F. Harvey, pastor, is supporting a Lithuanian mission at 1937 Canalport avenue. Rev. A. J. Gillies, formerly pastor of the Lithuanian church in St. Charles, is now preaching at this mission. Two converts were baptised by Mr. Gillies on a recent Sunday morning. On Monday one of them requested Mr. Gillies to come to her home. When he arrived she presented him with three one hundred dollar bills, requesting that the money be used in giving the gospel to the Lithuanian people. This gift will make possible the having of a regular pianist, and will also help in a wider distribution of tracts and evangelistic endeavor.

The Episcopal church of the Good Samaritan, 1125 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, was organized two years ago. Since that time, under the leadership of the Rev. Mansel B. Greene, rector, the church has built a rectory and a combined parish house and church, and according to William J. Chambers, a vestryman of the parish, is exerting a strong influence on the community. One of the most important agencies of the parish is the Neighborhood Men's club, which will resume its meetings early in September after the summer vacation.

The state convention will meet with the First Baptist church of Decatur, in October. A rich program will be presented. Echoes from Denver will be heard.

Episcopal young people of Chicago will hold their sixth annual summer conference at Taylor hall, Racine, Aug. 29 to Sept. 2, according to announcement by David E. Evans, president. Young people of the middle west will join in the conference, which is designed to discuss problems common to youth in the church at the present time and to incite greater interest in religion on the part of the younger generation.

Several well known national leaders of the Episcopal church have been scheduled as leaders of the various groups for the conference. The committee in charge of plans includes: David E. Evans, president; Mrs. Theodore E. Mau Jr.; Edith Anne Cortis, Cynthia A. Clark, Jerome W. Tasker, and Roger A. Davis.

The concluding conference of a series sponsored by the Episcopal Brotherhood of St. Andrew for the development of Christian leadership among young men of Chicago, will open at Camp Houghteling, near Twin Lakes, Mich., tomorrow and continue through Aug. 31. This conference is for young men from 15 to 21 years of age. Recreation will be mixed with study and serious conference in the program. Dr. H. H. Lumpkin of Madison, Wis., will be the director, and the Rev. F. E. Bernard of All Saints church, Ravenswood, the chaplain. George C. Kubitz of Chicago is the camp manager.

Under the joint auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of Chicago and the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, Ashland boulevard and Adams street, a two day conference on lay evangelism will be held at the west side church Sept. 6 and 7, it is announced. The conference will be in charge of representatives of the Church Army in America, with Capt. Arthur Casey in charge. The purpose of the conference is to interest laymen more extensively in the program of evangelism being carried on in the Episcopal church nationally at the present time.

To St. Luke's church, Evanston, goes the honor of being the largest Episcopal church in the Episcopal diocese in Chicago. The north side church has a total membership of approximately 3,000, according to the latest statistical report of the local diocese. Christ church, Waukegan, ranks second, with 2,046; Church of the Redeemer, Hyde Park, 2,000; Grace church, Oak Park, 1,927; St. Thomas (colored), 1,524; St. Paul's, Kenwood, 1,650; St. Barnabas, 1,597; Christ church, Winnetka, 1,444; St. Chryostom's, 1,362; Church of the Advent, 1,225. St. Luke's Evanston, also leads in the number of communicants, with 1,900.

Flock Back to Italy.

ROME.—(AP)—Out of 98,927 Italians who repatriated themselves in 1928 with enough fortune to live here, 31,815 came from France, 25,220 from the United States, 10,876 from Switzerland, 18,276 from Argentina and 3,118 from Brazil.

IN "A MASKED BALL"

GIUSEPPE DANISE.
[Colominas Photo.]

THIS is the character who creates all the trouble in "A Masked Ball," or, if one insists on original languages, "Un Ballo in Maschera." His name is Renato, and he draws the fatal slip among the conspirators which orders him to put an end to the career of Count Riccardo in Boston. Mr. Danise's great achievemen in the opera, however, is not to wield a dagger, but to sing "Eri Tu." This is universally greeted as one of the high spots of the performance.

SENTENCE SERMONS
BY THE REV. ROY L. SMITH.

The Brutes Never—

—Worry themselves to death because they cannot own two homes.
—Envy each other their appearances.
—Fight each other because they are paid for it.
—Are overtaken with nervous prostration.
—Blaspheme even if they do not worship.
—Seem to allow the weather to interfere with their good humor.
—Try to pile up wealth they never expect to enjoy.

Give Me the Man—

—Who respects the opinion of his own conscience.
—Who will sacrifice pleasures for a reputation.
—Who will not betray the trust of a boy.
—Who is willing to ask God's blessing upon his day's work at eventide.

Aviation Big Lure for Youth of Italy

CASERTA, Italy.—(AP)—The Royal Aeronautical academy here, training school for Italy's future flyers, is receiving hundreds of applications for enrollment from all over the kingdom. Its fall term opens Oct. 16, but the final list of the accepted "aspirants" will be made up well before that date.

To be eligible for a cadetship, the would-be aviator must be aged between 17 and 22. He must have a certificate of "good moral and political conduct," and have passed his baccalaureate in classics or sciences, which means roughly that he must have the "intellectual baggage" of an American college sophomore.

Owing to the early age at which many Italians marry, there is a provision in the requirements that the budding airman "must be a bachelor or a widower without offspring."

Women the World Over

THERE are nearly two thousand women lawyers in the United States.

While the sole occupation of men of Albania is to talk politics and defend the home from invasion, women do all the work.

Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt, United States congresswoman, recently received $5,152,771 from the estate of her husband, John T. Pratt, who died two years ago.

According to Mrs. Henry Ford, one of the world's richest women, one of life's greatest pleasures comes from working in a garden.

Five states in the United States are known to have had women sheriffs—Kansas, Ohio, Michigan, South Dakota, and Wisconsin.

Mrs. Mary Grimwade, aged 92, is the bellringer of the church of St. John, Essex, England. She was engaged for the task 62 years ago.

Miss Consuelo M. Williard of Los Angeles, said to be America's smallest aviatrix, is five feet tall and weighs less than 100 pounds.

The American housewife bakes more than three-fourths of all the cake consumed in the country. The annual cake bill is estimated at $1,333,000,000.

An apartment hotel, costing $1,000,000, is to be built in Philadelphia, Pa., where widows, widowed mothers and women who have been deserted by their husbands may live without cost to them. The project will be in the form of a memorial to the mother of the late Dr. Gabrielle Harrison, who bequeathed her entire estate for the purpose.

With stubs only six inches long to serve as arms, Miss Josephine Callaghan, 22 year old wealthy rancher and sportswoman, recently graduated from the "stunt class" at an airplane school in Los Angeles, Cal., when she piloted her plane alone through all the maneuvers required in the post-graduate division.

All wage earning women in Spain, 16 to 50 years of age, except those in domestic service, are now required to carry maternity insurance, paying a small premium annually.

Mrs. Elizabeth Custer, widow of the famous American general who was killed in the battle of the Little Big Horn, is now engaged in the task of assembling her memories of the civil war. She answers with her own hand all of the letters she receives from old soldiers. She had 300 in the last year.

There are two ways of acquiring experience. One is to spend long years at poorly paid routine work. The other is a Walton Course in Executive Accounting with its unequalled record of more than 1000 Certified Public Accountants, nine successive years of American Institute honor winners, and twenty medals for high honors in the semi-annual Illinois C. A TRIP down the stairway shown above on a warm summer evening is like traveling from the city to a bracing vacation resort. It is the famous Madison Street entrance to the Morrison Hotel's Terrace Garden.

Delicious Menus and Colorful Vaudeville

With the temperature never above 68 degrees, luncheon, dinner and after-theater supper are as popular here in August as in fall or winter. Sunday dinner, served from 5:30 to 9 P. M., with fine dance music and vaudeville, is an especially lively occasion at this time of year.

Rooms $2.50 and Up—and the Reason

This famous restaurant has built up such a name for the Clark-Dearborn intersection that subrentals here return a revenue that pays all the ground rent. The saving makes possible a scale of room-rates that would be nearly double elsewhere for similar rooms.

Once in a lifetime, probably. Go right! With a welcoming Bali on Madeira's lantern-spangled mountain. Christmas with a new meaning in the Holy Land. New Year's Eve celebrations in Cairo, India-Ceylon-Java-Siam in their loveliest seasons. China, Peking, with government courtesies. Japan's plum-blossom time. And the idyllic cruise-life of the "dream-ship" Empress of Australia sailing Dec. 2, for 137 days. This year, more new places—Athens, Sumatra, Formosa—across-India optionals at lower prices—inland-India trip to Agra (Taj Mahal) and Delhi on the "included." And it costs no more than the usual world trip—from $2000. Why not look into it?

MINISTER BUSY EXPLAINING HE IS NOT HOOVER

Trinity Pastor Sets Record in Service.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

So marked is the resemblance between Dr. Gottfred Nelson and President Hoover that at the close of a Chicago banquet some years ago the pastor of Trinity Lutheran church, Seminary and Barry avenues, found himself shaking hands with many guests under the impression that they were greeting the speaker of the occasion, who was then secretary of commerce.

DR. GOTTFRED NELSON. [Hansen Photo.]

At election and inauguration times the Chicago pastor was kept somewhat busy informing strangers with whom he came in contact that he was not the man for whom they had voted.

Dr. Nelson is a year younger than the President. Twenty-six years of his career have been spent as pastor at Trinity Lutheran church, and during the more than a quarter of a century he has exerted a strong influence, not only in his own congregation, but in the community at large.

In these twenty-six years of service, Dr. Nelson has officiated at 3,326 baptisms; 2,832 marriages, and 2,489 burials. He has taken 1,593 adults and 671 children into the church membership, and 1,638 have been confirmed by him.

Service Longest in Synod.

During his pastorate—said to be the longest in length of service in the same church of any Lutheran pastor of the Augustana synod—Dr. Nelson has had opportunity to establish contacts with many of the 20,000 persons in his parish.

He has officiated at as many as ten weddings and nine funerals in a single day.

Trinity Swedish Lutheran church was organized forty-six years ago in the then sparsely settled village of Lake View. The location of the church has remained unchanged. The first church building—a frame structure, used later for a parsonage and now as janitor's quarters—still stands near the present church that was built in 1896.

The church has had only two pastors. The Rev. S. A. Sandahl served between the years 1887 and 1901. He was succeeded by Dr. Nelson.

Church Is Pastor's First.

Born in Knox county, Ill., Dr. Nelson grew up in Kansas and attended Bethany college in that state. He obtained his theological education at Augustana seminary, Rock Island, Ill., and at Lutheran Theogolical seminary in Chicago. He was ordained to the ministry in 1902, and the following year assumed charge of Trinity Lutheran church. He is vice president of the board of directors of Augustana hospital and president of its executive committee. Bethany college conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon him in 1925.

Trinity church has grown during the twenty-six years of Dr. Nelson's ministry until now it has an adult membership of 1,054, a Sunday school of 958 pupils, and church property valued at $250,000.

A few years ago a parish hall costing $100,000 was built next to the church. The building is devoted to Sunday school purposes and is also used for athletic, educational and social activities of the church. It is one of the social centers of Lake View.

124 in Summer School.

The summer school held at the parish hall, which came to a close Aug. 4, attracted much attention. The teachers were Elmer Johnson, Mrs. Edward Jacobson, Ethel Newfors, and Laura Larson. There was an enrollment of 124, divided among the following nationalities as follows: Swedish, 63; German, 16; Finish, 5; Norwegian, 5; Irish, 2; Hungarian, 1; Canadian, 1; Danish, 1; English, 1.

Sunday services at the church are conducted as follows: English, 9:30 a. m.; Swedish, 10:45 a. m.; English, 7:45 p. m. The Sunday school—effective and well organized—is held at the same hour as the English morning church services so that parents and children attend the meetings simultaneously.

Recently $10,000 was spent for church repairs. A new roof was erected, the interior of the church was completely redecorated, and the windows replaced.

Three charter members of the church are still living—Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Anderson, 3125 Clifton avenue; and Mrs. G. A. Bowman, 4919 Tripp avenue.

Postal Official Heads League.

Anton W. Nelson, general superintendent of deliveries at the Chicago postoffice, is president of the Trinity Church Luther league. The organization meets monthly, and once a year presents an entertainment. The league sponsors vesper services at 5 o'clock on Sunday evenings during the winter months.

The Ladies' circle, composed of 75 young women, has had Miss Anna Olson for its president for many years. This organization has recently reorganized the church.

Mrs. J. A. Christenson is president of the Ladies' Aid society, which has a membership of 250.

The choir has been directed for eight years by C. A. Engstrom.

M. W. Browman, a classmate of Dr. Nelson's at Bethany college, has been organist at the church for twenty-two years.

KEEPS UP FIGHT ON $3,500,000 SEWER SYSTEM

North Siders to Appeal to Council Sept. 11.

Members of the Argyle Improvement association will renew their fight against the proposed $3,500,000 sewer for Edgewater and Rogers Park at the city council meeting on Sept. 11, John G. McHugh, secretary of the organization, announced last week. Although the property owners lost the first skirmish with the board of local improvements in their attempt to stave off the heavy assessment necessary for the work, they will continue the battle with the council and, if necessary, will carry the matter to the County court, the officers of the association declare.

The association again will be given the coöperation of Ald. John A. Massen [48th] and Ald. E. I. Frankhauser [48th], according to Mr. McHugh. Residents of the 48th ward object to the improvement on the ground that they will be unnecessarily taxed $1,000,000 for a project that will not benefit them and is not needed. Ald. Massen declared at the hearing on June 22 that the present sewer system in the ward is adequate.

Admit Need; Distrust Board.

Property owners of the 49th ward who are opposed to the sewer contend that the proposed system is too elaborate and declare that they did not have faith in the present administration and were willing to wait for the improvement, which they admit is needed.

Engineers for the board of local improvements, of which Michael J. Faherty is president, and the bureau of sewers, under the direction of George E. McGrath, superintendent, are asking for the support of north side civic organizations, since it is deemed by these officials one of the most urgent improvements contemplated by the city this year.

The property owners of the two wards, led by the Argyle Improvement association, attempted to halt the plan at the hearing on June 22, but failed because the petitions presented contained only 2,400 names, insufficient to delay the work. The citizens' committee was composed of George A. Jacobs, chairman, S. L. Hanssen, John P. Rosenberg, Dr. W. F. Cathcart, Miss Emma Layman, J. J. Higgins, C. F. Swanson, Walter McCowan, I. J. Maudner, Mrs. A. M. O'Connell, and C. J. Hultgren.

Too Big, Frankhauser Says.

Ald. Frankhauser, who accompanied the committee when the protest was filed with the improvement board, declared that a two and one-half mile sewer system was sufficient to take care of the needs of Rogers Park residents. The plan of the board provides for a nine mile system. Ald. Massen also attended the meeting and objected to the plan by which 48th ward residents will be heavily taxed for sewers needed in the 49th ward only.

The route of the proposed sewer is as follows: In Magnolia avenue from Lawrence avenue to Argyle street, thence west to Glenwood avenue and in this street from Argyle street to Pratt boulevard, west in Pratt boulevard to Ashland avenue and north in this street to Juneway terrace, the northern city limits. A number of branches are also planned, the most important of which will be in Pratt boulevard, Thorndale, and Sherwin avenues. The main sewer will connect with a sewer in Lawrence avenue running west to the river.

Evanston Kids' Circus to End Playing Season

Evanston children had a busy time last week as events crowded together in the end of the season rush. The bureau of recreation summer playground session comes to an end with a circus for grand finale in two weeks. Preparations for the circus are now going on with each playground vying for honors in the hope that it may win the largest number of total points.

Tomorrow, the second part of the model airplane tournament is scheduled, the indoor events, at Patten gymnasium on the Northwestern university campus. Outdoor events were held Friday at Evanston Township High school field.

The recent folk dancing contest held in Lake Front park, at the foot of Davis street, was won by Boltwood playground giving it added points toward first place in the season's final reckoning. Mrs. Josephine Cox Dillman, director of women's activities for the bureau of recreation, Mrs. G. A. Sims, Miss Agnes Jones, and Miss Alta Randall were judges.

Streeter's Claim Mouldering in Grave; Name Marches On

This article is the tenth of a series explaining the origins of the names of streets and suburbs of the north side.

BY VIRGINIA SCHMITZ.

The Columbus of Streeterville, the burly buccaneer of Lake Michigan, the feudal lord of the Deestrick of Lake Michigan and the outlaw of Chicago — Cap'n George Wellington Streeter, for whom the territory east of St Clair street between the Chicago river and Oak street is named.

The romantic tale of a battle—fist, gun, and legal—that started [illegible] when Cap'n Streeter squatted in his boat on a sand bar off Superior street, and is still being waged by his heirs, is the story of Streeterville—the tale of a man who found the bottom of the lake just off shore and, when it became shore and worth millions, demanded the millions.

GEORGE W. STREETER.

The name was not formally bestowed on Streeterville in recognition of the Cap'n's deeds, but rather in spite of them. In all his years of fighting to gain title to the property which he claimed variously—by discovery, by squatter's rights, by patent from President Cleveland, or even by virtue of having made it—he succeeded only in attaching his name to it.

Subject Only to Uncle Sam.

For years he stuck to his post in his boat, then in a shack, finally in a wagon, a familiar figure with his high silk hat, his shaggy beard and unkempt hair, his velvet collared shabby coat, at one time selling lots in the property he didn't own to any one who would buy them, later selling liquor on Sunday against the Chicago ordinances. But then he claimed to be immune to any but federal laws. His "Destreeck of Lake Michigan," as he called Streeterville, was subject only to the authority of the United States, according to him.

And it was all for the good of the community, he felt.

"It's no use talking," he is quoted as saying, "this town won't never have a chamber of commerce until it has its cabaret. This is a frontier town, and a W. C. T. U. around never made a big town yet. It must be started with entertainment."

Where the tall towers of Streeterville now stand the waves of Lake Michigan once broke, and it was when these waves were particularly stormy that Cap'n Streeter and his good wife, Maria, were moored on a sand bar off Superior street in their boat, the Reutan. Later storms partly wrecked the boat and formed a sand island around it, and the cap'n was allowed to stay there by N. K. Fairbank, who owned the shore property.

Made First Stand in 1886.

However, later, when Mr. Fairbank asked him to go, he refused, and his first stand against the authorities came in July, 1886, when five constables tried to evict him. They failed.

Later the same year they had captured him, but Maria, sometimes called the original Helen Maria, threw boiling water on them and they fled. The following year he sent a bullet through the buggy of Barney Baer, then captain of police, and 500 cops came down to get him with no results. Finally one lone Lincoln park policeman did capture him and he was tried and acquitted.

Meantime sand had filled in between his little boat and the mainland and all along the shore. Partly this was due to the pier at the mouth of the river, partly perhaps to his boat, as he claimed, and partly to artificial filling in done by Cap'n Streeter, according to his own evidence.

His first real setback came at the beginning of the century when he was tried and convicted of manslaughter, the shooting of a man who, he claimed, was trespassing on his deestrict. His sentence was only for nine months, but while he was in jail Maria died of an illness aggravated by starvation.

Injured in Battle of 1915.

But back to the deestrick the Cap'n came, and in 1905 took him a new wife, Elma, who gradually became known as Ma Streeter. And things went along quietly enough until 1915, when an attempt was made to arrest him for violating the Sunday closing laws in the saloon he was running. Blood and fire were the order of the day when the police came down to arrest him and the captain went to a hospital.

But he wasn't out yet. Not until 1918. Then he was charged with selling liquor without a license and evicted from the property at the same

HIGH SCHOOLS READY TO GIVE 200 DIPLOMAS

Summer Sessions to End This Week.

Diplomas will be presented to 200 senior high school students who have completed their course during the summer session in three north side high schools at commencement exercises to be held Thursday evening.

At Lane Technical High school, 1225 Sedgewick street, 110 students of the north and northwest sides will be graduated at a program to be given in the auditorium of the La Moyne elementary school, 851 Waveland avenue. The class includes 20 students in the two year course, the remainder having completed the four year curriculum.

Brooks to Be Speaker.

H. Wayland Brooks, assistant states attorney, will be the principal speaker at the exercises, which are being arranged by William C. Poor, assistant principal, who is acting head of the school during the absence of Grant Beebe, principal.

The remainder of the program will include a group of numbers by the Lane Tech orchestra and the presentation of two large flags to the student body, the gift of the graduating class. Stunt day will be celebrated Tuesday by the students. They will be dressed in unique costumes and will parade through streets of the near north side. Following the parade a dance will be held at the school.

60 Grads at Lake View.

Lake View High school, Ashland avenue and Irving Park boulevard, will graduate the second largest summer session class of the north side schools, when approximately 60 pupils will be awarded their diplomas by Charles Perrine, principal. The class speakers, who will be the only speakers at the exercises, will be selected the first part of the week. The class day program, which includes a luncheon for the graduates, dancing and other entertainment, will be given Wednesday in the school building. The officers of the class, Joseph Enamnger, Ray Beck and Miss Nellie Almutt are in charge of the program.

Although the summer session enrollment at Nicholas Senn High school is the largest in its history, only 24 graduates are included in the total of 1,200 students. The exercises are being arranged by David M. Davidson, principal, and will be held in the auditorium of the school, 5900 Glenwood avenue.

The names of the graduates in four year courses at the three north side high schools are here listed:

K. OF C. PLANNING BIG PAGEANT FOR COLUMBUS DAY

No. Side Leaders Active in Preparations.

BY THOMAS WREN.

To commemorate the 437th anniversary of the discovery of America an elaborate celebration will be staged by the Chicago Knights of Columbus on Columbus day, Oct. 12, at the Chicago Stadium.

FRANK J. ENRIGHT.

Arrangements for the demonstration are being supervised by Frank J. Enright, president of the Chicago chapter of the Knights of Columbus. North side K. of C. councils and their grand knights have been assigned an important part in the staging of the Columbus day celebration.

These councils include Brownson, Chicago, Columbus, Daniel O'Connell, De Soto, Father O'Connor, Illinois, Lafayette, Marquette, Newman, Ouilmette, Ravenswood, St. Cyr, St. Paul of the Cross, Tonti, and University.

North Side Grand Knights Active.

Michael J. Howlett, past grand knight of Americus council, has been appointed general chairman and he has been pledged the cooperation of the following grand knights of the north side councils:

Marshall V. Kearney, James F. Kane, John J. McGuire, Roy Bastendorf, Julius M. Altenhofen, Augustan O. Smyth, Daniel F. Murphy, Jacob A. Mueller, Thomas J. Flanagan, Daniel F. McEnery, Frank J. Kruesch, Alex Ferguson, Alex B. Locashio, Henry L. Blim, John R. Anderson, and Edward C. Jeffers.

The celebration will consist of a massive pageant depicting the landing of Columbus and a speaker of national prominence will deliver the principal address. It is expected that approximately 25,000 Chicago knights and their friends will attend the stadium celebration. The program will open with the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner" on the great stadium organ, which is to be officially dedicated on Columbus day. The pageant then will follow.

Martin H. Carmody, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, will deliver an address on Columbus. Many other novel and entertaining attractions will complete the program and the evening will be concluded with dancing.

Stresses Significance of Day.

Several meetings have already been held by the grand knights and district deputies of the Knights of Columbus in Cook county and at one of these meetings State Deputy Edward Houlihan said in discussing Columbus day plans:

"The 12th of October is our day and we should celebrate it in a real Knights of Columbus way.

"Discovery day sums up and holds in mind the most tremendous story of human accomplishment. Other things that men have done for mankind are puny compared with the gift to civilization of half of the earth's surface. Measured by its contribution to the opportunities of the human race, it is universal, and while we simply accept it as we do the beneficences of Providence, let it not be said in derogation of our gratitude that in the enjoyment of this gift we have forgotten the giver. It is only befitting that this year the greatest tribute should be paid to our noble discoverer."

BANOVERHANGING ELECTRIC SIGNS IN LAKE FOREST

Overhanging electric signs will be abolished in Lake Forest after the first of next year. This was decided at the last meeting of the city council, when that body authorized Mayor A. B. Dick Jr. to issue an executive order revoking all permits after Jan. 1, 1930.

The council also discussed the proposal to submit to the voters an ordinance providing for a bond issue for the completion of the Deerpath Golf club, the municipal course. A similar proposition, submitted two years ago, was defeated by a small margin, largely, its proponents thought, because they were too confident of its passage to turn out and vote. They are certain that it will be adopted if again put to a ballot.

Traffic Lights Asked for Belmont-Southport Corner

Ald. William H. Feigenbutz [45th] has been requested to take steps toward obtaining traffic control lights at Belmont and Southport avenues by the Lincoln-Belmont Booster, a community newspaper, following a survey of safety conditions throughout the ward.

Hibbard Junior High to Grant Fourteen Diplomas

Ald. Joseph C. Ross (40th) will present diplomas to fourteen summer session graduates of Hibbard Junior High school at exercises to be held Thursday morning in the auditorium, 3244 Ainslie street. At the same time the physical education department will award prizes to the winning team of the school baseball league, the winner of which will be decided early this week. Thomas C. M. Jamieson, principal, is in charge of the exercises. Left to right: Elmer Meinig, Irving Cherman, Myrtle Anderson, Helen Zaionchik, who made the highest scholarship average; Saul Spencer, Tillie Falk, Mr. Jamieson, Lawrence Sheklow, Theodore Ruhl, Gwendolyn Hicks, and Marshall Rabe. Graduates not in the picture are Alice Berg, Florence Kneeland, Lillian Peterson, and Anita Stine. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

DEESTRICK DEAD, CAP STREETER'S NAME GOES ON

Only Accomplishment of 35 Year Battle.

time. He took to a houseboat again and he and Ma moored off East Chicago.

That didn't end the Streeter case, however. All the years before he had been on the defensive, holding that possession was nine points of the law. Now, however, he took the offensive. On Sept. 5, 1920, he filed his famous suit against the Chicago Title and Trust company, the estate of Potter Palmer, the city of Chicago, Northwestern university and the University of Chicago.

Kinzie's Patent Altered.

One bit of evidence he brought forward was a patent alleged to be a grant of the land to him by President Cleveland. A little acid applied to it showed the astounding fact that it was Robert A. Kinzie's original patent from President Van Buren. Another point he brought up was that in the early Wall map of the district on which titles to the property hinged, instead of a meander line at the east boundary along the lake, a fixed boundary had been marked, thus cutting out riparian rights. This was not allowed, however.

Shortly after starting the suit, Cap'n Streeter died in his houseboat, Jan. 24, 1921, at the age of 84, and with him passed one of the most colorful episodes in Chicago's history.

The Streeter case is still going on, however. Ma Streeter sued for half a billion dollars in 1924, but the case was thrown out when it was proved that she hadn't been legally married to the cap'n.

And only a month ago twelve heirs filed another suit—July 10.

But Streeterville's towers are still growing and the Deestrick of Lake Michigan really passed with the death of the cap'n.

Street names in the section are varied, some of them, generally the east and west streets, dating from early Chicago and the others, north and south streets, on made land fairly recent.

How Streets Were Named.

Starting from the river, the first four streets were at one time named for the four states in this region, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Michigan street was changed to Austin avenue and Indiana to Grand avenue.

The next four were after lakes, Ontario, Erie, Huron and Superior were named after the great lakes.

Some of the newer streets are Fairbanks court, named for N. K. Fairbank; McClurg street, named for A. C. McClurg, who built up a large part of the section; Delaware place and Seneca street, named for Indian tribes.

St. Clair street was called Sand street when it formed the shore line, but was later named for Gen. Arthur St. Clair, a general in the revolution, member of the continental congress and first governor of the Northwest territory.

OBTAIN 10,000 SIGNERS FOR 'L' TO NORTH TOWN

Clubs Propose Moving of C. & N. W. Station.

The activities of two of the leading business men's clubs of the 50th ward are being focused on the transportation problem in a concentrated drive to obtain better and more rapid service from the North Town district to the loop. The Fiftieth Ward Citizens' club and the North Town Kiwanis club have undertaken the leadership of a community movement to provide the residents of the rapidly growing district on the far north side between Clark street and the north shore channel with the transportatiop facilities that they declare they need and deserve.

The Fiftieth Ward Citizens' club for several years has demanded an extension of the elevated railway into the area, which now has a population of nearly 50,000 registered voters. John T. Tashjian, president of the club, contends that the residents of the community have a right to expect rapid transportation facilities in order that the people will be brought within a half hour of the loop as are residents of other districts within the city limits. He points out that it will not be a difficult problem to extend the tracks into the northern part of the Fiftieth ward since an extension can be made from either the Ravenswood or Logan Square branch.

Seek Signatures of 25,000.

At present, the transportation committee of the club, headed by Emmet T. Flood, is circulating petitions asking the Rapid Transportation company and the city to provide the service needed. More than 10,000 signatures already have been obtained and the committee hopes to have a total of 25,000 names before the petition is presented to city and traction officials. Other members of the committee are Charles Mattick, William Rose, William F. Kroll, R. V. Hartford, Roy Swanson, Walter Rinker, and Victor Spelding.

The North Town Kiwanis club, of which Charles Perring is president, for a year has been interested in improving the service provided by the Chicago and North Western suburban line and the Surface Lines. Now they are urging the railroad officials to move the Kenmore station, now located at Ravenswood and Granville avenues, to Devon and Ravenswood avenues, a distance of one-quarter mile. Joseph O'Connor, secretary of the club, points out that the change would bring the station nearer to the residents in the thickly populated area north of Devon avenue and would also aid people who use the Devon avenue street cars for the first lap toward the loop.

Believe They'll Win Change.

"The people of North Town believe this change necessary and the officials of the railroad probably will comply with their wishes if sufficient emphasis is given the matter," Mr. O'Connor said.

The Kiwanis club also plans to ask that the name of the station, Kenmore, be changed to North Town to identify it more closely with the community. Kenmore, they point out, has no significance. Fred D. Eldredge, former president of the club, has been appointed chairman of a committee to take up these matters with the railroad officials.

The club is also preparing a survey of service on both the Devon and Western avenue street car lines with the purpose of inducing an improvement in the schedules. Other officers of the club are: Vice president, Paul Ford; trustee, George Melchin, and directors, O. V. Palmquist, Harry Newman, Walter Prigge, and Dr. W. C. Calkins.

OPERA CLUB IN ROGERS PARK TO GIVE PROGRAMS

The program committee of the Rogers Park Civic Opera club has arranged five Monday evening meetings at which educational programs will be presented by the Chicago Civic Opera company during the coming season, Mrs. Samuel Ross, chairman, announced last week. The meetings will be held on Sept. 16, Oct. 21, Nov. 18, Dec. 16, and Jan. 20 at the Rogers Park Woman's club, Ashland and Estes avenues.

The programs will provide a study of the staging, background, music, and drama of the opera. The club is one of more than 40 such groups organized in communities and suburbs of metropolitan Chicago by the Civic Concert Service company, of which Miss Dema Harshberger is director.

More than 190 members have already been enrolled in the Rogers Park club, which is limited to a total membership of 200, and a waiting list will be started when the quota is filled, Mrs. Leopold de Mare, membership chairman, announced. Dr. G. M. Hambleton is president of the club.

Passes Milestone

MRS. MARY GIEGERICH.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Mary Giegerich celebrated her ninety-first birthday anniversary Monday with a party at the home of Mrs. Georgia Purcell, 6343 Kenmore avenue, a daughter with whom she resides. Mrs. Giegerich was born in 1838 at Bedford, Ind., and has outlived seven of her children.

She moved to Illinois in 1865 and was one of the first residents of Princeton. She came to Chicago to make her home fifteen years ago. Two other children, Mrs. C. A. Stratton of Evanston and Mrs. D. E. Morrison of New York, attended the anniversary party.

Mrs. Giegerich spends most of her time reading and sewing, both of which she is able to do without the aid of glasses.

PARKS SEEK TO CONTROL PART OF ASHLAND AVENUE

Steps are being taken by Ald. E. I. Frankhauser [49th] and the commissioners of the north shore park district to have the section of Ashland avenue between Fargo avenue and Howard street, now under the jurisdiction of the city, placed under the direction of the park commissioners. Ashland avenue south of Fargo avenue is a boulevard, and has been controlled by the park board for a number of years.

Traffic is not compelled to stop at Ashland avenue on the section under the city's jurisdiction and consequently many accidents have been caused by this difference in traffic regulations, Ald. Frankhauser said. Frederick Chetlain, one of the park commissioners, announced that he would take the matter up with the board at the next meeting, in order that Ald. Frankhauser may present a resolution requesting the change at the next city council meeting on Sept. 11.

Numerous accidents have occurred at Ashland and Fargo avenues. The crossing is also obstructed by the elevated railway.

PROJECTS LOWER HIGHLAND PARK'S INSURANCE RATES

Highland Park now has one of the lowest fire insurance rates in the suburban area. Mayor Benjamin F. Lewis last week made public a letter he received from the Illinois inspection bureau which indicates the rates may go still lower.

The bureau listed six improvements which, when completed will materially affect insurance rates. They are a 500,000 gallon elevated water tank in the business district, new pumping station with adequate equipment, new fire station at Ravinia for the southern section of the city, addition of four full pay firemen, an automobile pumper of 750 gallons per minute capacity for the new station, and new street lighting system for the city, with which will be installed necessary conductors for a city-wide fire alarm system.

Evanston High R. O. T. C. Will Have Target Range

When the new Evanston Township High school, R. O. T. C. headquarters, open this fall in the former cafeteria building one of the new features will be a target range with 22 targets. Gun racks, map holders, lockers and various types of military equipment will be installed also in the building.

'L' TO CONSTRUCT NEW STATION IN SOUTH EVANSTON

New Stop Takes Place of That at Calvary.

Preliminary work toward erection of a new station at South boulevard in Evanston for the Chicago Rapid Transit lines was initiated last week with the driving of piles for a trestle in temporary rerouting of cars.

The station, which was ordered by the Illinois commerce commission on the petition of residents of southwest Evanston, must be completed by Dec. 31 of this year. According to A. U. Gerber, engineer for the Rapid Transit company, work will be speeded up and the station built on or before the deadline date.

Means Abandoning Calvary.

The new station will mean abandonment of the Calvary stop except in cases of large funerals and will be constructed so that coffins can be handled there as well as at the cemetery station.

The platform will be between the tracks with the station on the north side of South boulevard. Concrete abutments will have to be torn down before actual work on the station can start and the tracks running down the center of the right of way now will have to be shifted over.

When it is completed the new stop will give the southwestern section of Evanston a more convenient site for boarding trains. There is no outlet to the west of the tracks at Calvary and users of the lines have been compelled to walk up to South boulevard and then retrace their steps on the west side of the tracks.

Two Railways Coöperate.

The Rapid Transit lines and the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, lessors of the right of way, will coöperate in the construction work. Mr. Gerber, however, and other engineers of the elevated lines are designing the structure.

Viaducts on the lines at Ridge avenue and Lincoln street where the track has been recently elevated are almost completed and bids for the paving of Ridge avenue, closed for more than a year, are being received. It is expected that the street will be opened in time for the heavy football season traffic.

CONSIDER NEW LIGHTING PLAN ON DEVON AVE.

Property owners on Devon avenue, between Clark street and Broadway will be asked next week to decide upon a new street lighting plan for the district, according to an announcement made last week by the street lighting committee of the Devon District Business association. Two plans have been suggested, the committee favoring one which provides for the construction of a number of concrete posts on which the lights will be installed. Several concrete posts already in use on the street may be utilized in the new plan.

The other plan calls for the erection of lights on the trolley posts. The committee includes George Melchin, president of the association, Ed Jacobson, Emery T. Erickson, Byron Barwig Jr., William Foran, Ray Williams and Robert Howard.

Evanston Sea Wall Plans Await Federal Report

Work on Evanston's sea wall is being carried on as fast and as far as it is possible under the emergency permits allowed by the government following the heavy storms of a month ago. But before any extensive repairs or new plans are put into effect federal inspectors must look over the territory and report back to the capital. Among the plans for the future to be executed by A. W. Handford, commissioner of public works, are a group of small piers and breakwaters.

HOWARD DISTRICT WILL HOLD FALL SALE FESTIVAL

A fall sale festival, sponsored by the Howard District Business association, will be held late in August or the early part of September. Robert E. Ferguson, president of the association, announced last week. Col Martin, Ned Corbett, George Regan, and Sam Hasterlik comprise the committee appointed to plan the bargain festival.

Dr. C. O. Pryor was appointed head of the membership committee at a recent meeting of the association in the Limehouse, 1563 Howard street. Dr. Pryor recently obtained 12 new members of the association. He will be assisted by E. B. Beaver, Joseph Benjamin, Frank Nichols, Joseph Warsawski, Henry Warder, and Mr. Hasterlik.

Three new members were welcomed at the latest meeting of the business men. They are John C. Brown, 7614 North Paulina street; Benjamin D. Dolnick, 7539 North Ashland avenue, and Dr. C. P. Gorn, 1791 Howard street.

BEGIN WORK ON COVENTRY ROAD IN KENILWORTH

Work on the opening and extending of Coventry road through block 36 in Kenilworth started last week under the Highways Construction company of Highland Park, which was awarded the contract by the Kenilworth village board.

When opened to the tracks Coventry road will be a continuation of Kenilworth avenue, connecting at the railroad tracks and extending in a southwesterly direction to Ridge road. The extension of the street means the removal of several buildings in the block, but after the cut is made through it will form the site of the proposed new Kenilworth village hall and fire station.

It is expected that the extension and paving will be completed and the road opened before cold weather.

Jesuit Priests Holding Educational Conference

Two hundred Jesuit priests are assembled at Loyola university for the eighth annual convention of the Jesuit Educational association. The meetings of the convention started Friday, Aug. 16, and will end Tuesday. The association is made up of the following organizations: The Missouri Province Classical association, the Missouri Province English association, the American Jesuit Historical association, the Missouri Province Philosophical association, the Missouri Province Sociological conference, and the American Association of Jesuit Scientists.

SOUTHPORT AVE. DISTRICT TO HOLD COMMUNITY FETE

Fourth Annual Affair Will Open Thursday Night.

A community festival sponsored by business men of the Southport avenue district will be held Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. The festival is the fourth annual celebration given by the Southport Business Men's association, of which Adolf Wilke is president, and will be staged on Southport avenue between Belmont avenue and Clark street. The opening of the new Musix Box motion picture theater will be a feature.

Mr. Wilke is chairman of the festival committee and the entertainment will include a parade, various street programs on each of the nights, and numerous contests conducted by the merchants. Final plans for the carnival were made at a meeting Wednesday in the clubrooms, 1437 Otto street.

Miss Chicago to Appear.

Special attractions will feature the program to be given at the new cinema house on each of the three nights. Miss Eleanor Wagner, Miss Chicago of 1929, selected in the spring during a city-wide contest, will appear each afternoon and evening.

Construction of the new Music Box theater, Southport avenue near Grace street, was begun in October of last year. The building is owned by the Blaine Building corporation, of which M. J. Schmidt is president. Mr. Schmidt formerly was president of the Addison National bank and is at present chairman of the board of that institution. The theater will be operated by Jacob Lasker & Son, who also operate the Bertha theater, Lincoln avenue near Lawrence, and the Villas theater, 22d street and 56th avenue, Cicero.

Association Formed in 1925.

The Southport Business Men's association was formed in 1925 by five merchants of the district, and now has a membership of more than 150. The organization has aided in obtaining numerous improvements for the district, including improved street lighting, better surface car and elevated transportation, and cleaner streets and alleys. The club is also actively interested in the welfare of pupils at the Blaine school, 3808 Southport avenue.

Other officers are: Vice president, John R. Klein; secretary, Ralph Wells; treasurer, Charles S. Nation; sergeant-at-arms, William E. Bahn, and chaplain, E. L. Reiner.

INSTALL LIGHTS AT CLARK, LUNT; LONG FIGHT WON

Traffic control lights were installed at Clark street and Lunt avenue last week, ending a two year fight made by the Rogers Park-Clark Street Business association to obtain safety measures for the corner, which is said to be the busiest in Rogers Park. The lighting committee of the association, headed by George Phillip, first requested the erection of lights at the corner in the summer of 1927 and has repeated the demand regularly since that time.

Although numerous automobile accidents have occurred at the corner during the last year, Ald. E. I. Frankhauser [49th] was unable to obtain traffic lights because the city funds in the department were exhausted.

EXPECT 20,000 AT CELEBRATION IN NILES CENTER

More than 20,000 guests are expected at the celebration of Niles Center day on Aug. 23 under the auspices of the Niles Center chamber of commerce. Invitations have gone out to business men and contractors on the north side and persons owning property in the town.

Music and refreshments, as well as speakers, will be furnished and the big feature is planned as a parade of floats and decorated automobiles starting at 1 o'clock and touring Niles Center, Morton Grove, Evanston, Rogers Park, North Town, and Tessville.

A rotogravure brochure giving the story of Niles Center in pictures will be distributed by the chamber of commerce.

Edgewater Club's Junior Members to Dance Friday

FOUR EVANSTON COPS SHARE TWO PATTEN AWARDS

Bravery and Efficiency Cited by Committee.

Four Evanston policemen share the Patten police awards for the month of June and July, announced recently by James E. Wynn, temporary chairman of the committee. Auvergne E. Feeley and George Pestka each received $50 under the June award and Lieut. Carl Ekman of the detective bureau and Eugene Worthington, juvenile officer, shared the July award.

Feeley was cited for "apprehending and arresting John Morse, a Negro of Chicago on June 21" after a chase and battle.

"Excellent work in reviving Mrs. Charles F. Murray, 2661 Stewart avenue, on June 17" won Pestka the award. He found Mrs. Murray seated at her automobile in the garage of her home, unconscious from carbon monoxide fumes from the exhaust of the car, and after applying resuscitatory measures took her to a hospital, where she recovered.

Praised for Efficiency.

Lieut. Ekman received the award for "his exceptional handling of police cases for the month of July and for his efficient supervision of the detective bureau for the first six months of this year."

Worthington was cited "for diligent and untiring effort in the recovery of thirty stolen bicycles during July and for his excellent handling of police cases during the first half of the year."

Creditable mention was voted for the following: July, Policewoman Georgianna Juul, Sergt. Ben Hanke, Otto Brey, Frank Shaeffer, Ernest Otto, William Cameron, Charles Holmes, Edward Bussean, Sam Bell, Critt Jarvis, Oscar Swanson, Arthur Wharton, Henry White, George Bein, and R. E. Allen; June, Lieut. Peter Geishecker, Sergt. Antone Schultz, Critt Jarvis, Edward Cohen, Ernest Leavell, Oscar Swanson, George Durgin, Elmer Sachs, Sam Bell, Oscar Jantho.

Cited for Attention to Duty.

Special mention was voted for Robert Borland, Edward Krogman, Paul Hansen, William Calderwood, George Bein and Oscar Swanson, "for strict attention to duty in the recovery of stolen automobiles during June."

Besides Mr. Wynn the award committee included George A. Paddock, Edward Ladd, H. E. Sibley, and Chief of Police William O. Freeman.

Five members of the Evanston Walking club left yesterday for a hiking tour along the Canadian border. The party went by train to Ely, Minn., and will start their walking jaunt from there. N. J. Weston, physical director of the Evanston Y. M. C. A. and director of the club, will head the party which includes Mary Heath, Olga Schomberg, Helen Crain, and Floyd Van Arrooy.

Democrats of 50th Ward to Hold Picnic on Sept. 7

The annual picnic and outing of the Fiftieth Ward Regular Democratic club will be held Sept. 7 at Engstler's grove, Devon and Lincoln avenues. James Quinn, chairman of the committee in charge, announced last week. More than 5,000 residents of the ward are expected to attend the outing, Mr. Quinn said.

His Only Job in U. S.

After 58 years of work in Lincoln park, Nels Nelson, 2451 Burling street, one of the oldest public employes in the state, has been retired on a pension. Mr. Nelson, who is 83 years old, is a native of Sweden. He came to the United States and Chicago in 1871 and immediately started work as a teamster for the Lincoln park commissioners.

At that time Lincoln park was little more than a strip of sand extending from North to Fullerton avenues, he said. It served as a city dumping ground as well as a park and all hauling was done by ox teams. Until recently he was in charge of the grass sprinkling crews who are constantly at work during the summer.

Mr. Nelson has lived in his present home for 35 years and since the death of his wife three years ago, two daughters, Miss Jennie Nelson and Mrs. Walter Bladstrom, have made their homes with him.

He has been granted a pension by the retirement board of the Park Employes' Annuity and Benefit fund, an organization created in 1919 by act of the state legislature for the benefit of the employes of the south park commissioners, west park commissioners and Lincoln park commissioners. Officers of the board are: president, Daniel A. Roberts; secretary, Stephen D. Forst, and trustee, Charles E. Peace.

Will Sail for Europe.

Mrs. C. R. Erwin of Kenilworth will leave Friday for Europe, returning to America late in the fall.

FOUR NEW PARK POLICE CHOSEN FOR NORTH SHORE

Four new policemen for the North Shore park district were appointed at a recent meeting of the park commissioners, Howard Savage, president of the board, announced last week. The new officers are Frank I. Michiels, 1757 Wallen avenue; Roy Trautman, 1749 Birchwood avenue; John A. Wood, 1420 Farwell avenue, and Peter J. Patterson, 1113 Loyola avenue.

The North Shore park board has jurisdiction over the territory bounded by Devon avenue, the lake, Howard street and the tracks of the Chicago and North Western railroad. Three boulevards, Sheridan road, Ashland avenue and Pratt boulevard, are patrolled by the park police under the direction of Capt. Fred Case, recently appointed by the board. Three members of the park police force, Cyril Harrington, Michael Ford and Don Roberts, recently joined the city police department. Frank McDonnel and Frank Lane have been promoted to motorcycle duty from the traffic squad, Capt. Case announced.

Playground Damaged by Storms Is Ready for Use

Elliott playground on the lake front in Evanston, which was partially inundated by recent storms, has finally climbed out of the shallows and is ready for use again according to announcement of the Evanston bureau of recreation. Tennis courts and beaches have been cleared of debris, piled up by the storms and the shelter house has been reinforced.

A $34.50
BOUDOIR CHAIR
$24.75

AT no time of the year are Hale's prices anything but modest, though the character of Hale's things for the boudoir might amply justify much higher figures. Now that everything is less by 10% to 20%, we believe you will find many genuine surprises here during the midsummer sale.

For instance, the boudoir chair pictured would be priced only $34.50 normally. Now it is $24.75—very, very reasonable, we think, for a chair that is hair-upholstered, webb-bottom, and available in a choice of lovely new cretonnes and chintzes.

Highland Park Lions Ask Markers at City's Gates

The Highland Park Lions club has petitioned the city council and the east park district for suitable markers at the various entrances to the city. A well designed gateway, arch or marker, they argue, would be in keeping with the beautiful surroundings of the town. A number of architects have been asked to submit sketches or suggestions to W. H. McKillip, president of the club.

CRITICIZE TYPE OF PAVING PUT ON KIMBALL AVE.

Residents of the Fortieth ward are objecting to the manner in which a strip of Kimball avenue between Carmen and Balmoral avenues is being paved, Ald. Joseph C. Ross announced last week. The complainants declare that the seven foot strips on each side of the widened roadway are being filled in with clay instead of sand and consequently the street will sag, as was the case with Albany avenue. The residents also contend that the middle section of the street should be completely repaved instead of resurfaced.

Two other sections of Kimball avenue are also being repaired at this time, Ald. Ross said. Between Grace street and Lawrence avenue street repair gangs have completed the concrete work and will lay the asphalt surface within the next two weeks. The other section is that between Bryn Mawr and Ardmore avenues.

Other streets in the Fortieth ward are also being patched, Ald. Ross said. Keeale avenue being repaired at the present time.

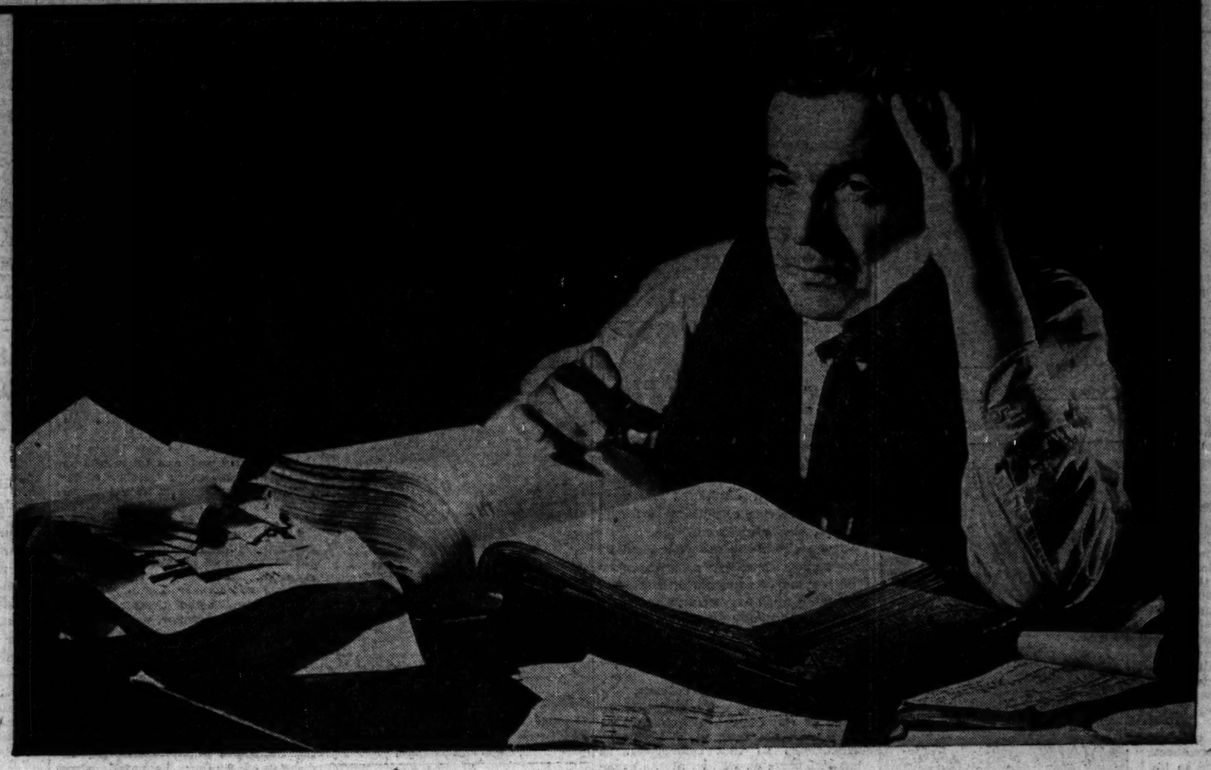
DISCOURAGED?



Do only red figures reward you for your efforts?

HAVE you all the business you can take care of? Were your sales last week greater than last year? Are you cashing in to the fullest extent on the amazing prosperity that the country enjoys today?

Many a business merely plugs along from month to month, by virtue of plenty of plugging on the owner's part. They show little if any improvement, in spite of all the long hours given to them. Have you mapped out any definite plans for building your business on sound merchandising principles, or are you kept too busy attending to present details to give any attention to the future?

Use This New Sales Builder

If you are interested in seeing your business grow—if you would like to get a greater share of the half-billion dollars that the families of your side of the city spend with retail merchants—if you are not satisfied just to go along from day to day—here is your chance to do something about it. The Chicago Tribune has developed a plan that scores of merchants in nearly every kind of retail business have adopted with amazing results. Many of these merchants—men in the same kind of business you are running—have increased their sales from 50% to 100% and even more, by using the up-to-date sales method which the Tribune plan involves. And the most amazing part of it all is the fact that it doesn't cost you one penny.

Send for "Bigger Profits"

You, too, can reap the benefits of the new sales method developed by the Chicago Tribune. It will work for you just as profitably as it is working for scores of other alert retailers. There is nothing complicated about it. Nor does it require any large investment to try it out.

The Tribune would like to place before you the complete details of this new selling method. All the facts, all the information you naturally will want to know before making a start, have been set forth in a 32-page book published especially for merchants of Chicago's North Side.

It's FREE—No Obligation

The title of this book is "Bigger Profits for Merchants." It will be sent free of charge to every North Side merchant who will take the trouble to ask for it. There are no strings to this offer. By filling in and mailing the attached coupon, you will not be obligating yourself in any way.

Other retailers have taken advantage of this offer, and many of them already are cashing in on North Side buying power as never before. What they have done, you can do.

BIRTH RATE HIGH IN 50TH WARD; FEW BABIES DIE

City Studies Housing and Sizes of Families.

Chicago's north side is an excellent place for a baby to be born and to survive the vicissitudes of infancy.

These facts were revealed in a recent report of the department of health compiled under the direction of Commissioner Arnold H. Kegel. The statistics are the first prepared by the health department of any large city which show a definite ratio between birth and infant death rates and housing conditions, density of population, and racial characteristics, according to Dr. Kegel. The figures are those of 1928.

Department officials have observed that the largest birth rates generally occur among the Jewish, German, and Scandinavian peoples, and the largest infant death rates among the Poles and Negroes. The lowest birth rates occur in American and Negro families, according to Dr. Kegel, and the lowest death rates among the Americans and some foreign residents.

On the north side, which is as a whole probably the most densely populated section of the city, the birth and infant death rates are slightly below the general average. The low birth rate is credited to the fact that the district is made up of a largely American population living in apartment houses.

The Fiftieth ward, however, is a district with ample breathing space which presented a favorable infant mortality record and one of highest birth rates in the city. In that ward an American population lives 10,000 to the square mile. Children have plenty of fresh air and parents are acquainted with modern hygienic methods. The birth rate is 21.4 per 1,000 population, and the death rate is 37.46 per 1,000 births.

Albany Park, in the Fortieth ward, has an even better birth record and an infant mortality record almost as good as that of the Fiftieth ward. Dr. Kegel believes the presence of a dominating Jewish and German population in the Fortieth ward brings the birth rate up and also accounts for the slightly larger death rate. In that section there were 21.5 births per 1,000 last year and 40.31 deaths per 1,000 births. The larger death rate may also be attributed to the fact that the population is denser, there being 15,000 residents to the square mile in the Fortieth ward.

Few Births in Edgewater.

Edgewater and Rogers Park have a large American population living in fairly close quarters, with a small birth rate and favorable infant mortality record.

Only 13.7 births occurred in the Forty-ninth ward, home of apartment dwellers, last year for each 1,000 persons. There were 47.87 infant deaths per 1,000 births. In the Edgewater district 22,000 residents occupy each square mile.

The Forty-seventh ward, which has a slightly denser population, has almost the same record. In that ward there were 14.5 births per 1,000 population and 39.64 deaths per 1,000 births.

The German and Polish population of the Forty-fifth ward added to its families much more consistently, however. In this ward 31.2 births per 1,000 were recorded last year, while the death rate was average at 67.95 per 1,000 births.

The Forty-eighth ward had the smallest birth and almost the largest infant death rate on the north side last year. In this, the Uptown district, there were only 11.2 births per 1,000 and 85.72 infant deaths for each 1,000 born.

Low Rates in 44th and 46th.

In the Forty-fourth and Forty-sixth wards, where 29,000 residents occupy each square mile, both the birth and infant death rates were slightly below average. The former showed 16.6 births per 1,000 and 59.61 infant deaths, and the latter 14.0 births and 50.33 deaths per 1,000 deaths. In these districts the population is largely German and Scandaniavian, but the low birth rates are laid to the presence of numerous apartment hotels.

Strangely, the gold coast and industrial sections of the Forty-third ward give that section both average birth and death rates. According to health department officials, the births are high in the industrial communities, and low on the gold coast, but the combination equalizes the figures. That ward has 18 births per 1,000 and 58.36 deaths per 1,000 births.

The Forty-second ward, which includes both gold coast and poor Italian districts, has a birth rate of 12.7 per 1,000 and a death rate of 77.36 per 1,000 births. In this ward and the Forty-third the population is dense, 33,000 residents to a square mile.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—I had "fallen" pretty badly for a $139 fur coat at one of the shops in our district, but at the time the price was more than I could afford. A short time ago this shop advertised a sale of furs. So I was at the door bright and early and bought my coat for $99 with the promise of a year's free repair service.

Waukegan, Ill., Aug. 8.—There was a six tube radio for $65 in a local store that had caught my eye many months ago, but we couldn't afford it. Weeks passed and the machine was reduced slightly, but not sufficiently to meet my purse. Last evening I was surprised to hear that the radio store was having a sale. NORTH END GROUP URGES WIDENING CLYBOURN AVE.

Say the Project Would Speed Up Traffic.

At the latest meeting of the North End Improvement association of the 45th ward, the members went on record advocating widening Clybourn avenue, pointing out that it would expedite a considerable amount of Chicago's traffic. Clybourn avenue begins at 400 Division street and runs northwest to Belmont avenue at Western avenue, slightly more than three miles.

John Wolf, secretary of the association, said that the improvement of the street would not only be beneficial to motorists who use the street to reach Western avenue, but would also provide an outlet to Wacker drive by way of Franklin and Division streets. Clybourn avenue crosses several important thoroughfares including Diversey parkway, Ashland and Ogden avenues.

Urge Action Immediately.

Steps are to be taken immediately to urge the city to make the improvement, according to officers of the association. They are: President, Clarence Niesen; vice president, Arthur F. Schnell; recording secretary, Mr. Wolf; financial secretary, Charles R. Radatz; treasurer, Louis H. Koetke, and sergeant-at-arms, Fred Stammer.

George W. Schmidt, chairman of the association's tax equalization committee, reported to the members at the meeting held in Schmidt's hall, Clybourn and Wellington avenues, that the land values of district No. 8, which includes most of he 45th ward, are to be presented to the board of assessors with the recommendation that they be reduced. The committee also announced that the building values will be slightly reduced according to a survey recently completed by the association.

Asks Safety Loading Zones.

Two other ward improvements were recommended by the association. The association will ask that safety loading zones be built at the intersection of Western and Barry avenues, and that a policeman be placed on duty early in the afternoon at Western avenue and Roscoe street.

Directors of the association are Otto H. Wieghart, F. M. Becker, Ray T. Gillette, George Seebacher, Fred Essau, William E. Becker, Albert F. Kreutzer, and Louis Stade. The street committee is composed of Al Rahn, Charles Schmidt, Max Ramelow, Leo Brieske, Otto Streets, and William Miller.

Wins School Post.

WANTS AD POST TO SHARE THRILL OF CITIZEN CAMP

Member to Propose Tour of Inspection in 1930.

W. J. Patterson of Advertising Men's post, No. 38, of the American Legion says that next year plans will be formulated to have a delegation from Ad post inspect the Citizens' Military Training camp at Fort Sheridan and participate in the ceremonies. He says:

"The sight last Monday of keen, upstanding, vigorous young fellows marching in almost faultless formation, passing in review, and snappy cadet sergeants ringing out familiar commands to platoons following in rhythmic cadence certainly would have filled any legionnaire with memories of 1917-'18 and renewed the pep and spirit of old days. It is almost unbelievable—the results being accomplished with young fellows at C. M. T. camps. The physical benefits are a matter of record—added weight, erect bodies, alertness, and general well being. Boys are being given an understanding of the importance and responsibilities of citizenship, and are learning promptness and obedience to authority which will advance them rapidly in the business world."

Chester Horton, golf instructor, will be today's speaker at the noon meeting of Ad post in Hotel Sherman.

The Cook county council of American Legion auxiliaries is cooperating with the Illinois club in its gala week celebration which opened yesterday. The council will have a booth at the home port, East Chicago avenue, near the lake, where the exposition and programs will be held. There will be a display of the articles made by the ex-service men in the hospitals near Chicago. Miss Dagmar Romer, chairman of rehabilitation for the council, will be in charge of the booth and the sale of this handicraft. The articles from the Speedway hospital will be under her direct supervision, while those from North Chicago and Great Lakes and elsewhere will be in charge of Mrs. A. E. King.

Mrs. Melville Mucklestone, president of the Cook county council, has been active in assisting the Illinois club in its project. The department president of the auxiliary, Mrs. A. C. Duncan, will have a place on the program.

The annual pre-convention luncheon of the Cook county council will be held Saturday, Sept. 7, in the gold room of the Congress hotel at 12:30 o'clock. Mrs. Claude D. Raber, 7000 Stewart avenue, is chairman of arrangements. Mrs. Mucklestone has planned a program embracing all information concerning the department convention which is to be held in Rock Island, Sept. 15, 16, and 17.

Auxiliary members attended the citizens' military training camps on visitors' day. The state department gave a prize of a wrist watch in each one of the four courses to the boy who made the best record in the citizenship course.

At tomorrow night's meeting of Chipilly post, No. 310, Joseph De La Cour, commander of the sixth district, will tell of his experiences with "Hard Boiled" Smith and his marine M. P.s and how he broke up prison camp No. 3. La Cour will relate in detail his capture, escape and revenge, and how the villians of the piece came to their just deserts. Business of the meeting will consist in the election of delegates to the state convention. On the basis of membership the post is allowed five delegates.

Theodore B. Sachs post, No. 349, initiated eleven new members at its latest meeting, bringing the membership to fifty, the highest it has been in four years. The results have been credited to the efforts of Commander Emmett C. Stevens. Past Commander Ben Friedlander of Naval post and Comrade C. Cross of the same organization spoke.

RAINBOW VET IS BURIED WITH MILITARY RITES

Lieut. Frederick W. Johnson, who served overseas in the world war with the Rainbow division, was buried with military honors Tuesday at Rosehill cemetery. Members of Logan Square post of the American Legion constituted the firing squad.

LIEUT. F. W. JOHNSON.

Gassed in action, Lieut. Johnson never fully recovered his strength. A blister on the hand developed an infection which threatened blood poison. He was taken to St. Luke's hospital and operated on. There, while recovering, an accidental fall from an eleventh floor window caused his death.

Lieut. Johnson had seen much active service. He was with Pershing's column that went into Mexico after Villa. In the mobilization of state troops for the world war, he was a first sergeant with Company I of the old Second, later the 132d infantry. His ability won him quick promotion to a lieutenantcy.

Because of the disability incurred in the war he was advised by army physicians he could not do indoor work for several years. He was thus compelled to abandon his ambition of becoming a cartoonist, for which he had talent. At the time of his death he was employed as mail carrier.

Lieut. Johnson was a son of Mrs. Amanda Johnson and a brother of Mrs. C. H. Mayer of Wilmette, wife of the architect, with whom Mrs. Johnson lives. Another sister, Mrs. Walter E. Tedems resides in Lemont and a third, Mrs. Jennie Wakelund in Chicago, as does a brother, Clarence Johnson. He left his widow and a seven year old daughter at 5105 Addison street.

40TH WARD GETS STREET REPAIR FUND OF $85,000

Macadam Thoroughfares to Receive Benefit.

Repair of macadam streets in the 40th ward, the subject of a recent controversy between the department of public works and residents of the ward, will be made out of the regular vehicle tax fund as local property owners recommended, according to a statement of Commissioner Wolfe to B. A. Rooney, president of the Montrose District Boosters' association.

In answer to a recent request of the Montrose group for immediate repair of the streets Commissioner Wolfe said the bureau of streets has been instructed to repair as much of the streets as the money available will permit.

Fund Increased to $85,000.

According to the terms of the vehicle tax allotment for the 40th ward, only $5,000 may be used for the repair of macadam streets, but through the intervention of Ald. Joseph C. Ross and property owners of the district the appropriation for macadam streets will be raised out of the general fund of $85,000. The total appropriation for the ward will be kept within the stipulated $85,000, however, as originally allocated by the department of public works.

A survey is being prepared by the ward superintendent, Ald. Ross announced yesterday, to determine on which streets the macadam appropriation will be spent. Funds in addition to the original $5,000 were requested because there is a large amount of macadam pavement in an unusable condition.

The Montrose district association recommended repair of all streets between Montrose avenue and Irving Park boulevard and Crawford avenue and the north branch of the river. These streets are paved almost entirely with macadam and $5,000 would be insufficient, Mr. Rooney said.

Warns Against Discrimination.

"These repairs are necessary and urgent," he said. "The people on these blocks are taxpayers and are entitled to relief. They would be the objects of discrimination if their streets were not repaired simply because they happened to be paved with macadam instead of asphalt or concrete."

According to Mr. Rooney, when the city council reconvenes next month his association will seek legislation to prohibit milk trucks from traveling on Montrose avenue and tearing up the pavement. Milk trucks are the cause of the poor condition of the street, he said, and since Montrose avenue is an important east and west artery, a sound pavement should be maintained.

RADIO AMATEURS TURNING MORE TO TELEVISION

'Ham' Operators Abreast of All Progress.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Amateurs in the field of radio are keeping abreast of all the developments in the technique of broadcasting and receiving and are turning more and more to television, according to W. E. Downey, assistant chief of the radio division of the department of commerce, who is perhaps the best informed man in this country on the work of the "ham" operators.

Many of them are keeping in constant touch with the Byrd expedition in the Antarctic, according to Downey, and scores of them are receiving messages from the Graf Zeppelin on its around the world flight.

So important has the work of these experimenters become, Downey pointed out, that it will be one of the topics to be discussed at the international radio conference at The Hague on Sept. 18. They may even have representation at the parley.

Reviews History of Amateurs.

The history of radio amateur activity is reviewed by Mr. Downey in an especially prepared resumé, as follows:

"Amateur activity in radio can be said to have begun with the start of the radio art itself. There was, however, little noticeable activity in the United States until after 1900, and more particularly in 1909, when the S.S. Republic succeeded in obtaining, by the use of her wireless, assistance to save all of her passengers and crew after colliding with the S.S. Florida.

"In 1910 an act was passed by the United States government requiring certain steamers to be equipped with radio.

"On July 5, 1912, the International Radio Telegraph convention was signed at London which designated certain bands of wave lengths for various services and on Aug. 13 of the same year the act to regulate radio communication was passed by congress. This act was the first authority for control over amateur and point to point communication. Regulation 15 under section 4 of this act applies specifically to amateurs and provided that no private station not handling bona fide commercial traffic could operate on a wave length exceeding 200 meters, except by special permission of the secretary of commerce.

Hoover Backs Amateurs.

"The American Radio Relay league was organized in 1914 by a small enthusiastic group of amateurs. Its purpose was to band all amateurs together so that each amateur could talk to and know all about the other.

"President Hoover, shortly after he was appointed secretary of commerce, evidenced his interest in the amateur by requesting that the department be advised as to how it could be of best service to them and to further show his interest, he stated that the department would award a cup annually during that administration for the best radio equipment in a major degree manufactured by the amateur, under such conditions as their directors might lay down.

"The entrance of the United States into the world war made necessary the suspension of all amateur communication, but the army and navy, recognizing that the amateurs were well trained by their experience, enlisted 3,000 to 4,000 of them, and it has been said that they were among the most efficient operators in active service.

Kept Contact with McMillan.

"It will be recalled that communication with the McMillan expeditions was carried on by amateur stations. This would not have been possible otherwise.

"During the years that have gone by the amateur has embraced every opportunity to be of service. This is brought forcefully to mind in the international radio convention of 1927 wherein he is definitely mentioned for the first time in such a document and given an international place in the wave length spectrum.

"The growth of the amateur in numbers from the records of the radio division of the department of commerce indicates that at the end of the fiscal year 1913 there were 1,224 licensed amateurs and in 1928 there were 16,922."

Short Wave Auto Sets Banned by Michigan

DETROIT.—A new law in Michigan provides a fine of $1,000, imprisonment for six months, or both, for equipping or using an automobile with a short wave receiver unless the car is used and owned by a police officer or a police permit has been granted.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

Today we are broadcasting over again the famous prize fight between Pancho Villa, the tiny Filipino, and Jimmy Wilde, the pride of Wales and England, the idol of London's National Sporting club—for the flyweight championship of the world. It is the 18th of June, in 1923, at the Polo grounds, in New York City.

[Gong!]

There's the gong! Round one!

Both men are on their toes and out of their corners in a flash. They begin mixing it in the center of the ring. Good defense on both sides and lots of snappy and brilliant footwork. The brown boy lands a left to Wilde's head but it's a light blow. They're exchanging left hand punches. They don't mean much; each boy will depend on his right for the real punches. They've gone into a clinch. They're hammering each other about the body—Hey! Villa is tearing in—he lands a pair of hard left and rights to the head—now a right cross to the head. Wilde keeps in there with him—he doesn't seem to mind the punches—they've clinched again—now Referee Patsey Haley is breaking them apart—they're almost lightning fast, ladies and gentlemen, it's hard to keep track of the punches.

[Gong!]

That's all of round one. It was an even round, that first one, with neither boy having any particular advantage in there.

[Gong!]

There's the bell! Round two! Speedy getaway from the corners again and they're in the center of the ring, ready to battle. Owowowowow! Villa pastes a hard righthander to Jimmy's jaw, and he's got 'im dizzy! Jimmy's gone into a clinch and he's holding on, while the little Filipino is savagely attacking his body. Rights and lefts, quicker than we can tell you about them, to that slim white body! He's GOT WILDE GROGGY! THE CHAMPION IS STAGGERING AROUND THE RING! VILLA IS PASTING HIM WITH EVERYTHING BUT HOME PLATE! HE'S WALLOPING HIM ALL AROUND THE RING! Wilde comes into a clinch again! Now Patsey Haley breaks them apart, and Villa is after the champ again with those pokes to the head. THIS MAY BE THE FINISH! Wilde is trying hard! He's trying to come back and stave off the finish until the end of the round! He needs the smelling salts right now! Ohhh!

(Gong!)

And that's all of round two, ladies and gentlemen, but that last swing by Pancho put Jimmy Wilde on the mat, and his seconds came out and carried him back to his corner. His seconds are working over him in his corner, and he'll probably be able to stagger out for the third, but the finish is getting pretty close.

[Gong!]

Round three! Yep, Jimmy's getting up! He's coming out of his corner unsteadily, and Pancho goes three-quarters of the way across the ring to meet him! Jimmy's ready for fight! And he's trading punches with Pancho over there near his own corner. All the steam's gone out of Jimmy's pokes, I guess. The brown boy is taking everything without a whimper—he's pushing right in—waiting for a chance to sneak that right hand over against the jaw again! They're just sparring and waiting, Villa is not putting up any attack this time. He's on the defensive—he wants to tire out Jimmy before he puts over the little giant killer! Socko and socko!

[Gong!]

That's all of round three, ladies and gentlemen. Jimmy hasn't gone down yet, but he's tiring quickly, and it still remains only a question of time. Instead of tearing in and carrying the fight to the Welshman, Pancho Villa elected in that last session, to stay back and wait for the Welshman to tire himself out with punches that the brown boy easily stayed away from.

[Gong!]

Round four! Out they come for the fourth round, and they're slugging! Just standing up there in the center of the ring and trading punches to the body and the head. The brown boy is backing up. They've gone into a clinch! Haley pats them on the shoulder and they break away—now they're sparring—Wilde is coming in—Pancho is backing up! Jimmy's on the offensive.

[Gong!]

That's all of round four, ladies and gentlemen. It still looks like Villa's fight whenever he gets ready to go out and take it. Jimmy is just about worn out—there's no more juice left in his punches, and Pancho is taking them all over the face and body.

There's the whistle! Seconds out of the ring!

[Gong!]

That's the bell! Round five! Wilde is coming out his corner slowly. The speed has gone out of this fight now! Both men are pretty tired. Even 116 pound gets tired after four rounds of what they've been through! Villa is saving that right hand again; he's using the left almost alone. O! There's a left to the stomach that has Jimmy almost doubled up as he comes into a clinch!—it hurt him that time—now they've broken again, and Villa—uummmh! Villa landed a hard left to the face.

(Gong!)

That's the end of round five. Both men retire to their corners, and Jimmy's seconds rush in to see what they can do for that injured optic of Jimmy's. It's swollen shut and his face is lathered with blood. Pancho Villa is almost unmarked in his corner, but the brown skin is darker in spots to mark the places where Jimmy's been landing with that right hand of his. Jimmy is showing a lot of grit, sticking in there with Villa, when he knows he's lost the fight. This must be a typical example of real Welsh stubbornness. The seconds are getting Jimmy in shape for the next frame. They've given him a whiff at the bottle, and his bruised face screws up wryly at the odor. There's the signal—seconds out of the ring. Away go the pails and towels!

(Gong!)

Round six! Villa is coming out of his corner with a determined look on his face. He's landing lefts and rights to Jimmy's body! He's going to end it right now—that's what those punches are saying. Jimmy keeps his guard up and comes back weakly. Owow! The brown boy lands a left to the face—JIMMY STAGGERS BACK TO A NEUTRAL CORNER! VILLA IS TEARING IN AFTER HIM! He's driving blows at his body and head—there'll be no stopping Pancho now. Jimmy is motioning to the referee—Pancho is hitting him with the back of his hand and he doesn't like it, but Patsy motions the fighters to go on—Villa is going after him with lefts and rights to the body! WILDE IS STAGGERING BACKWARD! I GUESS IT'S ALL OVER NOW! THE LITTLE WELSHMAN IS GROGGY! HE CAN'T STAND UP BUT HE WON'T FALL DOWN! HE WON'T GO DOWN! VILLA IS BEATING HIM WITH BOTH FISTS BUT HE WON'T DROP! VILLA IS DRIVING HIM ALL AROUND THE RING. WILDE IS STOOPING OVER WITH HIS ARMS WRAPPED AROUND HIS HEAD! HE'S GOING TO KEEP ON! HE'S GAME . . . O, BUT HE'S GAME! Villa's on top of him now with punches—rights and lefts on the head! Wilde is still on his feet—he's unsteady—a good sock will end it right now——

(Gong!)

That's all of round six! And what a round! Wilde just dropped into his seat when his seconds pushed it out. He's done for now. He can't go into the next round! The crowd is shouting to Patsy Haley to stop it right now! Wilde's seconds are arguing with him to toss in the towel, but the little Welshman intends to fight it out until he drops. His seconds are wiping the claret from his face and body—from his nose, from a gash on his cheek and from that cut over his right eye. Both his eyes are almost closed.

It's nonsense for him to go back into the ring. There's the whistle—seconds out of the ring——

(Gong!)

There's the bell! Round seven! Wilde is staggering out! He can hardly raise his arms to defend himself. Villa has begun the shower of blows again to face and body! Rights and lefts, and rights and lefts that send the little Welshman staggering from pillar to post. He's reeling all around the ring, with Villa right after him all the time. He's taking terrible punishment, but he's too stubborn to fall down—his body's giving in—he can't hold his arms up—they're falling—his arms are betraying him—that little fighting tike is giving up—the mind says go on, but those arms won't respond. They're down! There it comes! Ohhhh! A right inside swing to the jaw, and Jimmy Wilde is on the mat—HE'S DOWN! PATSY HALEY IS COUNTING HIM OUT.

JEAN GOLDKETTE . . . . . .

Out of the old music called jazz has come a music of character. Out of the same music has grown an orchestral expression of the New World. Jean Goldkette has developed the music of the modern dance to a point of symphonic perfection. The band plays with a vitality that captures the evasive spirit of youth. It plays with versatility that encompasses both the Negroid spirit of the Congo cancan and the delicate air of a Colonial minuet. Simple melodies are developed into inspiring constellations of notes. The visions of Victor Young, orchestrator, take form in the studios of W-G-N. They are illuminated by Goldkette and broadcast. Time: 1:30, 2:25, 11:00.

Tonight Herbert Johnson will be heard in a brief piano recital. This capable young artist is one of the few Americans to reach such distinction as has Johnson. Critics acclaim him as a master of touch—as a brilliant technician—as the possessor of a sturdy musical background. 8:45.

LARRY LARSEN . . . .

Larry Larsen, organist, has selected a few of the lighter favorites for his programs today. Music that everybody knows, and music that everybody likes come in rollicking style from the Goldkette organ. It is the organ specially designed to meet the specifications of Jean Goldkette. Hear Larsen this afternoon and evening at 2:00 and at 6:30.

COSMO d'ALMADA . . .

Cosmo d'Almada, internationally famous baritone, and native of the United States, sings one of his last recitals before his departure for an engagement with an Italian troupe in Europe. The singer, of Spanish-American lineage, is booked for an engagement for a tour of Germany and the larger cities on the Mediterranean. Formerly Cosmo d'Almada has sung with opera companies from coast to coast, and was brilliantly successful during his concert tour of Italy. 8:45.

TOP KICKS AND REAR-RANK PRIVATES CARRY ON IN WORK AND PLAY

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

"The Church That Pennies Built" is the unusual title which has become attached to the Episcopal Church of the Advent, Logan boulevard and North Francisco avenue. And in a real sense pennies were responsible for the new $125,000 limestone edifice in which the parish now worships.

THE REV. GERALD G. MOORE.

Several years ago, while the church of the Advent was holding services in a small frame structure at the rear of the present church site, the rector, the Rev. Gerald Gratten Moore, hit upon the idea of launching a building fund by saving pennies. He broached the suggestion to his congregation, and it immediately met with hearty approval. As a result, the children and grownups of the parish started saving their pennies—some in milk bottles, some in banks, some in paper strips prepared for the purpose, and in a variety of methods.

The building fund grew rapidly, and the new church was started as a result. The cornerstone of the structure was laid on a December Sunday in 1926, Bishop Charles P. Anderson officiating. Dedication of the edifice took place Oct. 16, 1927. It is a Gothic structure of dignified proportions, the interior being entirely of Indiana limestone. The interior furnishings and windows were designed by Elmer C. Jensen, architect, who is also a vestryman of the parish.

Old Church Is Parish House.

The old church has been remodeled and now serves as a parish house, with offices, assembly rooms, kitchen, class rooms, and play quarters. Beneath the new church is a spacious parish hall, in English basement style. Provision has been made for a 102 foot tower on the church proper and for the installation of a carillon.

The Church of the Advent was founded in December, 1901, in what was then a sparsely settled section of Chicago—Logan Square. The first report of the parish shows twenty-one communicants. The Rev. D. D. Donnan of St. John's church, Irving Park, was the first deacon in charge. He was succeeded in 1902 by the Rev. H. C. Stone, who was followed by the Rev. Frederick Luke. Other clergymen to serve the parish were the Rev. Daniel Le Baron Goodwin, 1904-10; the Rev. A. T. Young, 1910-14; and the Rev. W. O. Homer, 1914-16.

When the Rev. Mr. Moore became rector in 1917, the church faced a heavy debt. While advancing financially under his leadership, the church has also gone forward in membership until today it numbers more than 1,200.

A son of the late Canon Moore, organizer of Episcopal churches in Chicago, the Rev. Mr. Moore was ordained as a deacon in 1912 and as a priest in 1913. His first charge was Trinity church, Belvidere, Ill. The Rev. Mr. Moore is a graduate of Shattuck school, Faribault, Minn.; of Northwestern university, and of Western Theological seminary. He is prominent in diocesan activities of his church, having been secretary of the diocese since 1923.

Summer School for All Creeds.

During this summer a vacation school, under the direction of the rector, was undertaken. With Deaconess Deborah Payne, the parish visitor, as superintendent, the school was operated five days a week, and children of all creeds and denominations in the neighborhood were invited to attend. Nearly a hundred children responded and the results, according to the rector, have been striking.

The school has served to keep the children off the streets, and to give them useful instruction in such subjects as basketry, pageantry, and manual training, as well as to furnish

Asserts Elevated Highway Means New Birth for W. Side

The elevated highway, which the west park commissioners propose to construct from the western city limits to the Chicago river, will result in a new birth for the west side and will unite the whole of Chicago, because good transportation to every part of the metropolitan district will then become possible.

GEORGE J. DEHN.

This statement was made Thursday in a statement by George J. Dehn, former member of the west park board and civic leader of the west side, to Col. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the west side committee of the Chicago Plan commission.

The commission is studying several proposed routes for the superhighway, and will shortly recommend one as the most suitable.

Expert on Traffic.

Mr. Dehn, as chairman of the park board improvements committee a few years ago, was responsible for the installation of Chicago's first traffic signal light at Ashland and Jackson boulevards, and has kept in close touch with traffic conditions throughout the city since that time. In his statement he signified his desire to help in every way to further what he termed "the greatest forward looking step in the development of not only the west side, but the whole metropolitan area."

"There is some talk among certain west side business men that this highway will serve only suburbanites desiring to enter the loop, and that the taxpayers who pay for it will receive a minor share of the benefits," Mr. Dehn said.

"These arguments to not appeal to me as sound logic, for the reason that a large percentage of the business and professional people of the west side, who pay a large share of the taxes, live in the suburban communities outside the city limits.

Live in Other Places.

"As proof of this," he continued, "my attention has been called to the fact that approximately 500 members of the Midwest Athletic club reside in Oak Park, River Forest, and other suburban towns. Surely these business people have a right to expect good transportation to the places where their business is located.

"Those who are opposed to this improvement have not given due thought to the development which is bound to take place after the construction of the highway.

"It is the history of every community," he pointed out, "that where transportation facilities are improved there follows a revival of building construction, business extension, and a general business boom worth from five to ten times the amount involved in the cost of the public improvement.

Speed Is Called Necessary.

"Furthermore, in a busy age, such as we now live in, it cannot be argued that congestion, loss of time, and waste make for good business. On the contrary, the thing necessary is good transportation to enable the people to move speedily to a given point, transact their business, and speedily move away.

"In spite of every action taken by the west park commissioners to improve the present surface facilities, the boulevards still remain far from adequate to properly relieve the tremendous congestion existing on the west side with any reasonable degree of safety.

"The element of safety alone justified, in my judgment, the construction of an elevated highway. It will remove hundreds of thousands of automobiles each day from the hazards of cross-town traffic, and, by the same token, will remove those hazards from the pedestrian.

Lights Increase Accidents

"Our whole west side is now cluttered up with stop and go lights; constant demands are being made for more, and in addition to slowing up traffic, strange as it may seem, statistics prove that stop and go lights increase rather than decrease accidents, with resultant human and property damage.

"These are but a few of the reasons that have prompted me to take an unalterable position in behalf of a west side elevated highway."

The committee of Oak Park civic leaders recently appointed to study the highway project by President Charles H. Crysler visited Dr. John Dill Robertson, president of the west park board, Wednesday to formally IRVING CAMPBELL of Norwood Park, the popular steamfitter, who has brought warmth to the hearts and hearths of many of Chicago's 400, if any, and whose hobby is shipbuilding, has added another model to his fleet of old time sailing vessels and the collection is now bigger and better than ever, if that were possible. Irv has made a deep study of his chosen avocation and has hobnobbed with veteran sea captains and chanteymen to increase his nautical lore. This research, combined with technical knowledge and skilled craftsmanship, has enabled him to produce ships built to scale and authentic to the smallest detail that are a delight to all beholders. Wherefore, in Irv's home at 6030 Oconto avenue one finds about anything from a full rigged craft, nine inches from stem to stern, to models as long as three feet. He can be found almost any evening in his hobby workshop engaged on a new design. Irv is a Mason and a Goodfellow, if not an Odd Fellow, and his hospitality is famous among his friends. And we certainly hope Irv's mother-in-law, Mrs. Nellie E. Cedarburg, sees this, so she will know that everybody appreciates Irv just as much as she does.

STUDIES EFFECT OF HOUSING ON W. SIDE BABIES

Birth Rate High in 39th Ward; Few Die in 24th.

Newborn west side residents who are greeted on their arrival with plenty of fresh air, who take up residence in a district where the population is not dense, and who choose parents of adequate income have a better chance of living to enter kindergarten than youngsters without these advantages.

These facts were revealed in a recent report of the department of health compiled under the direction of Commissioner Arnold H. Kegel. The statistics proving these conclusions are those of 1928 and are the first prepared by any large city showing the relation of infant birth and death rates to housing conditions, density of population, and racial characteristics, according to Dr. Kegel.

Department officials have observed that the largest birth rates are reported among Jews, Germans, and Scandinavians, and the largest infant death rates among Poles and negroes. The lowest birth rates occur in American and negro families, according to Dr. Kegel, and the lowest death rates among the Americans and foreign residents of larger income.

39th Ward Births Numerous.

The 39th ward has the largest birth rate of the west side, according to the health department report, and there are only 10,000 residents per square mile in the ward. Last year 25.9 babies per 1,000 were born there, and 47.30 per 1,000 births died in infancy. In this ward, which with the 41st ward composes the great expanse of northwest side one-family homes, the predominating population is Polish. While Polish babies in other parts of the west side have a large mortality, youngsters born in the healthful atmosphere of these wards stand a good chance of growing up.

In the 41st ward where the birth rate is also high there are only 5,000 residents per square mile. Last year 23.9 babies per 1,000 were born, and of these 44.36 per 1,000 births died in infancy.

Births also are numerous among the Jewish and German residents of Albany park. In the 40th ward there are 15,000 residents per square mile, 21.5 births per 1,000 population, and only 40.31 deaths per 1,000 births.

Figures from 37th Ward.

In the 37th ward, although there are only 14,000 residents per square mile, the birth rate is low and the death rate is high. The low birth rate is explained by the department by the fact that there is a large native American population in the ward, while the presence of less educated classes of both Americans and Scandinavians is held responsible for a death rate somewhat higher than in other sections of the west side. The birth rate is only 14.8, and the death rate is 63.97.

The 30th ward, in south Austin, presents somewhat the same condition. A predominating American population lives approximately 17,000 to the square mile. This district has a birth rate of 17.8, and a low infant death rate of 44.20 per 1,000 births. Dr. Kegel explains that the latter fact is due to the presence of Columbus park in the district, giving babies fresh air, although they live close together.

The Polish and Bohemian residents of the Lawndale district are also favored with the presence of a large park, Douglas, and likewise have a low death rate. In that ward, approximately 16 births per 1,000 population occurred last year, and only 44.06 youngsters per 1,000 born failed to survive.

Deaths High in Industrial Area.

The wards on the near west side which have been invaded by industry have large death rates and birth rates below average.

These wards are populated with poorer classes of Negroes, Italians, Greeks, and Jews. Consequently the death rates are high. In the 21st ward the birth rate is 16.1 per 1,000 persons and the death rate 93.72 per 1,000 births; in the 28th ward, 19.6 births and 72.23 deaths; in the 27th ward 14.3 births and 111.69 deaths. All of these wards have 25,000 residents per square mile, only an average metropolitan density.

In the 22d, 29th, and 38th wards, where 25,000 residents live in each square mile, the death rate is average as well as the birth rate. Bohemians, Jews, and American born live in these wards, which present average housing conditions.

One of the lowest death rates in the city is in the 35th ward, where a population of Jews and Scandinavians literally raise their children in Humboldt park. There the birth rate is 17.4 per 1,000, and the death rate is only 38.86 per 1,000 births. Twenty-nine thousand residents live in each square mile of territory.

Average Rates in Four Wards.

The statistics show that average birth and death rates occur among residents of the 25th, 26th 34th and 36th wards.

The 24th ward, according to Dr. Kegel, is an exception to almost all the rules that govern birth and infant death rates.

In this ward is found the densest population in the entire city, one of the lowest birth rates, and the lowest infant death rate. Sixty-two thousand residents occupy one square mile in the 24th ward, there are 12.3 births per 1,000, and only 29.05 deaths per thousand births. The population is solidly Jewish.

Dr. Kegel explains that the low death rate is due to the fact that Douglas park presents an ideal promenade for baby carriages and that young mothers of the district are quick to make use of the hospital and dispensary facilities available near at hand. No explanation of the low birth rate has been found.

In the 33d ward, one of the river wards invaded by industry, a high death rate is found among new born Polish children. The same is true of the 21st ward, because of the density of population and the lack of favorable surroundings. The Italian district of the 32d ward, also a section of poor housing, has a high infant mortality.

ELMWOOD PARK FAIR STARTING SEPT. 5, ARRANGED BY LEGION

Initial steps in the plans for the first annual fair for Elmwood Park have been taken by the fair committee appointed some time ago by Elmwood Park post No. 686 of the American Legion. The exposition is to be staged in the vicinity of 7600 West Grand avenue three nights, beginning Sept. 5. Members of the committee opine that it will improve business for merchants of Elmwood Park and encourage a sense of community interest among the residents of the village. A large number of visitors from Chicago and various suburbs is expected.

The personnel of the fair committee is as follows: General chairman, John A. Day; fair manager, Frank M. Hartigan; finance, Joseph L. O'Brien; secretary, Richard Burke; publicity, Joseph F. Cappech, and business manager, John J. Murphy.

Mr. Day, who is Ninth district commander, expressed his gratification for the work being done by the American Legion in community affairs. During a recent tour of the Ninth district, especially in the Chicago suburbs, he said, he witnessed numerous activities being carried on by the Legion. Mr. Day expects the Elmwood Park fair to be the greatest advertisement the community has ever had.

Frank M. Hartigan, fair manager, has established headquarters in the new Elmwood Park municipal building.

MOVE TO WIDEN SUNNYSIDE AVE. WEST OF AUSTIN

Members of two northwest side community organizations, the West Montrose Avenue Improvement club and the Norwood Community association, are advocating the widening of Sunnyside avenue from Austin to Narragansett avenues and the elimination of a sharp curve in the street at Austin avenue.

East of Austin avenue Sunnyside recently has been paved all the way to Milwaukee avenue. The width of the pavement is about 60 feet, with a 20 foot parkway on each side. Before paving is done west of Austin avenue officials of the two improvement clubs assert that the curve in the street should be taken out and a uniform width effected.

West of Narragansett avenue Sunnyside is expected eventually to be extended to the forest preserve road.

The West Montrose Avenue Improvement club is also interested in maintaining the 5 cent buses on Montrose avenue between Knox and Narragansett avenues, which are now running. Some time ago the attorney general's office filed an injunction to stop independent bus owners from operating, and the case is coming up before Master in Chancery Doyle on Sept. 9. Members of the club hope to keep the buses in operation until a final settlement of the traction problem is reached.

The next meeting of the club will be held on Sept. 11. Officers are: President, Dr. H. J. Wieland; vice president, William H. Malone; secretary, M. J. Dornstauder, and treasurer, E. E. Fick.

The president of the Norwood Community Association is Charles Foster.

41st Ward Republicans Make Plans for Picnic

Plans for the picnic to be held by the 41st Ward Regular Republican organization at Kolze's grove, Irving park boulevard and Narragansett avenues, next Saturday, are progressing rapidly, according to Frank P. Murphy, general chairman of the event. Committees in charge have arranged a program including open air vaudeville, dancing with Gualano's orchestra, baseball, and races. An ice cream festival and dance was held at the party headquarters, 5303 Lawrence avenue, last Friday evening.

MILITARY FUNERAL HELD FOR VETERAN OF RAINBOW DIVISION

Lieut. Frederick W. Johnson, who served overseas in the world war with the Rainbow division, was buried with military honors Tuesday at Rosehill cemetery. Members of Logan Square post of the American Legion constituted the firing squad.

Gassed in action, Lieut. Johnson never fully recovered his strength. A blister on the hand developed an infection which threatened blood poison. He was taken to St. Luke's hospital and operated on. There, while recovering, an accidental fall from an eleventh floor window caused his death.

LIEUT. F. W. JOHNSON.

Lieut. Johnson had seen much active service. He was with Pershing's column that went into Mexico after Villa. In the mobilization of state troops for the world war, he was a first sergeant with Company I of the old Second, later the 132d infantry. His ability won him quick promotion to a lieutenantcy.

Because of the disability incurred in the war he was advised by army physicians he could not do indoor work for several years. He was thus compelled to abandon his ambition of becoming a cartoonist, for which he had talent. At the time of his death he was employed as mail carrier.

Lieut. Johnson was a son of Mrs. Amanda Johnson and a brother of Mrs. C. H. Mayer of Wilmette, wife of the architect, with whom Mrs. Johnson lives. Another sister, Mrs. Walter E. Tedems resides in Lemont and a third, Mrs. Jennie Wakelund in Chicago, as does a brother, Clarence Johnson. He left his widow and a seven year old daughter at 5105 Addison street.

DANES PLAN TO ERECT STATUE OF JACOB RIIS

The Danish people of Chicago are making plans in cooperation with the northwest park district to place a memorial statue of Jacob A. Riis in Riis park, Narragansett and Fullerton avenues. Riis, from a lowly beginning, became a profound student of his people and devoted much time to their interests in New York and other parts of the country. He was a personal friend of the late Theodore Roosevelt. The statue will probably be situated in one of the most prominent parts of the park. Further details are to be given out by the northwest park district office later.

Logan Square Lions See Themselves on the Screen

Movies taken at the recent picnic of the Logan Square Lions were shown at a luncheon of the club held last Thursday at 2350 North Kedzie boulevard. Members present at the picnic had a pleasant time identifying themselves on the screen. The club held a golf outing on Aug. 8 at the Mohawk Country club. Sons' and daughters' day will be held by the Logan Square Lions at their next meeting on Thursday.

AUSTIN LEGION TO BE HOST TO FIFTH DISTRICT

Session Wednesday Will Be Held in Town Hall.

Austin post, No. 52, of the American Legion, will be host at the fifth district meeting to be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday night at the new Austin town hall, Central and Lake streets. Commander Blaine Brooks Germon announces "a few speeches, plenty of wisecracks, a hot meeting in a cool place, surprises, and as little business as possible." He urges his comrades to "see and hear Shillinglaw, Savage, McGann, Benston, Kellogg, and 'the old gang.'"

The fifth annual picnic of Forest Park post, No. 414, will be held today in Wing park, Elgin. Comrades are urged to get out as early as possible, for benches and tables are scarce and "first come, first served." The program includes a ball game, races, swimming, golfing, tennis, and horse shoe games. Ice cream, soft drinks, and coffee will be served free.

The Cook county council of American Legion auxiliaries is coöperating with the Illinois club in its gala week celebration which opened yesterday. The council will have a booth at the home port, East Chicago avenue, near the lake, where the exposition and programs will be held. There will be a display of the articles made by the ex-service men in the hospitals near Chicago. Miss Dagmar Romer, chairman of rehabilitation for the council, will be in charge of the booth and the sale of this handicraft. The articles from the Speedway hospital will be under her direct supervision, while those from North Chicago and Great Lakes and elsewhere will be in charge of Mrs. A. E. King.

Mrs. Melville Mucklestope, president of the Cook county council, has been active in assisting the Illinois club in its project. The department president of the auxiliary, Mrs. A. C. Duncan, will have a place on the program.

The annual pre-convention luncheon of the Cook county council will be held Saturday, Sept. 7, in the gold room of the Congress hotel at 12:30 o'clock. Mrs. Claude D. Raber, 7000 Stewart avenue, is chairman of arrangements.

Mrs. A. C. Duncan, president of the American Legion auxiliary, department of Illinois, predicts that the state convention of the auxiliary to be held at Rock Island, Sept. 16 and 17, will be the best attended of any similar event in the history of the organization.

Mrs. Duncan reports gains made in all programs of the auxiliary throughout the year. The national quota of 24,164 members was reached on July 15. There are now 446 units and 23 of these are new. The sum of $45,000 was spent for the aid and comfort of ex-servicemen at various institutions. Much has been done in behalf of the children at the Illinois Soldiers' Orphans' home, and the erection of a $3,000 clubhouse at the home is now under way.

Commander Walter Jasper announces the formal opening of the Consumers' post summer home at Wilson, Ind., in the heart of the Sand Dunes. The members of the post took their families to the opening. The cottage is to be used by the members and their families during both summer and winter. It is near the ski jump at Miller, Ind. Several other posts have been invited down for the week-ends.

Theodore B. Sachs post, No. 349, initiated eleven new members at its latest meeting, bringing the membership to fifty, the highest it has been in four years. The results have been credited to the efforts of Commander Emmett C. Stevens. Past Commander Ben Friedlander of Naval post and Comrade C. Cross of the same organization spoke.

At tomorrow night's meeting of Chilpilly post, No. 310, Joseph De La Cour, commander of the sixth district, will tell of his experiences with "Hard Boiled" Smith and his marine M. P.s and how he broke up prison camp No. 2. La Cour will relate in detail his capture, escape and revenge, and how the villians of the piece came to their just deserts. Business of the meeting will consist in the election of delegates to the state convention.

Englewood post, No. 61, recently authorized its service officer to purchase a set of six swings for the orphan boys at Normal. The swings are made of almost indestructible material.

CIVIC REFORM BODY PREPARES TO BEGIN WORK

Name Committees in Next Two Weeks.

Organization of civic groups representing the various sections of the city to obtain reforms in local government will be completed within a few weeks, according to temporary officers of the association.

The union of business and improvement groups is sponsored by the Northwest Federation of Improvement clubs and is being organized to obtain tax reduction. At the first meeting of the group at the city hall early this month T. P. Quinn, member of the federation, was elected temporary chairman.

Preparing Committee List.

Mr. Quinn announced yesterday that he is preparing a list of committees who will handle the work of the new organization, and will have the roster completed within two weeks. Another meeting will probably be held soon, according to Mr. Quinn, at which time the committees will begin work.

While more than 150 civic leaders of the various communities of Chicago were present at the last meeting, at least 300 are expected to respond to the next call, Mr. Quinn said.

"We feel that we accomplished a great deal at our first meeting in the city council chambers," Mr. Quinn said, "and are prepared to get down to real work as soon as the committees are named."

Head Research Groups.

Although appointments have not yet been made, the following men will probably head committees to conduct research into the various local governing bodies:

F. M. Lingren of the Brainerd Improvement association—the board of assessors and the board of review.

O. F. Carpenter, the Liberal club—the city council.

S. H. Haddock, Montrose District Booster's association—the sanitary district.

O. W. Holmes, president of the federation—the state constitution.

A. H. Easter, 16th Ward Improvement club—the board of education and the county board.

John Klier will head the committee on publicity and education, and other functional committees will probably be headed by Dr. H. J. Wieland, Richard B. Hart, E. F. Boyle, L. R. Cooper and C. J. Foster, according to Mr. Quinn.

NORTHWEST SIDE MUSICIANS OPEN NEW CLUBROOMS

The Filareci chorus, a Polish musicians' organization of the northwest side, has recently opened clubrooms at 1956 Division street. Organized by eight Polish musicians in 1907, the club now numbers forty active members and thirty honorary members. The purpose of the organization is to encourage the development of musical talent among Chicago's young people of Polish parentage and to further public appreciation of the great Polish choral composers. New members must have at least rudimentary knowledge of music and a promising voice for training under the director, Arno Mario Hess. The chorus has been heard in concert work in Chicago and vicinity and has given programs over W-G-N.

Northwest Parks' Band Is Rounding Into Form

The northwest park district office announced last week that rehearsals of the Northwest Park District band are progressing satisfactorily. The musicians are under the directorship of Al Hupe, formerly a member of Sousa's band. The personnel of the outfit numbers about twenty.

1,650 in Ball League.

There are 1,650 boys competing in the indoor baseball league of the Northwest Parks district, according to a statement made last week at the office of the commissioners.

K. OF C. PLANNING BIG PAGEANT FOR COLUMBUS DAY

West Side Leaders Active in Preparations.

BY THOMAS WREN.

To commemorate the 437th anniversary of the discovery of America an elaborate celebration will be staged by the Chicago Knights of Columbus on Columbus day, Oct. 12, at the Chicago Stadium.

FRANK J. ENRIGHT.

Arrangements for the demonstration are being supervised by Frank J. Enright, president of the Chicago chapter of the Knights of Columbus. North side K. of C. councils and their grand knights have been assigned an important part in the staging of the Columbus day celebration.

Members of the following west side councils will be included in the cast of the spectacle: Americus, Bishop Fallon, Cardinal, Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Commodore Barry, Damen, Father Setters, Feehan, Franklin Park, General Sherman, Hennepin-Shields, Hildebrand, Hughes, Lafayette, Nazareth, Oak Park, Phil Sheridan, St. Francis Xavier, St. Patrick's and Washington.

West Side Grand Knights Active.

Michael J. Howlett, past grand knight of Americus council, has been appointed general chairman. Assisting him are the following grand knights of councils on the west side:

James M. Kennedy	Edward T. Hartnett
J. J. Kane	Joseph A. Fogarty
Silas A. Hoberg	Charles L. Chambers
John J. Lee	A. L. Fik
Thomas F. Collins	H. E. McEvoy
J. J. Connell Jr.	Peter J. Murphy
Francis Murphy	William J. McCarthy
Joseph A. Mueller	Robert J. Bayer
Francis V. Viola	W. P. McElligott
Salvatore Tortoriello	Francis P. Kevil
J. P. Delaney

The celebration will consist of a mass pageant depicting the landing of Columbus and a speaker of national eminence will deliver the principal address. It is expected that approximately 25,000 Chicago knights and their friends will attend the stadium celebration.

Martin H. Carmody, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, will deliver an address on Columbus. Many other novel and entertaining attractions will complete the program.

Stresses Significance of Day.

Several meetings have already been held by the grand knights and district deputies of the Knights of Columbus in Cook county and at one of these meetings State Deputy Edward Sullivan said in discussing Columbus day:

"The 12th of October is our day and we should celebrate it in a real way in honor of Columbus way.

"Discovery day sums up and holds in mind the most tremendous story of human accomplishment. Other things that men have done for mankind are small in any compared with the gift to civilization of half of the earth's surface. Measured by its contribution to the human race, it is universal, and while we simply accept as we do the beneficences of Providence, let it not be said in derogation of our gratitude that in the enjoyment of this gift we have forgotten the giver. It is only befitting that this year the greatest tribute should be paid to our noble discoverer."

NEW EDISON PARK CHURCH BUILDING NEARLY FINISHED

The new Edison Park Lutheran church building is expected to be completed soon, according to O. E. Hustad, chairman of the building committee. The corner stone was laid last Sunday afternoon by the Rev. Roy A. Harrisville, pastor of the congregation.

Funds have been raised under the direction of the building committee headed by Mr. Hustad. Other members of the committee are Ernst Anderson, A. B. Olson, Mrs. A. B. Olson and A. Dahlin. Mr. Harrisville, who organized the congregation in February, 1927, has taken an active part in the erection of the new church.

Deacons of the church are Ernst Anderson, O. E. Hustad, B. J. Gilbert, A. B. Olson, Russell Frye, Howard M. Harrisville and Harold Oyen. Other officials of the congregation are J. W. Stake, secretary; L. A. Wagner, financial secretary; A. B. Olson, treasurer; Helma Leesch, organist, and Rev. R. A. Harrisville, choir director.

River Grove Group Picnics.

Residents of River Grove were the guests of the River Grove Business men's association at a picnic held at Wilson lake last Thursday. This was the second annual affair of the kind held by the association.

CLASSICAL DANCERS WIN PHOTO PRIZE

A picture of members of a class in classical dancing this week won for Miss Francis Pascoe, 55 Sixth street, Hinsdale, the first prize of $5 in The Tribune's play picture contest for amateur photographers of the west side. The dancer in the foreground is Miss Virginia Hesler, First street, Hinsdale. The second prize of $3 was awarded to Fred H. Voelsch, 5131 Oakdale avenue, for "The New Swimmin' Hole." The picture shows Ruth Voelsch, June Voelsch, Fern Voelsch, Grace Voelsch, Loraine Hupfer, Lucille Hupfer, Audrey Hupfer, Raymond Hupfer and Allen Richter splashing in a pool created by the excavation for a residence. Alfred Ahbe, 1604 Ashland avenue, Des Plaines, won the third prize of $2 with a picture of a lemonade dispensary. Left to right: Sylvia Stellman, Joan Barbara Ahbe, Louise Stellman and Belton Ahbe, in the stand; Clyde Stellman and Royanna Stellman. Doris Louise Ahbe is standing behind Royanna.

$1.98 WOOL SWEATER WEARS FIVE YEARS, STILL APPEARS NEW

The Tribune will pay $2 for each story of the best bargain obtained in a neighborhood store, printed in the Metropolitan section. Address Bargain, Metropolitan Section, The Tribune. Make them short and snappy, writing on only one side of the paper, and print your name and address plainly.

Berwyn, Aug. 8.—More than five years ago I purchased an all wool sweater at a clearnce sale in a neighborhood department store. It had been reduced in price from $10 to $1.98. I have worn this sweater continually and when I reknit the cuffs recently it again looked like new. Washing and wearing do not seem to have any effect on either the quality or its appearance. In all probability it will wear well for many more years.

MRS. A. JEDLICKA, SR.,
6903 West 26th street.

BARGAIN AT FIRE SALE.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—My best neighborhood bargain was an ice box. A hardware store in this locality held a fire sale three years ago at which I purchased a standard $35 refrigerator for $4. It had been scorched only slightly on the top and a little sandpapering and varnish made it like new. It has given excellent service and no doubt will continue doing duty indefinitely.

VICTOR GUDVITZ,
3936 North Ledaire avenue.

$1.98 BUYS $22.50 COAT.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—I procured a remarkable bargain recently at a department store in Austin on Chicago avenue—a genuine cheviot coat for my little six year old daughter. The original price had been $22.50 and I got it for $1.98.

MRS. A. KENT.
1906 North Spaulding avenue.

Mrs. Rose De H. Brosnan, Lifetime West Sider, Dies

NORTH END GROUP URGES WIDENING CLYBOURN AVE.

Say the Project Would Speed Up Traffic.

At the latest meeting of the North End Improvement association of the 45th ward, the members went on record advocating widening Clybourn avenue, pointing out that it would expedite a considerable amount of Chicago's traffic. Clybourn avenue begins at 400 Division street and runs northwest to Belmont avenue at Western avenue, slightly more than three miles.

John Wolf, secretary of the association, said that the improvement of the street would not only be beneficial to motorists who use the street to reach Western avenue, but would also provide an outlet to Wacker drive by way of Franklin and Division strets. Clybourn avenue crosses several important thoroughfares including Diversey parkway, Ashland and Ogden avenues.

Steps are to be taken immediately to urge the city to make the improvement, according to officers of the association. They are: President, Clarence Niesen; vice president, Arthur F. Schnell; recording secretary, Mr. Wolf; financial secretary, Charles R. Radatz; treasurer, Louis H. Koetke, and sergeant-at-arms, Fred Stammer.

George W. Schmidt, chairman of the association's tax equalization committee, reported to the members at the meeting held in Schmidt's hall, Clybourn and Wellington avenues, that the land values of district No. 8, which includes most of he 45th ward, are to be presented to the board of assessors with the recommendation that they be reduced. The committee also announced that the building values will be slightly reduced according to a survey recently completed by the association.

Two other ward improvements were recommended by the association. The association will ask that safety loading zones be built at the intersection of Western and Barry avenues, and that a policeman be placed on duty early in the afternoon at Western avenue and Roscoe street.

Elgin Club Dines.

The weekly dinner of the Elgin Country club took place last Tuesday evening. In the bridge games which followed dinner favors for women were awarded to Mrs. J. A. Cowley and Mrs. C. P. Gubbins, and for men to E. H. Cutter and I. N. Garber.

FUNERAL RITES CONDUCTED FOR NORA M'NICHOLS

Last rites for Mrs. Nora McNichols, 1717 North Long avenue, were held last Tuesday morning at St. Peter Canisius church, Leclaire and North avenues, with interment in Mount Carmel cemetery. The Rev. James Cunningham, pastor of the church, conducted the service. Mrs. McNichols was a pioneer of the west side, having resided there for 40 years. The family has made its home at the present address for only about four years, but resided at the old home, 4718 West Erie street, for more than 35 years. When the McNichols family located there years ago the locality now known as North Austin was called Moreland.

GEORGE GORDON, BUILDER FOR 50 YEARS, IS DEAD

Knew 47th-Cottage Grove as Suburban Area.

George O. Gordon, 139 North Menard avenue, pioneer Chicago builder and resident of the west and south sides for a half century, was buried at Oak Ridge abbey Monday.

Mr. Gordon, who was 69 years old, came to Chicago more than 50 years ago from Prince Edward Island, and a short time after began a long career in the building business.

He began his building activity in the neighborhood of Cottage Grove avenue and 47th street, at that time a desirable suburban district and a rising home center. Mrs. Gordon recalls that the first houses constructed by Mr. Gordon had as a selling point the fact that they were located close to the steam railroad which ran into the suburbs south of 39th street at that time.

Mr. Gordon was an active member of the Austin Presbyterian church. He is survived by his widow and a daughter, Mrs. Henry Marsh, 3270 Sheridan road.

CHARLES PLANTZ DEAD; KNOWN TO WEST SUBURBS

The story of a boy who came to Chicago alone from Germany when 15 years old, worked as a grocery clerk on the near north side, finally took over the business, and later worked seventeen years as a representative of Washburn Crosby company, traveling through the western suburbs, came to an end last Sunday with the death of Charles Plantz, 516 South Beloit avenue, Forest Park.

For the last eleven years Mr. Plantz had been a resident of Forest Park. He was 61 years old. Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Barbara Plantz, his children, Charles F. Plantz and Mrs. Irene Tryner; his sister, Miss Susan Plantz, and his grandchildren, Frank A. Tryner Jr., James Tryner, and Regina Plantz.

Mr. Plantz was a member of St. Vincent's court, No. 87, Catholic Order of Foresters.

The funeral was held Wednesday from the residence in Forest Park to St. Bernadine's church, and thence to St. Joseph's cemetery, River Grove.

RAYMOND G. ICELY FUNERAL SERVICE HELD WEDNESDAY

Funeral services for Raymond G. Icely, west side business man for the last thirty years, were held at his residence, 641 North Harvey avenue, Oak Park, Wednesday.

Mr. Icely was one of the chief executives of the Wilson Western Sporting Goods company, 2037 Powell avenue, for the last seven years. Prior to this he was a department manager at Sears, Roebuck & Co., where he was employed for twenty years. He was 49 years old.

His funeral was attended by his widow, two children, Arline and Raymond Lawrence; his brother and business associate, Lawrence B. Icely, and three sisters, Mrs. M. Martin and Mrs. Edward Burmeister of Chicago and Mrs. I. A. Motter of Leaf River, Ill.

PARK VIEW OPENS CAMPAIGN TO GET SWIMMING POOL

Civic Groups Appeal to Commissioners.

A campaign to obtain a big outdoor swimming pool for the children of the Park View district will be launched by civic organizations of the neighborhood this week. This announcement was made yesterday by Edward Novak, president of the Park View association.

The East Park View Improvement association is joining with the former group in sponsoring the campaign, according to Mr. Novak, and the cooperation of other associations will be sought subsequently.

A petition will be circulated among residents of the community in behalf of the proposition, and when sufficient signatures are obtained the petition will be presented to the Irving Park district, which would construct the pool.

No Objectors to Plan.

No opposition has as yet been encountered in forming preliminary plans, Mr. Novak said, and there will be no objectors to the project. Residents of the district will most likely be unanimously in favor of it because there are no facilities for swimming in the entire neighborhood, he added.

According to John Klier, secretary of the Park View group, commissioners of the Irving Park district have indicated they will construct the swimming pool if a sufficient number of residents request it.

The logical spot for the swimming pool is at the Irving Park athletic field, officers of the civic groups believe. The field is located in the center of the district, at Central Park avenue and Addison street, and there is enough ground available.

Children Must Travel to Lake.

They point out that at present youngsters who want to swim must either travel a few miles east to the lake or use the pools provided in the neighboring Portage and River Park districts. Since the later are usually occupied by youngsters in the immediate districts, Park View children are often crowded out.

Leaders in the civic groups sponsoring the project are East Park View, M. J. Lakofka, president, and E. H. Selling, A. V. Martl, E. A. Bartch, W. G. Dode, and Anton Peter; Park View, Mr. Novak, Henry Fehlhager, Theodore Jacobsen, Mr. Klier, and Harry Tobey.

declare themselves unanimously in favor of the improvement and to pledge their support not only in obtaining its completion within the city limits of Chicago, but also to work for its extension through Oak Park and other western suburbs.

Route Will Be Accepted.

The committee told President Robertson that they favored the highway no matter which of the several tentative routes is selected by the Chicago Plan commission.

"Our committee is heartily in favor of the project, and wants it extended as far west as possible," President Crysler said. Members of the committee are Chairman C. J. Kalbfell, engineer; F. E. Hoover and Sampson Rogers Sr., prominent Oak Park manufacturers; F. E. Morrow, engineer; Mrs. C. C. Peterson, club woman, and civic leader; Col. A. D. DISCOURAGED?

Do only red figures reward you for your efforts?

HAVE you all the business you can take care of? Were your sales last week greater than last year? Are you cashing in to the fullest extent on the amazing prosperity that the country enjoys today?

Many a business merely plugs along from month to month, by virtue of plenty of plugging on the owner's part. They show little if any improvement, in spite of all the long hours given to them. Have you mapped out any definite plans for building your business on sound merchandising principles, or are you kept too busy attending to present details to give any attention to the future?

Use This New Sales Builder

If you are interested in seeing your business grow—if you would like to get a greater share of the half-billion dollars that the families of your side of the city spend with retail merchants—if you are not satisfied just to go along from day to day—here is your chance to do something about it. The Chicago Tribune has developed a plan that scores of merchants in nearly every kind of retail business have adopted with amazing results. Many of these merchants—men in the same kind of business you are running—have increased their sales from 50% to 100% and even more, by using the up-to-date sales method which the Tribune plan involves. And the most amazing part of it all is the fact that it doesn't cost you one penny.

Send for "Bigger Profits"

You, too, can reap the benefits of the new sales method developed by the Chicago Tribune. It will work for you just as profitably as it is working for scores of other alert retailers. There is nothing complicated about it. Nor does it require any large investment to try it out.

The Tribune would like to place before you the complete details of this new selling method. All the facts, all the information you naturally will want to know before making a start, have been set forth in a 32-page book published especially for merchants of Chicago's Northwest Side.

It's FREE—No Obligation

The title of this book is "Bigger Profits for Merchants." It will be sent free of charge to every Northwest Side merchant who will take the trouble to ask for it. There are no strings to this offer. By filling in and mailing the attached coupon, you will not be obligating yourself in any way.

Other retailers have taken advantage of this offer, and many of them already are cashing in on Northwest Side buying power as never before. What they have done, you can do.

RADIO AMATEURS TURNING MORE TO TELEVISION

'Ham' Operators Abreast of All Progress.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Amateurs in the field of radio are keeping abreast of all the developments in the technique of broadcasting and receiving and are turning more and more to television, according to W. E. Downey, assistant chief of the radio division of the department of commerce, who is perhaps the best informed man in this country on the work of the "ham" operators.

Many of them are keeping in constant touch with the Byrd expedition in the Antarctic, according to Downey, and scores of them are receiving messages from the Graf Zeppelin on its around the world flight.

So important has the work of these experimenters become, Downey pointed out, that it will be one of the topics to be discussed at the international radio conference at The Hague in Sept. 15. They may even have representation at the parley.

Reviews History of Amateurs.

The history of radio amateur activity is reviewed by Mr. Downey in an especially prepared resumé, as follows:

"Amateur activity in radio can be said to have begun with the start of the radio art itself. There was, however, little noticeable activity in the United States until after 1900, and more particularly in 1909, when the S.S. Republic succeeded in obtaining, by the use of her wireless, assistance to save all of her passengers and crew after colliding with the S.S. Florida.

"In 1910 an act was passed by the United States government requiring certain steamers to be equipped with radio.

"On July 5, 1912, the International Radio Telegraph convention was signed at London which designated certain bands of wave lengths for various services and on Aug. 13 of the same year the act to regulate radio communication was passed by congress. This act was the first authority for control over amateur and point to point communication. Regulation 15 under section 4 of this act applies specifically to amateurs and provided that no private station not handling bona fide commercial traffic could operate on a wave length exceeding 200 meters, except by special permission of the secretary of commerce.

Hoover Backs Amateurs.

"The American Radio Relay league was organized in 1914 by a small enthusiastic group of amateurs. Its purpose was to band all amateurs together so that each amateur could talk to and know all about the other.

"President Hoover, shortly after he was appointed secretary of commerce, evidenced his interest in the amateur by requesting that the department be advised as to how it could be of best service to them and to further show his interest, he stated that the department would award a cup annually during that administration for the best radio equipment in a major degree manufactured by the amateur, under such conditions as their directors might lay down.

"The entrance of the United States into the world war made necessary the suspension of all amateur communication, but the army and navy, recognizing that the amateurs were well trained by their experience, enlisted 3,000 to 4,000 of them, and it has been said that they were among the most efficient operators in active service.

Kept Contact with McMillan.

"It will be recalled that communication with the McMillan expeditions was carried on by amateur stations. This would not have been possible otherwise.

"During the years that have gone by the amateur has embraced every opportunity to be of service. This is brought forcefully to mind in the international radio convention of 1927 wherein he is definitely mentioned for the first time in such a document and given an international place in the wave length spectrum.

"The growth of the amateur in numbers from the records of the radio division of the department of commerce indicates that at the end of the fiscal year 1913 there were 1,224 licensed amateurs and in 1928 there were 16,928."

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

Today we are broadcasting over again the famous prize fight between Pancho Villa, the tiny Filipino, and Jimmy Wilde, the pride of Wales and England, the idol of London's National Sporting club—for the flyweight championship of the world. It is the 18th of June, in 1923, at the Polo grounds, in New York City.

[Gong!]

There's the gong! Round one!

Both men are on their toes and out of their corners in a flash. They begin mixing it in the center of the ring. Good defense on both sides and lots of snappy and brilliant footwork. The brown boy lands a left to Wilde's head but it's a light blow. They're exchanging left hand punches. They don't mean much; each boy will depend on his right for the real punches. They've gone into a clinch. They're hammering each other about the body—Hey! Villa is tearing in—he lands a pair of hard left and rights to the head—now a right cross to the head. Wilde keeps in there with him—he doesn't seem to mind the punches—they've clinched again—now Referee Patsey Haley is breaking them apart—they're almost lightning fast, ladies and gentlemen, it's hard to keep track of the punches.

[Gong!]

That's all of round one. It was an even round, that first one, with neither boy having any particular advantage in there.

[Gong!]

There's the bell! Round two! Speedy getaway from the corners again and they're in the center of the ring, ready to battle. Owowowowow! Villa pastes a hard righthander to Jimmy's jaw, and he's got 'im dizzy! Jimmy's gone into a clinch and he's holding on, while the little Filipino is savagely attacking his body. Rights and lefts, quicker than we can tell you about them, to that slim white body! He's GOT WILDE GROGGY! THE CHAMPION IS STAGGERING AROUND THE RING! VILLA IS PASTING HIM WITH EVERYTHING BUT HOME PLATE! HE'S WALLOPING HIM ALL AROUND THE RING! Wilde comes into a clinch again! Now Patsey Haley breaks them apart, and Villa is after the champ again with those pokes to the head. THIS MAY BE THE FINISH! Wilde is trying hard! He's trying to come back and stave off the finish until the end of the round! He needs the smelling salts right now! Ohhh!

(Gong!)

And that's all of round two, ladies and gentlemen, but that last swing by Pancho put Jimmy Wilde on the mat, and his seconds came out and carried him back to his corner. His seconds are working over him in his corner, and he'll prebably be able to stagger out for the third, but the finish is getting pretty close.

[Gong!]

Round three! Yep, Jimmy's getting up! He's coming out of his corner unsteadily, and Pancho goes three-quarters of the way across the ring to meet him! Jimmy's ready for fight! And he's trading punches with Pancho over there near his own corner. All the steam's gone out of Jimmy's pokes, I guess. The brown boy is taking everything without a whimper—he's pushing right in—waiting for a chance to sneak that right hand over against the jaw again! They're just sparring and waiting, Villa is not putting up any attack this time. He's on the defensive—he wants to tire out Jimmy before he puts over the little giant killer! Socko and socko!

[Gong!]

That's all of round three, ladies and gentlemen. Jimmy hasn't gone down yet, but he's tiring quickly, and it still remains only a question of time. Instead of tearing in and carrying the fight to the Welshman, Pancho Villa elected in that last session, to stay back and wait for the Welshman to tire himself out with punches that the brown boy easily stayed away from.

[Gong!]

Round four! Out they come for the fourth round, and they're slugging! Just standing up there in the center of the ring and trading punches to the body and the head. The brown boy is backing up. They've gone into a clinch! Haley pats them on the shoulder and they break away—now they're sparring—Wilde is coming in—Pancho is backing up! Jimmy's on the offensive.

[Gong!]

That's all of round four, ladies and gentlemen. It still looks like Villa's fight whenever he gets ready to go out and take it. Jimmy is just about worn out—there's no more juice left in his punches, and Pancho is taking them all over the face and body.

There's the whistle! Seconds out of the ring!

[Gong!]

That's the bell! Round five! Wilde is coming out his corner slowly. The speed has gone out of this fight now! Both men are pretty tired. Even 110 pound gets tired after four rounds of what they've been through! Villa is saving that right hand again; he's using the left almost alone. O! There's a left to the stomach that has Jimmy almost doubled up as he comes into a clinch!—it hurt him that time—now they've broken again, and Villa—uummmh! Villa landed a hard left to the face.

(Gong!)

That's the end of round five. Both men retire to their corners, and Jimmy's seconds rush in to see what they can do for that injured optic of Jimmy's. It's swollen shut and his face is lathered with blood. Pancho Villa is almost unmarked in his corner, but the brown skin is darker in spots to mark the places where Jimmy's been landing with that right hand of his. Jimmy is showing a lot of grit, sticking in there with Villa, when he knows he's lost the fight. This must be a typical example of real Welsh stubborneness. The seconds are getting Jimmy in shape for the next frame. They've given him a whiff at the bottle, and his bruised face screws up wryly at the odor. There's the signal—seconds out of the ring. Away go the pails and towels!

(Gong!)

Round six! Villa is coming out of his corner with a determined look on his face. He's landing lefts and rights to Jimmy's body! He's going to end it right now—that's what those punches are saying. Jimmy keeps his guard up and comes back weakly. Owow! The brown boy lands a left to the face—JIMMY STAGGERS BACK TO A NEUTRAL CORNER! VILLA IS TEARING IN AFTER HIM! He's driving blows at his body and head—there'll be no stopping Pancho now. Jimmy is motioning to the referee—Pancho is hitting him with the back of his hand and he doesn't like it, but Patsy motions the fighters to go on—Villa is going after him with lefts and rights to the body! WILDE IS STAGGERING BACKWARD! I GUESS IT'S ALL OVER NOW! THE LITTLE WELSHMAN IS GROGGY! HE CAN'T STAND UP BUT HE WON'T FALL DOWN! HE WON'T GO DOWN! VILLA IS BEATING HIM WITH BOTH FISTS BUT HE WON'T DROP! VILLA IS DRIVING HIM ALL AROUND THE RING. WILDE IS STOOPING OVER WITH HIS ARMS WRAPPED AROUND HIS HEAD! HE'S GOING TO KEEP ON! HE'S GAME . . . O, BUT HE'S GAME! Villa's on top of him now with punches—rights and lefts on the head! Wilde is still on his feet—he's unsteady—a good sock will end it right now—

(Gong!)

That's all of round six! And what a round! Wilde just dropped into his seat when his seconds pushed it out. He's done for now. He can't go into the next round! The crowd is shouting to Patsy Haley to stop it right now! Wilde's seconds are arguing with him to toss in the towel, but the little Welshman intends to fight it out until he drops. His seconds are wiping the claret from his face and body—from his nose, from a gash on his cheek and from that cut over his right eye. Both his eyes are almost closed.

It's nonsense for him to go back into the ring. There's the whistle—seconds out of the ring——

(Gong!)

There's the bell! Round seven! Wilde is staggering out! He can hardly raise his arms to defend himself. Villa has begun the shower of blows again to face and body! Rights and lefts, and rights and lefts that send the little Welshman staggering from pillar to post. He's reeling all around the ring, with Villa right after him all the time. He's taking terrible punishment, but he's too stubborn to fall down—his body's giving in—he can't hold his arms up—they're falling—his arms are betraying him—that little fighting tike is giving up—the mind says go on, but those arms won't respond. They're down! There it comes! Ohhhh! A right inside swing to the jaw, and Jimmy Wilde is on the mat—HE'S DOWN! PATSY HALEY IS COUNTING HIM OUT.

JEAN GOLDKETTE . . . . . .

Out of the old music called jazz has come a music of character. Out of the same music has grown an orchestral expression of the New World. Jean Goldkette has developed the music of the modern dance to a point of symphonic perfection. The band plays with a vitality that captures the evasive spirit of youth. It plays with versatility that encompasses both the Negroid spirit of the Congo, cancan and the delicate air of a Colonial minuet. Simple melodies are developed into inspiring constellations of notes. The visions of Victor Young, orchestrator, take form in the studios of W-G-N. They are illuminated by Goldkette and broadcast. Time: 1:30, 2:25, 11:00.

HERBERT JOHNSON . .

Tonight Herbert Johnson will be heard in a brief piano recital. This capable young artist is one of the few Americans to reach such distinction as has Johnson. Critics acclaim him as a master of touch—as a brilliant technician—as the possessor of a sturdy musical background. 8:45.

LARRY LARSEN . . .

Larry Larsen, organist, has selected a few of the lighter favorites for his programs today. Music that everybody knows, and music that everybody likes come in rollicking style from the Goldkette organ. It is the organ specially designed to meet the specifications of Jean Goldkette. Hear Larsen this afternoon and evening at 2:00 and at 6:30.

COSMO d'ALMADA . .

Cosmo d'Almada, internationally famous baritone, and native of the United States, sings one of his last recitals before his departure for an engagement with an Italian troupe in Europe. The singer, of Spanish-American lineage, is booked for an engagement for a tour of Germany and the larger cities on the Mediterranean. Formerly Cosmo d'Almada has sung with opera companies from coast to coast, and was brilliantly successful during his concert tour of Italy. 8:45.

40TH WARD GETS STREET REPAIR FUND OF $85,000

Macadam Thoroughfares to Receive Benefit.

Repair of macadam streets in the 40th ward, the subject of a recent controversy between the department of public works and residents of the ward, will be made out of the regular vehicle tax fund as local property owners recommended, according to a statement of Commissioner Wolfe to B. A. Rooney, president of the Montrose District Boosters' association.

In answer to a recent request of the Montrose group for immediate repair of the streets Commissioner Wolfe said the bureau of streets has been instructed to repair as much of the streets as the money available will permit.

Fund Increased to $85,000.

According to the terms of the vehicle tax allotment for the 40th ward, only $5,000 may be used for the repair of macadam streets, but through the intervention of Ald. Joseph C. Ross and property owners of the district the appropriation for macadam streets will be raised out of the general fund of $85,000. The total appropriation for the ward will be kept within the stipulated $85,000, however, as originally allocated by the department of public works.

A survey is being prepared by the ward superintendent, Ald. Ross announced yesterday, to determine on which streets the macadam appropriation will be spent. Funds in addition to the original $5,000 were requested because there is a large amount of macadam pavement in an unusable condition.

The Montrose district association recommended repair of all streets between Montrose avenue and Irving Park boulevard and Crawford avenue and the north branch of the river. These streets are paved almost entirely with macadam and $5,000 would be insufficient, Mr. Rooney said.

Warns Against Discrimination.

"These repairs are necessary and urgent," he said. "The people on these blocks are taxpayers and are entitled to relief. They would be the objects of discrimination if their streets were not repaired simply because they happened to be paved with macadam instead of asphalt or concrete."

According to Mr. Rooney, when the city council reconvenes next month his association will seek legislation to prohibit milk trucks from traveling on Montrose avenue and tearing up the pavement. Milk trucks are the cause of the poor condition of the street, he said, and since Montrose avenue is an important east and west artery, a sound pavement should be maintained.

$307,000 PAVING JOBS APPROVED FOR 40TH WARD

Improvement of a system of streets in the 40th ward at a cost of $307,000 was authorized recently by the County court. The board of local improvements is preparing to advertise for bids on the contract, and the work will probably be done next spring.

Property owners will bear the cost by special assessment. The profect was previously approved at a public hearing.

The following streets will be paved with asphalt: Lawndale, Monticello and Central Park avenues between Peterson and Devon avenues; St. Louis avenue between Peterson and Rosemont avenues; Drake, Bernard, Kimball and Christiana avenues between Peterson and Lincoln avenues; Ridgeway avenue between Granville and Devon avenues; Rosemont avenue between Lincoln and Ridgeway avenues; Granville avenue between Kimball and Lawndale avenues; and Glenlake avenue between Jersey avenue and the alley west of Lawndale avenue.

NORTHWEST SIDE GIRL TO WED AT VETS' MEETING

Miss Kittie B. Mulhall, 5342 Lovejoy avenue, will become the bride of Charles V. Nolan of Clifton, Ky., in a ceremony to be held at the thirtieth national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at St. Paul, Minn., Monday, Aug. 26. Chris Paschen, building commissioner of Chicago, will give the bride in marriage.

The event is scheduled for 8:30 a. m. at St. Paul's cathedral. National Guard officers will form a bridge of sabers and the department of Illinois ladies' auxiliary will form a guard of honor.

Capt. Robert B. Handy Jr., will be best man; Mrs. H. M. Clark, matron of honor; Miss Annabelle Sobjeck, maid of honor; Miss May Money, Miss Mildred Butler, Miss Margaret Cline, Miss Mildred Thomas, Miss Theresa Bernstein, Miss Irene Rosen, bridesmaids; Edward J. Mahoney Jr., John Landesco, Walter S. Lobene, James Wade, Hal Carr, and James Mulhall, ushers; Raymond L. Clark Jr., ring bearer, and Bessie Lohens, flower girl.

GARBAGE DUMP IN CLAY PIT BRINGS GROUP PROTEST

Garbage dumping in the pit of the Cary Brick Yard company at Grand and Narragansett avenues was protested by the Mont Clare Business Men's association as "a menace to the welfare of the Mont Clare community in general" at its regular monthly meeting last Wednesday evening at the Mont Clare temple.

The Cary brick yard has been an eyesore for ten years, according to the Mont Clare merchants. The pit is being filled to pave the way for opening Fullerton avenue as a thoroughfare. Refuse, such as ashes, bricks, clay and dirt, is permissible, Arthur N. Haugan, secretary of the organization stated, but garbage is causing obnoxious odors.

Arlington Hts. Board Meets.

A meeting of the village board of Arlington Heights will be held tomorrow evening in the village hall.

COURT CONFIRMS $642,000 PAVING FOR WEST SIDE

Projects Due to Be Completed in Spring.

Street improvements in west side wards costing approximately $642,000 have been confirmed by the County court, attorneys for the board of local improvements announced yesterday. Of this amount, $642,000 will be spent on streets of the northwest side and $18,000 for a 24th ward street.

All of these projects have been previously approved by property owners at public hearings. Cost of the four northwest side and one west side paving job will be borne by special assessments levied on property owners.

Due to Be Ready in Spring.

The board soon will advertise for bids on contracts for the work, and the improvements will probably be completed next spring.

The largest improvement will be made on a system of streets in the 40th ward and will cost approximately $307,000. The following streets will be paved with asphalt: Lawndale, Monticello, and Central Park avenues between Peterson and Devon avenues; St. Louis avenue between Peterson and Rosemont avenues; Drake, Bernard, Kimball, Christiana avenues between Peterson and Lincoln avenues; Ridgeway avenue between Granville and Devon avenues; Rosemont avenue between Lincoln and Ridgeway avenues; Granville avenue between Kimball and Lawndale avenues; and Glenlake avenue between Jersey avenue and the alley west of Lawndale avenue.

Concrete Paving in 41st Ward.

Approximately $217,000 will be spent to pave the following 41st ward streets with concrete: Clarence and Palatine avenues between Harlem and Oriole avenues; Oriole and Olcott avenues between Devon and Myrtle avenues; and Odell avenue between Avondale and Myrtle avenues.

The following system will cost $76,000, according to estimates of engineers for the board: Nashville avenue between North and Bloomingdale avenues; Bloomingdale avenue between Nashville and Natchez avenues; and Wabansia avenue between Nashville and Narraganeett avenues. An asphalt pavement will be laid.

Improvement of Merrimac avenue between Fullerton and Grand avenues with concrete has been estimated to cost $23,500.

Thirteenth street, between Albany and Keeale avenues in the 24th ward will be improved at an approximate cost of $18,000. The street will be paved with concrete.

TOP KICKS AND REAR-RANK PRIVATES CARRY ON IN WORK AND PLAY

Work and play as well as medical treatment play an important part in the fight for health being waged by nearly 1,000 veterans of the world war at Edward Hines Jr. Memorial (Speedway) hospital in Maywood. The picture above at the left is of the dietetics kitchen of the hospital. Left to right: Philip Soleckie, F. Laya, C. W. Littlejohn, G. B. Pegley, C. L. Meek, A. O. Daws, and Miss Blanche Avery, dietitian. At the right, above, is a group whiling away the hours in a card game. Left to right: G. Ohanian, John Bergquist, C. E. Cummings, L. E. Sample, C. W. Perry, William Spence (rear), G. H. Thompson, John Beal, and Heber Taylor. In the center: W. J. Burgess weaving a scarf. The rock garden shown below at the left provides both work and pastime for the veterans who participate in maintaining it. Left to right: Charles E. Drerew, B. W. Corrigan, who is in charge of the garden; Mrs. D. Hartwell, aid; Leo Gray, Frank L. Murlowski, and Mary G. Tully, aid. The library provides both information and recreation. In the picture are O. A. Goodwin (left) and E. J. Trinidad. Veterans who were cabinet-makers before the war, and others who before becoming patients never had known the satisfaction of fitting a smooth joint find fascinating employment in the carpenter shop. Left to right: Fred N. Bayless, George D. Speed, instructor; John Fuchs, Milton Sand, J. A. Dorval, and J. A. Finucane.

Handsome Church Erected With Fund Largely Pennies

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

"The Church That Pennies Built" is the unusual title which has become attached to the Episcopal Church of the Advent, Logan boulevard and North Francisco avenue. And in a real sense pennies were responsible for the new $125,000 limestone edifice in which the parish now worships.

THE REV. GERALD G. MOORE.

Several years ago, while the church of the Advent was holding services in a small frame structure at the rear of the present church site, the rector, the Rev. Gerald Gratten Moore, hit upon the idea of launching a building fund by saving pennies. He broached the question to his congregation, and it immediately met with hearty approval. As a result, the children and grownups of the parish started saving their pennies—some in milk bottles, some in banks, some in paper strips prepared for the purpose, and in a variety of methods.

The building fund grew rapidly, and the new church was started as a result. The cornerstone of the structure was laid on a December Sunday in 1927, Bishop Charles P. Anderson officiating. Dedication of the edifice took place Oct. 16, 1927. It is a Gothic structure of dignified proportions, the interior being entirely of Indiana limestone. The interior furnishings and windows were designed by Elmer C. Johnson, architect, who is also a vestryman of the parish.

Old Church Is Parish House.

The old church has been remodeled and now serves as a parish house, with offices, assembly rooms, kitchen, club rooms, and play quarters. Beneath the new church is a spacious parish hall, in English basement style. Provision has been made for a 102 foot tower on the church proper and for the installation of a carillon.

The Church of the Advent was founded in December, 1901, in what was then a sparsely settled section of Chicago—Logan Square. The first report of the parish shows twenty-one communicants. The Rev. D. D. Donnan of St. John's church, Irving Park, was the first deacon in charge. He was succeeded in 1902 by the Rev. H. C. Stone, who was followed by the Rev. Frederick Luke. Other clergymen to serve the parish were the Rev. Daniel Le Baron Goodwin, 1904-10; the Rev. A. T. Young, 1910-14; and the Rev. W. O. Homer, 1914-16.

When the Rev. Mr. Moore became rector in 1917, the church faced a heavy debt. While advancing financially under his leadership, the church has also gone forward in membership until today it numbers more than 1,200.

A son of the late Canon Moore, organizer of Episcopal churches in Chicago, the Rev. Mr. Moore was ordained as a deacon in 1912 and as a priest in 1913. His first charge was Trinity church, Belvidere, Ill. The Rev. Mr. Moore is a graduate of Shattuck school, Faribault, Minn.; of Northwestern university, and of Western Theological seminary. He is prominent in diocesan activities of his church, having been secretary of the diocese since 1923.

Summer School for All Creeds.

During this summer a vacation school, under the direction of the rector, was undertaken. With Deaconess Deborah Payne, the parish visitor, as superintendent, the school was operated five days a week, and children of all creeds and denominations in the neighborhood were invited to attend. Nearly a hundred children responded and the results, according to the rector, have been striking.

The school has served to keep the children off the streets, and to give them useful instruction in such subjects as basketry, pageantry, and manual training, as well as to furnish

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

ORIN S. SCOTT of Berwyn, who has just returned from a vacation sojourn amidst the scenes of his boyhood in Ohio and West Virginia, did not see a single young woman smoking a cigarette in any of the towns he visited. And yet our citizens continue to rush off to Europe to do their sightseeing.

Grade crossings, narrow highways, traffic congestion and all, there hasn't been an automobile accident in River Forest for more than two weeks, which is good news and better luck.

THE genial Emil Kaiser and his charming helpmeet of the choir of the Grace Evangelical church at Kimball and Wrightwood avenues, have concluded two one-week vacation outings in their auto—one being with relatives at Neenah and Appleton, Wis., and the other at Prairie du Chien, where Alex Trostrud points out, occurred the historic elopement of Jeff Davis and the daughter of Gen. A very fine still and several hundred gallons of potential murders, wife beatings and cirrhosis of the liver were captured two doors west of the Irving Park Y. M. C. IRVING CAMPBELL of Norwood Park, the popular steamfitter, who has brought warmth to the hearts and hearths of many of Chicago's 400, if any, and whose hobby is shipbuilding, has added another model to his fleet of old time sailing vessels and the collection is now bigger and better than ever, if that were possible. Irv has made a deep study of his chosen avocation and has hobnobbed with veteran sea captains and chanteymen to increase his nautical lore. This research, combined with technical knowledge and skilled craftsmanship, has enabled him to produce ships built to scale and authentic to the smallest detail that are a delight to all beholders. Wherefore, in Irv's home at 6030 Oconto avenue one finds about anything from a full rigged craft, nine inches from stem to stern, to models as long as three feet. He can be found almost any evening in his hobby workshop engaged on a new design. Irv is a Mason and a Goodfellow, if not an Odd Fellow, and his hospitality is famous among his friends. And we certainly hope Irv's mother-in-law, Mrs. Nellie E. Cedarburg, sees this, so she will know that everybody appreciates Irv just as much as she does.

Asserts Elevated Highway Means New Birth for W. Side

The elevated highway, which the west park commissioners propose to construct from the western city limits to the Chicago river, will result in a new birth for the west side and will unite the whole of Chicago, because good transportation to every part of the metropolitan district will then become possible.

GEORGE J. DEHN.

This statement was made Thursday in a statement by George J. Dehn, former member of the west park board and civic leader of the west side, to Col. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the west side committee of the Chicago Plan commission.

The commission is studying several proposed routes for the superhighway, and will shortly recommend one as the most suitable.

Expert on Traffic.

Mr. Dehn, as chairman of the park board improvements committee a few years ago, was responsible for the installation of Chicago's first traffic signal light at Ashland and Jackson boulevards, and has kept in close touch with traffic conditions throughout the city since that time. In his statement he signified his desire to help in every way to further what he termed "the greatest forward looking step in the development of not only the west side, but the whole metropolitan area."

"There is some talk among certain west side business men that this highway will serve only suburbanites desiring to enter the loop, and that the taxpayers who pay for it will receive a minor share of the benefits," Mr. Dehn said.

"These arguments to not appeal to me as sound logic, for the reason that a large percentage of the business and professional people of the west side, who pay a large share of the taxes, live in the suburban communities outside the city limits.

Live in Other Places.

"As proof of this," he continued, "my attention has been called to the fact that approximately 500 members of the Midwest Athletic club reside in Oak Park, River Forest, and other suburban towns. Surely these business people have a right to expect good transportation to the places where their business is located.

"Those who are opposed to this improvement have not given due thought to the development which is bound to take place after the construction of the highway.

"It is the history of every community," he pointed out, "that where transportation facilities are improved there follows a revival of building construction, business extension, and a general business boom, worth from five to ten times the amount involved in the cost of the public improvement.

Speed Is Called Necessary.

"Furthermore, in a busy age, such as we now live in, it cannot be argued that congestion, loss of time, and waste make for good business. On the contrary, the thing necessary is good transportation to enable the people to move speedily to a given point, transact their business, and speedily move away.

"In spite of every action taken by the west park commissioners to improve the present surface facilities, the boulevards still remain far from adequate to properly relieve the tremendous congestion existing on the west side with any reasonable degree of safety.

"The element of safety alone justified, in my judgment, the construction of an elevated highway. It will remove hundreds of thousands of automobiles each day from the hazards of cross-town traffic, and, by the same token, will remove those hazards from the pedestrian.

Lights Increase Accidents

"Our whole west side is now cluttered up with stop and go lights; constant demands are being made for more, and in addition to slowing up traffic, strange as it may seem, statistics prove that stop and go lights increase rather than decrease accidents, with resultant human and property damage.

"These are but a few of the reasons that have prompted me to take an unalterable position in behalf of a west side elevated highway."

The committee of Oak Park civic leaders recently appointed to study the highway project by President Charles H. Cryster visited Dr. John Dill Robertson, president of the west park board, Wednesday to formally

FUNERAL RITES CONDUCTED FOR NORA M'NICHOLS

Last rites for Mrs. Nora McNichols, 1717 North Long avenue, were held last Tuesday morning at St. Peter Canisius church, Leclaire and North avenues, with interment in Mount Carmel cemetery. The Rev. James Cunningham, pastor of the church, conducted the service. Mrs. McNichols was a pioneer of the west side, having resided there for 40 years. The family has made its home at the present address for only about four years, but resided at the old home, 4718 West Erie street, for more than 35 years. When the McNichols family located there years ago the locality now known as North Austin was called Moreland.

TRINITY HIGH REGISTRATION OPENS SEPT. 5

Enrollment of 400 Is Expected This Fall.

Preparations are being made for the beginning of the fall term at Trinity High school, Lathrop avenue and Division street, River Forest. Registration for freshmen will take place on Sept. 5, and for the three other classes on the following day, with the start of regular school work scheduled for Sept. 9. Authorities of the school estimate the enrollment for this year above the 400 mark, last year's registration coming to approximately 375.

Many Suburbs Represented.

In conjunction with the announcement that the classes would begin on Sept. 9, officials of the school called attention last week to the large number of suburbs from which students come. Last year the following were represented: Oak Park, Riverside, Forest Park, Maywood, Elmhurst, Wheaton, Berwyn, and River Forest. A large number of girls living in Chicago also attend.

An active alumnae association functions for the school, the membership totaling 500. Formal meetings and social benefits are held four times a year.

Alumnae Plan Parties.

Two parties have been announced for the near future, one on the last Saturday of September, and the other some time in October. The place for the first affair has not yet been announced. The second party will be held at the home of Mrs. Matthew J. Kiley, 3340 Washington boulevard, president of the association.

Most of the girls who attend Trinity continue their training after they are graduated. Many go on to Rosary college, which is adjacent to the high school and conducted by the same community of Catholic sisters.

K. OF C. PLANNING BIG PAGEANT FOR COLUMBUS DAY

West Side Leaders Active in Preparations.

BY THOMAS WREN.

To commemorate the 437th anniversary of the discovery of America an elaborate celebration will be staged by the Chicago Knights of Columbus on Columbus day, Oct. 12, at the Chicago Stadium.

FRANK J. ENRIGHT.

Arrangements for the demonstration are being supervised by Frank J. Enright, president of the Chicago chapter of the Knights of Columbus. North side K. of C. councils and their grand knights have been assigned an important part in the staging of the Columbus day celebration.

Members of the following west side councils will be included in the cast of the spectacle: Americus, Bishop Kettler, Cardinal, Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Commodore Barry, Damen, Father Setters, Feehan, Franklin Park, General Sherman, Hennepin-Shields, Hildebrand, Hughes, Lafayette, Nazareth, Oak Park, Phil Sheridan, St. Francis Xavier, St. Patrick's and Washington.

West Side Grand Knights Active.

Michael J. Howlett, past grand knight of Americus council, has been appointed general chairman. Assisting him are the following grand knights of councils on the west side:

Thomas M. Kennedy	Edward T. Hartnett
F. J. Kane	Joseph A. Fogarty
Louis A. Roberg	Charles L. Chambers
John J. Lee	A. L. Fik
Thomas F. Collins	H. R. McEvoy
W. J. Connell Jr.	Peter J. Murphy
Francis Murphy	William J. McCarthy
Jacob A. Mueller	Robert J. Bayer
Francis V. Viola	W. P. McElligot
Anthony Tortoriello	Francis P. Kevil
J. F. Delaney

The celebration will consist of a massive pageant depicting the landing of Columbus and a speaker of national prominence will deliver the principal address. It is expected that approximately 25,000 Chicago knights and their friends will attend the stadium celebration.

Martin H. Carmody, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, will deliver an address on Columbus. Many other novel and entertaining attractions will complete the program.

Stresses Significance of Day.

Several meetings have already been held by the grand knights and district deputies of the Knights of Columbus in Cook county and at one of these meetings State Deputy Edward Houlihan said in discussing Columbus day plans:

"The 12th of October is our day and we should celebrate it in a real Knights of Columbus way.

"Discovery day sums up and holds in mind the most tremendous story of human accomplishment. Other things that men have done for mankind are puny compared with the gift to civilization of half of the earth's surface. Measured by its contribution to the opportunities of the human race, it is universal, and while we simply accept it as we do the beneficences of Providence, let it not be said in derogation of our gratitude that in the enjoyment of this gift we have forgotten the giver. It is only befitting that this year the greatest tribute should be paid to our noble discoverer."

NEW EDISON PARK CHURCH BUILDING NEARLY FINISHED

The new Edison Park Lutheran church building is expected to be completed soon, according to O. E. Hustad, chairman of the building committee. The corner stone was laid last Sunday afternoon by the Rev. Roy A. Harrisville, pastor of the congregation.

Funds have been raised under the direction of the building committee headed by Mr. Hustad. Other members of the committee are Ernst Anderson, A. B. Olson, Mrs. A. B. Olson and A. Dahlin. Mr. Harrisville, who organized the congregation in February, 1927, has taken an active part in the erection of the new church.

Deacons of the church are Ernst Anderson, O. E. Hustad, B. J. Gilbess, A. B. Olson, Russell Frye, Howard M. Harrisville and Harold Oyen. Other officials of the congregation are E. W. Stake, secretary; L. A. Wagstad, financial secretary; A. B. Olson, treasurer; Helma Leesch, organist, and Mrs. E. A. Harrisville, choir director.

River Grove Group Picnics.

Residents of River Grove were the guests of the River Grove Business Men's association at a picnic held at Gage's lake last Thursday. This was the third annual affair of the kind held by the association.

IN NEW POST

MRS. J. C. KNAPP.

A new office has been established in the political life of Glen Ellyn with the recent appointment of Mrs. J. C. Knapp as police matron of the village. For many years Mrs. Knapp has figured prominently in civic philanthropies and patriotic movements of Glen Ellyn. She is chairman of the Glen Ellyn auxiliary of Elmhurst hospital and also holds that position on the friendly coöperation committee of the Woman's club. The latter committee was established for the purpose of contacting the ex-service man. Mrs. Knapp is the widow of J. C. Knapp who served for eight years as trustee and for two years as village secretary and collector prior to his death in 1925. Mrs. Knapp has already assumed the duties of her new office.

RUSTIC GARDEN GROWS NEAR DIN OF BIG BUSINESS

Women Tend Flowers on West Side.

Just a step from the bustling business section around Madison street and Crawford avenue, handicapped by the smoke of the city and the shade of the buildings that hem it in, yet flourishing under the careful nurture of its tenders, is a tiny rustic garden.

Miss Nellie McGonagle, 4249 West Monroe street, started the garden years ago in the backyard of the two story apartment building where she makes her home. She and her two sisters, Miss Alice and Miss Ida McGonagle, watch over it.

Not a Large Place.

In size it cannot compare with the show places of the suburbs, but its flowers bloom just as gaily and it has its own rare plants and bushes, not arranged in formal rows, but growing here and there in semblance of a wild garden. Every day one of the three sisters may be seen working in it, weeding out foreign growth, planting new seeds or cutting the flowers.

Outstanding among the many varieties found in the little garden is a large Rose of Sharon bush in bloom now, which was developed from a small branch.

Some of the other flowers that have found their way into the plot are ambrosia, blackeyed Susan, perilla, sweet Basil, hibiscus, carnation, rose, sunflower, white veronica, chrysanthemum, milfoil, chilia, iris and mint.

Sends Seeds to Others.

Several months ago Miss Ida McGonagle sent some coreopsis seeds to the Sunshine society in New York, of which she is a member. Officials of the society in turn mailed them to various other members, and subsequently Miss McGonagle received letters from as far off as England and Cuba, expressing the happiness of the recipients who had planted the seeds in their own gardens.

The entire lot on which the building and garden stand is only 25 by 121 feet, precluding any possibility of a very extensive plot. And the little garden is enclosed on all sides by buildings, fences and an alley. But every year the flowers bloom, some of them new ones making their initial appearance, others making their customary summer bow.

MAXWELL STREET IS MEMORIAL TO PHYSICIAN OF '32

Stirred Mirth, Admiration at Fort Dearborn.

This is the tenth of a series of articles on the naming of streets and suburbs of the west side.

Maxwell street, famed for its outdoor market that resembles a medieval fair with its sights and sounds and smells; where everything is sold and where every one who pushes his way through the crowd is sought as a customer, was named after an early Chicago citizen who seems to have enjoyed life thoroughly and to have made existence merry for those about him.

Dr. Philip Maxwell was one of a handful of persons who made the village of Chicago their permanent residence in 1832. It is recorded that a score of newcomers increased the population in the fall of that year and that a dozen new buildings, mostly of a primitive sort, were erected during the summer.

Quit Army to Stay in Chicago.

Dr. Maxwell, born in Vermont in 1799, had practiced medicine at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., following his graduation. Appointed an assistant surgeon in the army, he came to Chicago and retained his position until Fort Dearborn was abandoned in 1836. Resigning from the army, he commenced the practice of medicine as a partner of Dr. Brock McVickar, their office being at Lake and Clark streets.

Dr. Maxwell is described as having been Falstaffian in his abdominal rotundity. He weighed some 280 pounds, but, say historians, he dashed through the streets on his favorite gray horse "with all the chic and erectness of a soldier and with the abandon of an Indian."

The grace with which he mounted and dismounted the steed was the subject of comment among bystanders, and his poise also made him popular on the dance floor. His broad and massive face was usually beaming with mirth, but he could be testy at times. He had a bluff and hearty fashion of greeting his fellows and was never without a quip on his tongue.

"Made for Pioneer Period."

"He was," said the Chicago Republican in 1865, "one of nature's noblemen. He was of that choice material which God makes to follow the first rough work of the pioneers in laying the foundation of a new society. A leading spirit in the old garrison times, he mingled largely and controllingly in the growing social element."

Following his career as a soldier and physician, Dr. Maxwell removed to a country place at Lake Geneva, where he died, at the age of 60, in 1859.

Chris Paschen, building commissioner of Chicago, will give the bride in marriage.

Clark, matron of honor; Miss Annabelle Sobjeck, maid of honor; Miss May Money, Miss Mildred Butler, Miss Margaret Cline, Miss Mildred Thomas, Miss Theresa Bernstein, Miss Irene Rosen, bridesmaids; Edward J. Smith will be graduated at the conclusion of the summer term on Aug. 23. GARBAGE DUMP IN CLAY PIT BRINGS GROUP PROTEST

Garbage dumping in the pit of the Cary Brick Yard company at Grand and Narragansett avenues was protested by the Mont Clare Business Men's association as "a menace to the welfare of the Mont Clare community in general" at its regular monthly meeting last Wednesday evening at the Mont Clare temple.

The Cary brick yard has been an eyesore for ten years, according to the Mont Clare merchants. The pit is being filled to pave the way for opening Fullerton avenue as a thoroughfare. Refuse, such as ashes, bricks, clay and dirt, is permissible, Arthur N. Haugan, secretary of the organization stated, but garbage is causing obnoxious odors.

The association, of which Charles Reuss, former ward committeeman, is head, has asked all the local clubs and other organizations in the vicinity to write to Ald. Frank R. Ringa asking him to have the garbage nuisance stopped.

Second of Irving Park Band Concerts Presented

The second of a series of band concerts being sponsored by the Irving Park district was presented at Mayfair park, 4550 Sunnyside avenue, last Wednesday evening. The Irving Park band, under the direction of Ettore Gualano, presented the program which included marches, classical and jazz selections. Sam Rothman sang. On Sept. 4 the band will play at Independence park, and on Sept. 18 the final concert will be presented at the Addison street athletic field.

Mrs. Mary A. Lee, Oldtimer on Goose Island, Is Dead

Last rites for Mrs. Mary A. Lee, 1145 North Branch street, were held at Immaculate Conception church Wednesday morning, where a solemn high mass was sung. Mrs. Lee, who was 62 years old at the time of her death last Sunday, was raised on Goose island. She is survived by her children, John J., James J., and William A. Lee. Mrs. Lee was a member of the Ashland council, No. 1323, of the S. B. A.

WEST SIDE OFFICE OF TRIBUNE GIVES ACME IN SERVICE

Helps Public in Anything It Wants to Know.

Service ranging from aid in selling an automobile through THE TRIBUNE want ads to providing information on how to beautify your back yard may be had at the west side office of THE TRIBUNE, 4152 West Madison street.

Within an hour yesterday the clerks had given a drink of water to a thirsty housewife who saw the sign, "Public Service," on the windows, provided a youthful baseball fan with the latest sports almanac, planned a want ad for a woman desiring a maid, thereby saving her the inconvenience of a trip downtown, answered numerous telephone inquiries, received ads over the phone, and give a score of west side residents information they desired.

Help Arrange Tours.

At present the clerks are kept busy throughout the day and evening helping prospective tourists plan their trips. They have on hand maps and data for every kind of a trip, ranging from a 20 mile jog to a tour around the world.

At one time yesterday afternoon one clerk was helping an inquirer decide on the best motor route to Los Angeles and another was explaining to a woman motorist how to get to Woodstock, Ill. Complete information on the condition of roads, the location of detours, and hotels en route is given. Road maps are sold at a nominal cost; there are railroad and steamship time tables from all parts of the world. State maps, national atlases, and THE TRIBUNE Chicagoland booklet are in great demand by west siders.

Many Booklets Popular.

A score of TRIBUNE booklets on various subjects are for sale. Among the most popular ones are: Flower Gardening and Suburban Gardening, by Frank Ridgeway; Building the Baby, by Dr. W. A. Evans; booklets on sports by Walter Eckersall; THE TRIBUNE cook book; THE TRIBUNE Book of Homes, W-G-N Radio Log, scrap books, and articles on foreign countries by members of THE TRIBUNE foreign staff.

Pamphlets containing beauty hints have lately gained a high place in the sales among west side women, and youngsters are constantly visiting the office in quest of bound volumes of TRIBUNE comic strips.

Convenient for Ad Patrons.

Want ad patrons are finding the west side office very convenient in placing their ads, as well as in obtaining answers. Any patron may, for the asking, have answers to his ad sent to the west side office, instead of the downtown office. He can avail himself of the expert ad writing of the clerks within a few blocks of his place of business or his home.

A want ad telephone service is also provided. Advertisers may call Van Buren 4177 or 4178 for this service.

The advertising staff of the west side Metropolitan section has established headquarters at the west side office for the convenience of local merchants. Instead of having to call the downtown office for a salesman a merchant may call the west side branch and bring the salesman to his place of business within a few minutes.

ROOSEVELT ROAD ASSOCIATION HOLDS MAMMOTH PICNIC

Hundreds of relatives and friends of members of the Roosevelt Road Business Men's association attended the organization's picnic Wednesday at Camp Dells, 33rd street and Wolf road. The upper left picture shows A. B. Trikryl, president of the association (at left facing crowd), the Ray Lass, chairman of the picnic committee (at the right on platform), welcoming the throng. At the right above is shown the women's balloon blowing contest. Girls, 11 and 12 years old, are engaged in a backward race in the lower left picture. The other picture includes the five high contestants in the women's nail driving competition. COURT CONFIRMS $642,000 PAVING FOR WEST SIDE

Projects Expected to Be Completed in Spring.

Street improvements in west side wards costing approximately $642,000 have been confirmed by the County court, attorneys for the board of local improvements announced yesterday. Of this amount, $642,000 will be spent on streets of the northwest side and $18,000 for a 24th ward street.

All of these projects have been previously approved by property owners at public hearings. Cost of the four northwest side and one west side paving job will be borne by special assessments levied on property owners.

Due to Be Ready in Spring.

The board soon will advertise for bids on contracts for the work, and the improvements will probably be completed next spring.

The largest improvement will be made on a system of streets in the 40th ward and will cost approximately $307,000. The following streets will be paved with asphalt: Lawndale, Monticello, and Central Park avenues between Peterson and Devon avenues; St. Louis avenue between Peterson and Rosemont avenues; Drake, Bernard, Kimball, Christiana avenues between Peterson and Lincoln avenues; Ridgeway avenue between Granville and Devon avenues; Rosemont avenue between Lincoln and Ridgeway avenues; Granville avenue between Kimball and Lawndale avenues; and Glenlake avenue between Jersey avenue and the alley west of Lawndale avenue.

Concrete Paving in 41st Ward.

Approximately $217,000 will be spent to pave the following 41st ward streets with concrete: Clarence and Palatine avenues between Harlem and Oriole avenues; Oriole and Olcott avenues between Devon and Myrtle avenues; and Odell avenue between Avondale and Myrtle avenues.

The following system will cost $76,000, according to estimates of engineers for the board: Nashville avenue between North and Bloomingdale avenues; Bloomingdale avenue between Nashville and Natchez avenues; and Wabansia avenue between Nashville and Narraganesett avenues. An asphalt pavement will be laid.

Improvement of Merrimac avenue between Fullerton and Grand avenues with concrete has been estimated to cost $23,500.

Thirteenth street between Albany and Kedzie avenues in the 24th ward will be improved at an approximate cost of $18,000. The street will be paved with concrete.

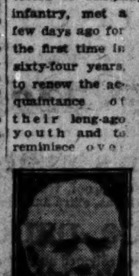
Award Contract for Repair of Aurora City Hall

The city council of Aurora awarded a contract last Monday to B. R. Westphall of Aurora for repair work on the outside of the city hall. Owing to the fact that fragments of rock have been dropping from the upper portion of the structure, endangering passersby, the repair work was decided upon. More than twenty years have passed since the last repair work was done on the building. The old landmark was constructed shortly after the civil war.

BUDDIES OF '65, LAST IN OUTFIT, HOLD REUNION

Two Comrades Discuss Period Since 1861.

Two civil war veterans, last survivors of Company K, Fourth Iowa infantry, met a few days ago for the first time in sixty-four years, to renew the acquaintance of their long-ago youth and to reminisce over the days of the early '60s.



W. W. KEMPTON.

PETER C. KING.

They are Peter C. King, 84 years old, of 5126 Fulton street, and W. W. Kempton, 87, of Concordia, Kas. During more than half a century, ever since their company was disbanded at Davenport, Ia., at the end of the civil war, they had kept up an occasional correspondence, and several days ago Mr. Kempton decided to come to Chicago, to visit his friend.

Enlisted When Only 16.

Three counties in Iowa were required to fill one company in the war, according to Mr. King. His outfit was made up of boys from Taylor, Page and Montgomery counties. When he enlisted, he was only 16 years old, and at the conclusion of the conflict, when he was 20 years old, had taken part in battles east and west and had won a second lieutenancy.

The two friends served first in the army of the southwest under Gen. John C. Fremont, who was later replaced by Gen. Samuel R. Curtis, and their first great battle was at Pea Ridge, Ark. They also served under two of the civil war's best known commanders, Gen. W. T. Sherman and Gen. John A. Logan, and took part in the former's famous march to the sea. In the first attack on Vicksburg they took part and again at Chattanooga. At the close of the war they marched in the grand review in Washington.

Resigned from West Point.

Following the termination of the war Mr. King entered West Point. But an army career did not appeal to him, and after about six months he left.

Mr. Kempton's recent visit was his first in the city since the days of the civil war.

BIG BROTHERS' GROUP TO HOLD BENEFIT DANCE

A dance on the roof garden of the Jewish People's institute, 3500 Douglas boulevard, will be given Wednesday night by the Jewish Big Brothers. Funds derived from the affair will be used to carry on the work of the group, providing scholarships in gymnasium work to Jewish boys. More than 200 couples are expected to attend.

The association, which has its headquarters in the institute, as part of its work, "adopts" a group of younger boys, and helps them in athletic activity, education, and social activity.

The committee in charge of the dance includes I. Maxwell Hirsch, Albert Abramson, and Jacob Nathan.

Berwyn, Aug. 5.—More than five years ago I purchased an all wool sweater at a clearnce sale in a neighborhood department store. It had been reduced in price from $10 to $1.98. I have worn this sweater continually and when I reknit the cuffs recently it again looked like new. Washing and wearing do not seem to have any effect on either the quality or its appearance. In all probability it will wear well for many more years.

BARGAIN AT FIRE SALE.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—My best neighborhood bargain was an ice box. A hardware store in this locality held a fire sale three years ago at which I purchased a standard $25 refrigerator for $4. It had been scorched only slightly on the top and a little sandpapering and varnish made it like new. It has given excellent service and no doubt will continue doing duty indefinitely.

STUDIES EFFECT OF HOUSING ON W. SIDE BABIES

Birth Rate High in 39th Ward; Few Die in 24th.

Newborn west side residents who are greeted on their arrival with plenty of fresh air, who take up residence in a district where the population is not dense, and who choose parents of adequate income have a better chance of living to enter kindergarten than youngsters without these advantages.

These facts were revealed in a recent report of the department of health compiled under the direction of Commissioner Arnold H. Kegel. The statistics proving these conclusions are those of 1928 and are the first prepared by any large city showing the relation of infant birth and death rates to housing conditions, density of population, and racial characteristics, according to Dr. Kegel.

Department officials have observed that the largest birth rates are reported among Jews, Germans, and Scandinavians, and the largest infant death rates among Poles and negroes. The lowest birth rates occur in American and negro families, according to Dr. Kegel, and the lowest death rates among the Americans and foreign residents of larger income.

39th Ward Births Numerous.

The 39th ward has the largest birth rate of the west side, according to the health department report, and there are only 10,000 residents per square mile in the ward. Last year 33.3 babies per 1,000 were born there, and 47.30 per 1,000 births died in infancy. In this ward, which with the 41st ward composes the great expanse of northwest side one-family homes, the predominating population is Polish. While Polish babies in other parts of the west side have a large mortality, youngsters born in the healthful atmosphere of these wards stand a good chance of growing up.

In the 41st ward where the birth rate is also high there are only 5,000 residents per square mile. Last year 32.9 babies per 1,000 were born, and of these 44.36 per 1,000 births died in infancy.

Births also are numerous among the Jewish and German residents of Albany park. In the 40th ward there are 15,000 residents per square mile, 31.5 births per 1,000 population, and only 40.31 deaths per 1,000 births.

Figures from 37th Ward.

In the 37th ward, although there are only 14,000 residents per square mile, the birth rate is low and the death rate is high. The low birth rate is explained by the department by the fact that there is a large native American population in the ward, while the presence of less educated classes of both Americans and Scandinavians is held responsible for a death rate somewhat higher than in other sections of the west side. The birth rate is only 14.8, and the death rate is 62.9%.

The 30th ward, in south Austin, presents somewhat the same condition. A predominating American population lives approximately 17,000 to the square mile. This district has a birth rate of 17.6, and a low infant death rate of 44.29 per 1,000 births. Dr. Kegel explains that the latter fact is due to the presence of Columbus park in the district, giving babies fresh air, although they live close together.

The Polish and Bohemian residents of the Lawndale district are also favored with the presence of a large park, Douglas, and likewise have a low death rate. In that ward, approximately 16 births per 1,000 population occurred last year, and only 44.06 youngsters per 1,000 born failed to survive.

Deaths High in Industrial Area.

The wards on the near west side which have been invaded by industry have large death rates and birth rates below average.

These wards are populated with poorer classes of Negroes, Italians, Greeks, and Jews. Consequently the death rates are high. In the 21st ward the birth rate is 16.1 per 1,000 persons and the death rate 93.72 per 1,000 births; in the 28th ward, 19.6 births and 72.28 deaths; in the 27th ward 14.3 births and 111.49 deaths. All of these wards have 25,000 residents per square mile, only an average metropolitan density.

In the 22d, 29th, and 38th wards, where 25,000 residents live in each square mile, the death rate is average as well as the birth rate. Bohemians, Jews, and American born live in these wards, which present average housing conditions.

One of the lowest death rates in the city is in the 35th ward, where a population of Jews and Scandinavians literally raise their children in Humboldt park. There the birth rate is 17.4 per 1,000, and the death rate is only 30.86 per 1,000 births. Twenty-six thousand residents live in each square mile of territory.

Average Rates in Four Wards.

The statistics show that average birth and death rates occur among residents of the 25th, 26th 34th and 36th wards.

The 24th ward, according to Dr. Kegel, is an exception to almost all the rules that govern birth and infant death rates.

In this ward is found the densest population in the entire city, one of the lowest birth rates, and the lowest infant death rate. Sixty-two thousand residents occupy one square mile in the 24th ward, there are 12.3 births per 1,000, and only 29.85 deaths per thousand births. The population is solidly Jewish.

Dr. Kegel explains that the low death rate is due to the fact that Douglas park presents an ideal promenade for baby carriages and that young mothers of the district are quick to make use of the hospital and dispensary facilities available near at hand. No explanation of the low birth rate has been found.

In the 33d ward, one of the river wards invaded by industry, a high death rate is found among new born Polish children. The same is true of the 31st ward, because of the density of population and the lack of favorable surroundings. The Italian district of the 33d ward, also a section of poor housing, has a high infant mortality.

GEORGE GORDON, BUILDER FOR 50 YEARS, IS DEAD

Knew 47th-Cottage Grove as Suburban Area.

George O. Gordon, 139 North Menard avenue, pioneer Chicago builder and resident of the west and south sides for a half century, was buried at Oak Ridge abbey Monday.

Mr. Gordon, who was 69 years old, came to Chicago more than 50 years ago from Prince Edward Island, and a short time after began a long career in the building business.

He began his building activity in the neighborhood of Cottage Grove avenue and 47th street, at that time a desirable suburban district and a rising home center. Mrs. Gordon recalls that the first houses constructed by Mr. Gordon had as a selling point the fact that they were located close to the steam railroad which ran into the suburbs south of 39th street at that time.

Mr. Gordon was an active member of the Austin Presbyterian church. He is survived by his widow and a daughter, Mrs. Henry Marsh, 3270 Sheridan road.

CHARLES PLANTZ DEAD; KNOWN TO WEST SUBURBS

The story of a boy who came to Chicago alone from Germany when 15 years old, worked as a grocery clerk on the near north side, finally took over the business, and later worked seventeen years as a representative of Washburn Crosby company, traveling through the western suburbs, came to an end last Sunday with the death of Charles Plantz, 516 South Beloit avenue, Forest Park.

For the last eleven years Mr. Plantz had been a resident of Forest Park. He was 61 years old. Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Barbara Plantz, his children, Charles F. Plants and Mrs. Irene Tryner; his sister, Miss Susan Plants, and his grandchildren, Frank A. Tryner Jr., James Tryner, and Regina Plantz.

Mr. Plantz was a member of St. Vincent's court, No. 87, Catholic Order of Foresters.

The funeral was held Wednesday from the residence in Forest Park to St. Bernadine's church, and thence to St. Joseph's cemetery, River Grove.

RAYMOND G. ICELY FUNERAL SERVICE HELD WEDNESDAY

Funeral services for Raymond G. Icely, west side business man for the last thirty years, were held at his residence, 641 North Harvey avenue, Oak Park, Wednesday.

Mr. Icely was one of the chief executives of the Wilson Western Sporting Goods company, 2037 Powell avenue, for the last seven years. Prior to this he was a department manager at Sears, Roebuck & Co., where he was employed for twenty years. He was 49 years old.

His funeral was attended by his widow, two children, Arline and Raymond Lawrence; his brother and business associate, Lawrence B. Icely, and three sisters, Mrs. M. Martin and Mrs. Edward Burmeister of Chicago and Mrs. I. A. Motter of Leaf River, Ill.

BIG BROTHERS' GROUP TO HOLD BENEFIT DANCE

The association, which has its headquarters in the institute, as part of its work, "adopts" a group of younger boys, and helps them in athletic activity, education, and social activity.

The committee in charge of the dance includes I. Maxwell Hirsch, Albert Abramson, and Jacob Nathan.

Award Contract for Repair of Aurora City Hall

The city council of Aurora awarded a contract last Monday to B. R. Westphall of Aurora for repair work on the outside of the city hall. Owing to the fact that fragments of rock have been dropping from the upper portion of the structure, endangering passersby, the repair work was decided upon. More than twenty years have passed since the last repair work was done on the building. The old landmark was constructed shortly after the civil war.

G. O. P. PICNICKERS TODAY PAY HONOR TO JAMES J. CULLEN

JAMES J. CULLEN.

The fourth annual James J. Cullen day will be celebrated today in the National Grove Forest Preserve, 36th street and Des Plains avenue, Riverside. Sponsoring the affair are the 30th ward National Republican club and the National Republican organization of Berwyn. Mr. Cullen is ward committeeman of the 30th ward.

The afternoon program will be featured by a ball game between James J. Cullen's Boosters and the Berwyn Nationals. Races, games and novelty contests are also scheduled, with 200 prizes to be awarded the winners.

Taking part in the preparations are the following: Beryl Collins, Edward H. Luebeck, William Buckley, William Janota, George Hers, John Oros, Charles Todd, Edward Boisvy, John Rauch, E. G. Wheelhouse, Ray Bruce, Mrs. Frieda Koch, Miss Agnes Luebeck, Mrs. James J. Cullen, James Saul, Ed Lambke, B. Anderson and W. Johnson.

Last year's gathering attracted more than 18,000 people. Richard Frederick, one of the leaders on the committee on arrangements, stated last week that this number is expected to be exceeded today.

Buses will leave the 30th ward National Republican headquarters, 166 North Cicero avenue, at frequent intervals to transport the picnickers to the forest preserve.

PARK VIEW OPENS CAMPAIGN TO GET SWIMMING POOL

Civic Groups Appeal to Commissioners.

A campaign to obtain a big outdoor swimming pool for the children of the Park View district will be launched by civic organizations of the neighborhood this week. This announcement was made yesterday by Edward Novak, president of the Park View association.

The East Park View Improvement association is joining with the former group in sponsoring the campaign, according to Mr. Novak, and the cooperation of other associations will be sought subsequently.

A petition will be circulated among residents of the community in behalf of the proposition, and when sufficient signatures are obtained the petition will be presented to the Irving Park district, which would construct the pool.

No Objectors to Plan.

No opposition has as yet been encountered in forming preliminary plans, Mr. Novak said, and there will be no objectors to the project. Residents of the district will most likely be unanimously in favor of it because there are no facilities for swimming in the entire neighborhood, he added.

According to John Kiler, secretary of the Park View group, commissioners of the Irving Park district have indicated they will construct the swimming pool if a sufficient number of residents request it.

The logical spot for the swimming pool is at the Irving Park athletic field, officers of the civic groups believe. The field is located in the center of the district, at Central Park avenue and Addison street, and there is enough ground available.

Children Must Travel to Lake.

They point out that at present youngsters who want to swim must either travel a few miles east to the lake or use the pools provided in the neighboring Portage and River Park districts. Since the later are usually occupied by youngsters in the immediate districts, Park View children are often crowded out.

Leaders in the civic groups sponsoring the project are East Park View, M. J. Lakofka, president, and E. H. Selling, A. V. Martl, E. A. Bartch, W. G. Dode, and Anton Peter; Park View, Mr. Novak, Henry Fehlhager, Theodore Jacobsen, Mr. Klier, and Harry Tobey.

RADIO AMATEURS TURNING MORE TO TELEVISION

'Ham' Operators Abreast of All Progress.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Amateurs in the field of radio are keeping abreast of all the developments in the technique of broadcasting and receiving and are turning more and more to television, according to W. E. Downey, assistant chief of the radio division of the department of commerce, who is perhaps the best informed man in this country on the work of the "ham" operators.

Many of them are keeping in constant touch with the Byrd expedition in the Antarctic, according to Downey, and scores of them are receiving messages from the Graf Zeppelin on its around the world flight.

So important has the work of these experimenters become, Downey pointed out, that it will be one of the topics to be discussed at the international radio conference at The Hague on Sept. 18. They may even have representation at the parley.

Reviews History of Amateurs.

The history of radio amateur activity is reviewed by Mr. Downey in an especially prepared resumé, as follows:

"Amateur activity in radio can be said to have begun with the start of the radio art itself. There was, however, little noticeable activity in the United States until after 1900, and more particularly in 1909, when the S.S. Republic succeeded in obtaining, by the use of her wireless, assistance to save all of her passengers and crew after colliding with the S.S. Florida.

"In 1910 an act was passed by the United States government requiring certain steamers to be equipped with radio.

"On July 5, 1912, the International Radio Telegraph convention was signed at London which designated certain bands of wave lengths for various services and on Aug. 13 of the same year the act to regulate radio communication was passed by congress. This act was the first authority for control over amateur and point to point communication. Regulation 15 under section 4 of this act applies specifically to amateurs and provided that no private station not handling bona fide commercial traffic could operate on a wave length exceeding 200 meters, except by special permission of the secretary of commerce.

Hoover Backs Amateurs.

"The American Radio Relay league was organized in 1914 by a small enthusiastic group of amateurs. Its purpose was to band all amateurs together so that each amateur could talk to and know all about the other.

"President Hoover, shortly after he was appointed secretary of commerce, evidenced his interest in the amateur by requesting that the department be advised as to how it could be of best service to them and to further show his interest, he stated that the department would award a cup annually during that administration for the best radio equipment in a major degree manufactured by the amateur, under such conditions as their directors might lay down.

"The entrance of the United States into the world war made necessary the suspension of all amateur communication, but the army and navy, recognizing that the amateurs were well trained by their experience, enlisted 3,000 to 4,000 of them, and it has been said that they were among the most efficient operators in active service.

Kept Contact with McMillan.

"It will be recalled that communication with the McMillan expeditions was carried on by amateur stations. This would not have been possible otherwise.

"During the years that have gone by the amateur has embraced every opportunity to be of service. This is brought forcefully to mind in the international radio convention of 1927 wherein he is definitely mentioned for the first time in such a document and given an international place in the wave length spectrum.

"The growth of the amateur in numbers from the records of the radio division of the department of commerce indicates that at the end of the fiscal year 1913 there were 1,224 licensed amateurs and in 1928 there were 16,928."

Short Wave Auto Sets Banned by Michigan

DETROIT.—A new law in Michigan provides a fine of $1,000, imprisonment for six months, or both, for equipping or using an automobile with a short wave receiver unless the car is used and owned by a police officer or a police permit has been granted.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

Today we are broadcasting over again the famous prize fight between Pancho Villa, the tiny Filipino, and Jimmy Wilde, the pride of Wales and England, the idol of London's National sporting club—for the flyweight championship of the world. It is the 15th of June, in 1923, at the Polo grounds, in New York City.

[Gong!]

There's the gong! Round one!

Both men are on their toes and out of their corners in a flash. They begin mixing it in the center of the ring. Good defense on both sides and lots of snappy and brilliant footwork. The brown boy lands a left to Wilde's head but it's a light blow. They're exchanging left hand punches. They don't mean much; each boy will depend on his right for the real punches. They've gone into a clinch. They're hammering each other about the body—Hey! Villa is tearing in—he lands a pair of hard left and rights to the head—now a right cross to the head. Wilde keeps in there with him—he doesn't seem to mind the punches—they've clinched again—now Referee Patsey Haley is breaking them apart—they're almost lightning fast, ladies and gentlemen, it's hard to keep track of the punches.

[Gong!]

That's all of round one. It was an even round, that first one, with neither boy having any particular advantage in there.

[Gong!]

There's the bell! Round two! Speedy getaway from the corners again and they're in the center of the ring, ready to battle. Owowowowow! Villa pastes a hard righthander to Jimmy's jaw, and he's got 'im dizzy! Jimmy's gone into a clinch and he's holding on, while the little Filipino is savagely attacking his body. Rights and lefts, quicker than we can tell you about them, to that slim white body! He's GOT WILDE GROGGY! THE CHAMPION IS STAGGERING AROUND THE RING! VILLA IS PASTING HIM WITH EVERYTHING BUT HOME PLATE! HE'S WALLOPING HIM ALL AROUND THE RING! Wilde comes into a clinch again! Now Patsey Haley breaks them apart, and Villa is after the champ again with those pokes to the head. THIS MAY BE THE FINISH! Wilde is trying hard! He's trying to come back and stave off the finish until the end of the round! He needs the smelling salts right now! Ohhh!

(Gong!)

And that's all of round two, ladies and gentlemen, but that last swing by Pancho put Jimmy Wilde on the mat, and his seconds came out and carried him back to his corner. His seconds are working over him in his corner, and he'll probably be able to stagger out for the third, but the finish is getting pretty close.

[Gong!]

Round three! Yep, Jimmy's getting up! He's coming out of his corner unsteadily, and Pancho goes three-quarters of the way across the ring to meet him! Jimmy's ready for fight! And he's trading punches with Pancho over there near his own corner. Ah! the steam's gone out of Jimmy's pokes, I guess. The brown boy is taking everything without a whimper—he's pushing right in—waiting for a chance to sneak that right hand over against the jaw again! They're just sparring and waiting, Villa is not putting up any attack this time. He's on the defensive—he wants to tire out Jimmy before he puts over the little giant killer! Socko and socko!

[Gong!]

That's all of round three, ladies and gentlemen. Jimmy hasn't gone down yet, but he's tiring quickly, and it still remains only a question of time. Instead of tearing in and carrying the fight to the Welshman, Pancho Villa elected in that last session, to stay back and wait for the Welshman to tire himself out with punches that the brown boy easily stayed away from.

[Gong!]

Round four! Out they come for the fourth round, and they're slugging! Just standing up there in the center of the ring and trading punches to the body and the head. The brown boy is backing up. They've gone into a clinch! Haley pats them on the shoulder and they break away—now they're sparring—Wilde is coming in—Pancho is backing up! Jimmy's on the offensive.

[Gong!]

That's all of round four, ladies and gentlemen. It still looks like Villa's fight whenever he gets ready to go out and take it. Jimmy is just about worn out—there's no more juice left in his punches, and Pancho is taking them all over the face and body.

There's the whistle! Seconds out of the ring!

[Gong!]

That's the bell! Round five! Wilde is coming out his corner slowly. The speed has gone out of this fight now! Both men are pretty tired. Even 110 pound gets tired after four rounds of what they've been through! Villa is saving that right hand again; he's using the left almost alone. O! There's a left to the stomach that has Jimmy almost doubled up as he comes into a clinch!—it hurt him that time—now they've broken again, and Villa—uummmh! Villa landed a hard left to the face.

(Gong!)

That's the end of round five. Both men retire to their corners, and Jimmy's seconds rush in to see what they can do for that injured optic of Jimmy's. It's swollen shut and his face is lathered with blood. Pancho Villa is almost unmarked in his corner, but the brown skin is darker in spots to mark the places where Jimmy's been landing with that right hand of his. Jimmy is showing a lot of grit, sticking in there with Villa, when he knows he's lost the fight. This must be a typical example of real Welsh stubbornness. The seconds are getting Jimmy in shape for the next frame. They've given him a whiff at the bottle, and his bruised face screws up wryly at the odor. There's the signal—seconds out of the ring. Away go the pails and towels!

(Gong!)

Round six! Villa is coming out of his corner with a determined look on his face. He's landing lefts and rights to Jimmy's body! He's going to end it right now—that's what those punches are saying. Jimmy keeps his guard up and comes back weakly. Owow! The brown boy lands a left to the face—JIMMY STAGGERS BACK TO A NEUTRAL CORNER! VILLA IS TEARING IN AFTER HIM! He's driving blows at his body and head—there'll be no stopping Pancho now. Jimmy is motioning to the referee—Pancho is hitting him with the back of his hand and he doesn't like it, but Patsy motions the fighters to go on—Villa is going after him with lefts and rights to the body! WILDE IS STAGGERING BACKWARD! I GUESS IT'S ALL OVER NOW! THE LITTLE WELSHMAN IS GROGGY! HE CAN'T STAND UP BUT HE WON'T FALL DOWN! HE WON'T GO DOWN! VILLA IS BEATING HIM WITH BOTH FISTS BUT HE WON'T DROP! VILLA IS DRIVING HIM ALL AROUND THE RING. WILDE IS STOOPING OVER WITH HIS ARMS WRAPPED AROUND HIS HEAD! HE'S GOING TO KEEP ON! HE'S GAME . . . O, BUT HE'S GAME! Villa's on top of him now with punches—rights and lefts on the head! Wilde is still on his feet—he's unsteady—a good sock will end it right now——

(Gong!)

That's all of round six! And what a round! Wilde just dropped into his seat when his seconds pushed it out. He's done for now. He can't go into the next round! The crowd is shouting to Patsy Haley to stop it right now! Wilde's seconds are arguing with him to toss in the towel, but the little Welshman intends to fight it out until he drops. His seconds are wiping the claret from his face and body—from his nose, from a gash on his cheek and from that cut over his right eye. Both his eyes are almost closed.

It's nonsense for him to go back into the ring. There's the whistle—seconds out of the ring——

(Gong!)

There's the bell! Round seven! Wilde is staggering out! He can hardly raise his arms to defend himself. Villa has begun the shower of blows again to face and body! Rights and lefts, and rights and lefts that send the little Welshman staggering from pillar to post. He's reeling all around the ring, with Villa right after him all the time. He's taking terrible punishment, but he's too stubborn to fall down—his body's giving in—he can't hold his arms up—they're falling—his arms are betraying him—that little fighting tike is giving up—the mind says go on, but those arms won't respond. They're down! There it comes! Ohhhh! A right inside swing to the jaw, and Jimmy Wilde is on the mat—HE'S DOWN! PATSY HALEY IS COUNTING HIM OUT.

JEAN GOLDKETTE . . . . . .

Out of the old music called jazz has come a music of character. Out of the same music has grown an orchestral expression of the New World. Jean Goldkette has developed the music of the modern dance to a point of symphonic perfection. The band plays with a vitality that captures the evasive spirit of youth. It plays with versatility that encompasses both the Negroid spirit of the Congo cancan and the delicate air of a Colonial minuet. Simple melodies are developed into inspiring constellations of notes. The visions of Victor Young, orchestrator, take form in the studios of W-G-N. They are illuminated by Goldkette and broadcast. Time: 1:30, 2:25, 11:00.

Tonight Herbert Johnson will be heard in a brief piano recital. This capable young artist is one of the few Americans to reach such distinction as has Johnson. Critics acclaim him as a master of touch—as a brilliant technician—as the possessor of a sturdy musical background. 8:45.

LARRY LARSEN . . .

Larry Larsen, organist, has selected a few of the lighter favorites for his programs today. Music that everybody knows, and music that everybody likes come in rollicking style from the Goldkette organ. It is the organ specially designed to meet the specifications of Jean Goldkette. Hear Larsen this afternoon and evening at 2:00 and at 6:30.

COSMO d'ALMADA . .

Cosmo d'Almada, internationally famous baritone, and native of the United States, sings one of his last recitals before his departure for an engagement with an Italian troupe in Europe. The singer, of Spanish-American lineage, is booked for an engagement for a tour of Germany and the larger cities on the Mediterranean. Formerly Cosmo d'Almada has sung with opera companies from coast to coast, and was brilliantly successful during his concert tour of Italy. 8:45.

AUSTIN LEGION TO BE HOST TO FIFTH DISTRICT

Session Wednesday Will Be Held in Town Hall.

Austin post, No. 52, of the American Legion, will be host at the fifth district meeting to be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday night at the new Austin town hall, Central and Lake streets. Commander Blaine Brooks Germon announces "a few speeches, plenty of wisecracks, a hot meeting in a cool place, surprises, and as little business as possible." He urges his comrades to "see and hear Shillinglaw, Savage, McGann, Benston, Kellogg, and 'the old gang.'"

The fifth annual picnic of Forest Park post, No. 414, will be held today in Wing park, Elgin. Comrades are urged to get out as early as possible, for benches and tables are scarce and "first come, first served." The program includes a ball game, races, swimming, golfing, tennis, and horse shoe games. Ice cream, soft drinks, and coffee will be served free.

The Cook county council of American Legion auxiliaries is coöperating with the Illinois club in its gala week celebration which opened yesterday. The council will have a booth at the home port, East Chicago avenue, near the lake, where the exposition and programs will be held. There will be a display of the articles made by the ex-service men in the hospitals near Chicago. Miss Dagmar Romer, chairman of rehabilitation for the council, will be in charge of the booth and the sale of this handicraft. The articles from the Speedway hospital will be under her direct supervision, while those from North Chicago and Great Lakes and elsewhere will be in charge of Mrs. A. E. King.

Mrs. Melville Mucklestone, president of the Cook county council, has been active in assisting the Illinois club in its project. The department president of the auxiliary, Mrs. A. C. Duncan, will have a place on the program.

The annual pre-convention luncheon of the Cook county council will be held Saturday, Sept. 7, in the gold room of the Congress hotel at 12:30 o'clock. Mrs. Claude D. Raber, 7000 Stewart avenue, is chairman of arrangements.

Mrs. A. C. Duncan, president of the American Legion auxiliary, department of Illinois, predicts that the state convention of the auxiliary to be held at Rock Island, Sept. 16 and 17, will be the best attended of any similar event in the history of the organization.

Mrs. Duncan reports gains made in all programs of the auxiliary throughout the year. The national quota of 24,164 members was reached on July 15. There are now 446 units and 33 of these are new. The sum of $45,000 was spent for the aid and comfort of ex-servicemen at various institutions. Much has been done in behalf of the children at the Illinois Soldiers' Orphans' home, and the erection of a $3,000 clubhouse at the home is now under way.

Fort Dearborn post No. 268 will hold a picnic on Sunday, Aug. 25 at the Forty and Eight chalet grounds in the Forest preserve at 95th street and Archer avenue. The outing will include races and other athletic events for men, women and children. There will be music by the drum and bugle corps of the post, selections by the post quartet, and four vaudeville acts. There will be dancing both afternoon and evening, with a feature dancing act by the Claire brothers. Commander W. C. Wakefield anticipates an attendance of 5,000. A number of subcommittees are actively at work under the general chairmanship of Lawrence O'Dwyer. Transportation will be provided for those desiring to leave from the post headquarters, 6336 Cottage Grove avenue, every half hour between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Commander Walter Jasper announces the formal opening of the Consumers' post summer home at Wilson, Ind., in the heart of the Sand Dunes. The members of the post took their families to the opening. The cottage is to be used by the members and their families during both summer and winter. It is near the ski jump at Miller, Ind. Several other posts have been invited down for the week-ends.

Theodore B. Sachs post, No. 349, initiated eleven new members at its latest meeting, bringing the membership to fifty, the highest it has been in four years. The results have been credited to the efforts of Commander Emmett C. Stevens. Past Commander Ben Friedlander of Naval post and Comrade C. Cross of the same organization spoke.

At tomorrow night's meeting of Chilpilly post, No. 310, Joseph De La Cour, commander of the sixth district, will tell of his experiences with "Hard Boiled" Smith and his marine M. P.s and how he broke up prison camp No. 2. La Cour will relate in detail his capture, escape and revenge, and how the villians of the piece came to their just deserts. Business of the meeting will consist in the election of delegates to the state convention.

Diffenderffer has been taking things easy in Saugatuck, Mich.; Charles Devore has been enjoying Montreal, and various other members of the club have been absent during the warm weather.

GAME WARDENS ARE SELECTED TO GUARD PHEASANT

In an effort to prevent the killing of pheasants before the season opens, members of the Izaak Walton league of Elmhurst at their regular meeting appointed seven game wardens to serve during the coming year. This will also have a tendency to prevent hunters from shooting their quota once the season opens.

Jim Venner was named chief warden with Fred Bishop, Christ Boldebuck, Julius Wendland, C. Pigg, Marshall Palmer, and William Baker assisting him.

Elmhurst members have been invited to participate in an open shooting match of Downers Grove chapter, scheduled for Sept. 8.

Made Honor Queen.

Miss Mildred Limbach, the first honored queen of Du Page Bethel, No. 47, Job's Daughters, was selected as one of the honor queens in an escort to Mrs. Rosa Schneeberger, the grand guardian of Job's Daughters, at the annual session of the organization held at the United Masonic temple Saturday.

40TH WARD GETS STREET REPAIR FUND OF $85,000

Macadam Thoroughfares to Receive Benefit.

Repair of macadam streets in the 40th ward, the subject of a recent controversy between the department of public works and residents of the ward, will be made out of the regular vehicle tax fund as local property owners recommended, according to a statement of Commissioner Wolfe to B. A. Rooney, president of the Montrose District Boosters' association.

In answer to a recent request of the Montrose group for immediate repair of the streets Commissioner Wolfe said the bureau of streets has been instructed to repair as much of the streets as the money available will permit.

Fund Increased to $85,000.

According to the terms of the vehicle tax allotment for the 40th ward, only $5,000 may be used for the repair of macadam streets, but through the intervention of Ald. Joseph C. Ross and property owners of the district the appropriation for macadam streets will be raised out of the general fund of $85,000. The total appropriation for the ward will be kept within the stipulated $85,000, however, as originally allocated by the department of public works.

A survey is being prepared by the ward superintendent, Ald. Ross announced yesterday, to determine on which streets the macadam appropriation will be spent. Funds in addition to the original $5,000 were requested because there is a large amount of macadam pavement in an unusable condition.

The Montrose district association recommended repair of all streets between Montrose avenue and Irving Park boulevard and Crawford avenue and the north branch of the river. These streets are paved almost entirely with macadam and $5,000 would be insufficient, Mr. Rooney said.

Warns Against Discrimination.

"These repairs are necessary and urgent," he said. "The people on these blocks are taxpayers and are entitled to relief. They would be the objects of discrimination if their streets were not repaired simply because they happened to be paved with macadam instead of asphalt or concrete."

According to Mr. Rooney, when the city council reconvenes next month his association will seek legislation to prohibit milk trucks from traveling on Montrose avenue and tearing up the pavement. Milk trucks are the cause of the poor condition of the street, he said, and since Montrose avenue is an important east and west artery, a sound pavement should be maintained.

ELMWOOD PARK FAIR STARTING SEPT. 5, ARRANGED BY LEGION

Initial steps in the plans for the first annual fair for Elmwood Park have been taken by the fair committee appointed some time ago by Elmwood Park post No. 686 of the American Legion. The exposition is to be staged in the vicinity of 7600 West Grand avenue three nights, beginning Sept. 5. Members of the committee opine that it will improve business for merchants of Elmwood Park and encourage a sense of community interest among the residents of the village. A large number of visitors from Chicago and various suburbs is expected.

The personnel of the fair committee is as follows: General chairman, John A. Day; fair manager, Frank M. Hartigan; finance, Joseph L. O'Brien; secretary, Richard Burke; publicity, Joseph F. Cappech, and business manager, John J. Murphy.

Mr. Day, who is Ninth district commander, expressed his gratification for the work being done by the American Legion in community affairs. During a recent tour of the Ninth district, especially in the Chicago suburbs, he said, he witnessed numerous activities being carried on by the Legion. Mr. Day expects the Elmwood Park fair to be the greatest advertisement the community has ever had.

Frank M. Hartigan, fair manager, has established headquarters in the new Elmwood Park municipal building.

"Y" BOYS TOUR ICE CREAM AND CANDY PLANTS

On Saturday, Aug. 10, sixty boys from the cadets and junior B classes, 10 to 11 years old, of the West Side Y. M. C. A., 1515 West Monroe street, journeyed to the Goldenrod Ice Cream company. After learning the processes involved in making ice cream, the boys were allowed to sample the products. Yesterday they took a trip to the Bunte Candy factory, which is to be followed by a trip to the Wrigley company.

The boys attend three gymnasium and swimming classes each week. These classes are each divided into four teams which compete against one another. In the junior B group, the Eagles, captained by John Fernback, are leading, closely followed by the Robins and Pioneers, which are led by Philip Bambara and Horatio Calveresi, respectively. In the youngest boys' class, the cadets, the Yanks, whose leader is Adolph Mauer, are winning, while the Sox and Pirates, whose respective leaders are Carmel Miller and Anthony Bertone, are giving them close competition. In the older boys' classes, the junior A's, the race is close, with the Apaches scarcely ahead of the Mohawks and Braves.

HONOR SENIORS ARE ANNOUNCED BY CRANE HIGH

The eleven students attaining the highest averages in the summer course at Crane High school were announced last week. Of the total of 126 graduates 73 are regular Crane students, and the records of these alone have been compiled for announcement.

They are, in the order announced: Paul Schrage, William Casale, Louis Kramer, Allen Price, Martyn Andrews, Fred Fleming, Paul Motalo, Frank Bock, Harold Thiemann, David Gootfinger and Abner Levine. Usually only the ten highest are announced, but this year the tenth and eleventh students on the list were tied in scholastic average.

St. Philip's High School Will Open on Sept. 3

Classes will be resumed at St. Philip's High school, 3141 West Jackson boulevard, on Sept. 3, according to an announcement made at the school yesterday. Students may register any time before that day, if they wish. Last year's freshman registration reached a total of about 150 students. The Servite fathers conduct the school.

Lions Clubs to Give Picnic for Oak Forest Patients

A picnic for patients in Oak Forest infirmary, 147th street and Chicago avenue, will be given next Wednesday by the Forest Park, Maywood, River Forest, and Tri-City Lions clubs. A program of entertainment is being arranged under the direction of Charles Huffy, president of the Forest Park group.

DESCRIBES GAGS RACKETEERS TRY ON HOUSEWIVES

Business Bureau Finds Picture Game Common.

BY THOMAS WREN.

While some high pressure racketeers are busy with ideas for defrauding Chicago business men through worthless advertising space in publications that never appear and soliciting donations for charities which do not exist, others of their followers work on the gullibility of Chicago housewives.

FLINT GRINNELL.

This announcement is made by Flint Grinnell of the Better Business bureau, which is engaged in an exposé of all classes of racketeers. He said there are approximately seventy-five of them now operating various bogus rackets in the city.

"One scheme used by the high pressure gentry is to coax the dollars out of the housewife's budget in the well known picture enlarging scheme," said Grinnell.

Give 'Em All Lucky Numbers.

"An agent appears at the door and exhibits a handful of envelopes and suggests that one be drawn. A selection is made, and it is the lucky envelope, and the housewife hands over a picture for enlargement without cost.

"The housewife signs a slip of paper and later to her amazement learns she has to pay an exorbitant price for the enlargement of a picture which often is not worthy of a frame. However, she has signed a contract and must abide by its terms. All envelopes contain the lucky numbers, so-called."

Grinnell says that probably no home has escaped the "college student magazine racket," which has been worked throughout the country.

"These solicitors are supposed to be young persons working for a scholarship at some college, and if they can procure the largest number of magazine subscriptions they will be awarded the prize," said Grinnell.

Gray-Haired College Boys.

"Many of these college boys are gray of hair and don't resemble in the least the average college student.

"At this time of the year there are usually truckfuls of what appear to be sailormen roving about the city, with a cargo of furs.

"One of them generally approaches a prospective customer and, after looking furtively from side to side, announces in a subdued tone that he is a sailor on leave and has been able to smuggle in some fine furs.

"From under his blouse he pulls a pelt and holds up to sight what appears to be a fairly good piece of fur. He quotes a price that seems cheap. Later the purchaser learns the fur is that of either cat or dog that has been 'doctored' and that the price was exorbitant."

Grinnell said the men are not sailors and the furs not smuggled. He declared the racket has been worked from coast to coast and from the great lakes to the Gulf of Mexico.

Women Peddle Fake Lace.

"It is interesting," he said, "to find that the women traveling with the clan represent themselves as poor immigrant women, who have just arrived in the country and through dire necessity are forced to dispose of lovely lace heirlooms, which they had brought from the old country.

"These so-called heirlooms are purchased by the fakers at wholesale prices from manufacturers in Cincinnati, O., and other eastern cities.

"Probably the most vicious racket aimed at the housewife today is what is called the homework scheme. Operators of these rackets advertise for inexperienced women to do light sewing, embroidery, painting of post cards, etc., at home. These fakers lead the housewife to believe she will be able to remain at home and also earn additional money.

"Upon answering the advertising the applicant learns she is expected to send in a sum of money for instructions. If this is done she is asked for additional money for samples. When she sends in her work the package bounces back from the post-office with the statement, 'Moved: Left no address.'"

Oldest Is Charity Appeal.

Grinnell states that one of the oldest schemes for talking women out of their money and into the possession of worthless goods is the well known charity appeal racket. Perpetrators of this racket, he explained, represent themselves as working for some charitable institution. The latter is usually placed far away from the town in which the racket men operate to prevent an immediate checking of the statements.

"Many Chicago women have fallen victims to the lure of possessing encyclopedias without cost," said Grinnell.

"The purveyor of these books approaches his customer with the glad news that she had been recommended to him as a woman of fine repute and a person who will appreciate his proposition. It is the old game of contract signing and after it is done the book purchaser learns she has to pay $62.50 upward for some loose leaf service."

YOUNG MINISTER MAKES GUIDING YOUTH HIS IDEAL

St. Luke's Lutheran Builds First Unit.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

With the trend of population away from the rural sections and toward the great cities, church pioneering has, in proportion, shifted the setting for much of its activities. An instance is to be found in St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran church, 77th street and Constance avenue. In a young and fast growing neighborhood, the young church has a young pastor in the Rev. Theodore E. Conrad. The congregation is made up largely of young people.

THE REV. T. E. CONRAD.

The church, starting three and a half years ago in a section given over to new brick apartments and homes, has developed from a handful of persons meeting in a rented hall to the point where a model parish house—as the first unit of the plant in prospect—has been erected at the rear of the Constance avenue lot.

The $50,000 parish house, dedicated in April, 1928, has been so planned that when the church is built later, the present unit will—by the tearing out of a wall—dovetail perfectly with the house of worship. Meantime, considering that the structure is to be part of the combination building, the congregation has succeeded remarkably well in providing a place of churchly appointments and appearance.

Chapel in Present Structure.

The completed first unit of the plant consists of two floors and a basement. The first floor is given over entirely to a chapel. In the basement there is provision for the Sunday school and social activities. The second floor houses an apartment used for the parsonage and also includes a large room for the use of the primary department of the Sunday school.

Born at Elgin, Ill., son of the Rev. T. A. Conrad, now secretary-treasurer of the Augustana Pension and Aid fund, the leader of St. Luke's church finds himself in a field for which he has keen enthusiasm.

The Rev. Mr. Conrad, following his ordination at Des Moines, Ia., came to the pastorate about a year ago. He is a graduate of Gustavus Adolphus college, St. Peter, Minn., and of Augustana Theological seminary. Mrs. Conrad is also a graduate of Gustavus Adolphus college.

Seeks to Be Spiritual Home.

The policy of the church, according to its paster, is "to provide a true church home for the community, caring for the spiritual needs of those with whom it comes in contact.

"We believe," says the Rev. Mr. Conrad, "in the teaching of creed in order that we may know exactly what we believe. Our formulation of that creed is attained by a summary of the outstanding works of the Triune God, as revealed to men in the Holy Bible. We have no use for a conception of divine truths as they may come from human minds alone, in which it is held that every man's opinion is correct, however contradictory these opinions may be among themselves.

"A feature which we particularly stress in such indoctrination is in regard to the religious education of youth. We feel that the most important part of that education is cared for by requiring youth to attend divine services. We find that the church that is solid in its principles of rearing youth is the church that is respected and loved as the years pass by."

Sunday School Started with Two.

A canvas of the Southfield district was made in 1922 by the Rev. D. A. Lofgren, field missionary for the Illinois conference of the Evangelical Lutheran Augustana synod. The first service was held in 1924 in the chapel for Augustana Home for the Aged, 76th street and Stony Island avenue. The Sunday school was started with only two children—Carl Johnson and Evelyn Benson—enrolled.

Leonard F. Nelson was the first Sunday school superintendent. He was succeeded in 1925 by Raymond J. Lewis, who is still in charge.

For a time Gilbert Bengston served as student pastor. The South Shore Mission society was organized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hedstrand, 7926 East End avenue, for the purpose of supporting the services being held. On Nov. 10, 1925, the congregation was organized with thirty communicant members as St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran church. Services were held at a bungalow at 1810 East 77th street until April, 1928.

Pastor at Post a Year.

William Siegel of Rock Island, Ill., served as student pastor during the summer of 1926. Cecil G. Johnson, another student pastor, served during the following winter. July 1, 1927, the Rev. William Siegel returned as the first ordained pastor of the congregation. Failing health caused him to resign in August, 1928. He was succeeded by the Rev. Mr. Conrad.

The St. Luke's church board is composed of these deacons: Raymond J. Lewis, Warren E. Hall, C. H. Engelmohr, Carl Hultquist, G. Felldin, and C. A. Skafgaard; trustees: John F. Nelson, Harry Nelson, C. Roy Nylen, August Kress, William Barfknecht, and Adolph Kirbach.

William Barfknecht is church treasurer; Myrtle Wallin, financial secretary; C. Roy Nylen, organist.

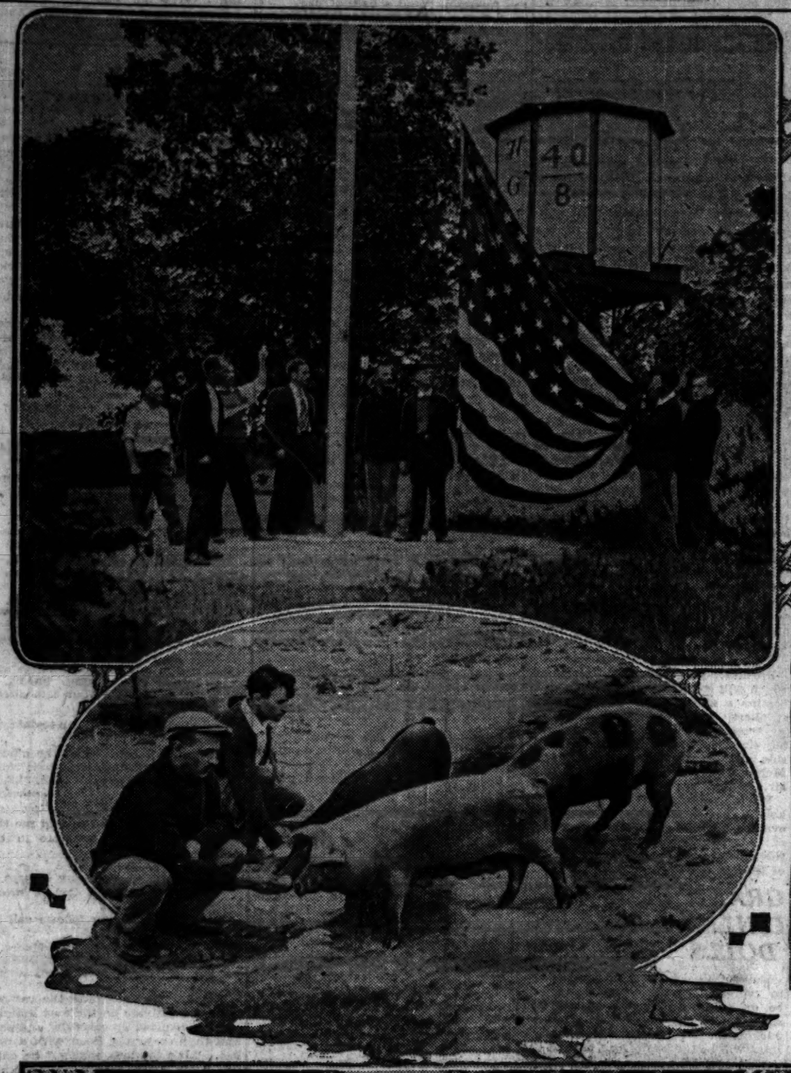
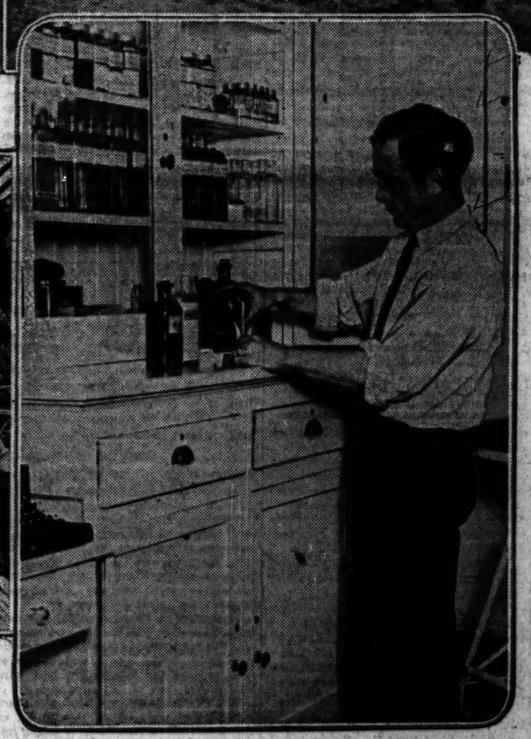
BEATING BACK TO HEALTH AT TRIBUNE-FORTY AND EIGHT CAMP



The flag under which they fought more than ten years ago floats above the war veterans at The Tribune-Forty and Eight convalescent camp at Orland, Ill. Soldiers, a flag, and sunset mean the impressive ceremony of retreat, although the veterans at the camp execute the flag lowering with informality that's a far cry from attention, and, perhaps, inspection. Pigs mean pastime and pork to the camp veterans. John Miles, D. S. C., is at the left in the picture, and Nicholas Hilaridis is with him. In the picture below the boys are taking it easy in the open air and sunshine. Left to right: Sidney F. Love, superintendent of the camp; Chris Webster, O. B. Kennedy, J. Boland, E. Rickhoff, and C. Belinka.



Veterans of The Tribune-Forty and Eight convalescent camp, Orland, Ill., are shown in the top picture working among the flowers and vegetables of their own flourishing garden. The chickens, like the pigs, serve a double purpose. In the chicken yard they mean fascinating work. On the table they mean something else again. Philip Doyle is in the foreground of the chicken yard picture and O. B. Kennedy is in the rear. Below: Sidney F. Love, camp superintendent, at the medicine chest. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

OUTLYING AREAS JOIN FORCES IN TRACTION FIGHT

Demand Extensions Be Specified.

Protection of the interests of outlying districts of Chicago in the settlement of the traction problem is the aim of the Property Owners' Traction association, a group including leading business men, bankers, and property holders from all parts of the south side.

The first meeting of the new organization was attended Monday by more than 100 south side business leaders. Officers are president, H. H. Burke; treasurer, Joseph Flaherty; secretary, Edward Qualkinbush; and vice presidents representing the various sections of the south side: W. C. Tegtmeier, Englewood; Col. H. C. Kellogg, Clearing; Charles S. Ruby, South Chicago; Edward J. Nelson, Beverly Hills; J. A. Malooly, Woodlawn; G. A. Kluge, Stony Island; C. A. Evans, Hyde Park; Ben Stevenson, Chatham; and H. H. Baum, central manufacturing district.

Asserts Tangle Hurts Business.

"The people of Chicago feel that the present inadequate transportation system is not only stunting the growth of the city, but is hurting business in general," Mr. Burke said yesterday. "They want to see the traction proposition taken out of politics, and run as it should be, on a strictly business basis. Furthermore, they want to see the traction problem settled now.

"We do not favor any particular company or companies. We are not sponsoring any particular extension or extensions of the surface lines, elevateds, buses, or subways. However, we do expect to see a comprehensive system of extensions both on surface, bus and elevated lines given to the people, the streets and routes of these extensions to be consistent with the growth of Chicago.

"We further expect the city council and traction companies to agree on a reasonable franchise that will be fair to both companies and the people of Chicago.

"If such a fair and reasonable franchise is offered in a referendum, this organization will do everything in its power to help acquaint the public and particularly the business interests of Chicago with the conditions set up in the franchise, and will use all its influence to bring out every possible vote in favor of such a franchise. On the other hand, should a franchise be offered which is not fair to companies and the people, we will use every force at our command to defeat it."

Demand Naming of Extensions.

The statement of purpose adopted by the new group at its first meeting includes as one of the planks the definite assurance prior to granting the franchise as to where, when, what and how extensions are to be made.

The organization also favors continuance of the present rate of fare until definite consolidation of the companies and until a transit commission appointed by the mayor will fix the rate. It recommends use of the city traction fund impartially for the benefit of all sections of the city.

The following are members of the executive committee: Mr. Burke, Mr. Baum, Col. Kellogg, T. A. McGuire, Mr. Kluge, N. J. Dougherty, Mr. Flaherty, Mr. Ruby, Mr. Stevenson, Mr. Qualkinbush, E. R. Engel, Edward Weinberg, T. A. Rooney, Mr. Tegtmeier, Charles C. Cross, E. L. Bergren, Mr. Malooly, Johnson, Joseph Heinsen, Mr. Evans, J. B. Clarke, Harry McDenagh, James Galligan, A. J. Hoss, P. W. Barrett.

WENTWORTH AVE. HONORS MAYOR, TALL AND JOLLY

Long John for 50 Years a Picturesque Figure.

This article is the tenth of a series explaining the sources of the names of streets and suburbs of the south side.

There was once a citizen of Chicago who was a continuous delight to newspaper men, for he was one of those rare personages who are never failing sources of news. The fact that he managed and later owned one of the early newspapers of the city did not seem to make his name or deeds any less desirable for print in rival papers. John Wentworth was his name, and it was for him that Wentworth avenue, extending south from 22d street to 84th street, about a quarter mile west of State street, was named.

In many respects "Long John" Wentworth was to Chicago in the '40s and '50s what Mayor Jimmy Walker is to New York today. His good nature, humor, and kindliness made him universally popular, yet he was able to command and hold respect while every one from judges to messenger boys called him "Long John." The nickname was applied to him even after he became a congressman and mayor. Standing 6 feet 6 inches in height, he would have been a noticeable figure anywhere without his other qualities. He was in demand for every occasion, for if "Long John" were present the success of the affair was assured.

Owned Land Where Street Is.

The man himself was so much more important than the street named for him that his individual history rather overshadows that of the street. Yet it is known that while accumulating power and influence John Wentworth also accumulated land and wealth. Included in his property was a large piece of unoccupied prairie south of 22d street and about one mile west of the then straggling Cottage Grove avenue. It was known as the "Long John tract," and when part of it became the Union stockyards and the Dexter trotting park, in the '60s, a street was opened through this strip of land, beginning at 22d street, and appropriately named Wentworth avenue. From time to time the street has been lengthened until today it extends to 84th street and has on it one of the important surface car lines of the south side.

Following his graduation from Dartmouth college, John Wentworth came to Chicago from his home town of Sandwich, N. H., to take over the management of the Chicago Democrat in 1836. He purchased the paper and turned it into a daily in 1840, thus owning the first daily Democratic newspaper in the northwest.

Elected to Congress in 1844.

His political career began shortly afterward, for he was elected to congress in 1844 and served two terms until 1848, when he was defeated for renomination. However, he returned to congress for one term in 1852. In 1857 he was elected mayor of Chicago, and again in 1860.

Following his two terms as mayor he was elected a delegate to the state constitutional convention and also a member of the board of education. He was appointed police commissioner in 1863, and in 1880 served as vice chairman of the Republican national convention that nominated Garfield for President. His death, at the age of 73, occurred in 1888, yet even today John Wentworth is remembered and spoken of as Chicago's most celebrated citizen as well as most popular man.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

BY FRED PASLEY.

EDWARD R. CONRAD of 1222 West 83d street and prominent in Beverly Hills fraternal circles has not been sitting in at a single pinochle session despite the fact Mrs. C. is away on a two months' vacation. Ed has boils. The unsuspecting housewives have been singing their praises of Ed early and late to their disgruntled husbands, who admit the affliction has increased Ed's standing in the community.

Edward C. Zimmerman, who holds the world's record of 2 hours and 20 minutes from St. Joe to Chicago by automobile, is in the market for a new straw hat. It may be sent charges prepaid to his home address, 5448 Cornell avenue. The size is 7¼ and he prefers a striped crown band. Zimmie, chief engineer of Our Town pump, drove up to Manistee, Mich., last Saturday and left his new Dockstader & Duncan kelly in a beanery in Holland. He advises that this offer to present him with a new straw will not be good after Sept. 1.

LAKE GENEVA has been blessed this season by the presence of Miss Irene McEnroe of 5549 Carpenter street. Miss McEnroe is the popular and talented math. teacher at Carl Schurz High school. Her proclivity for mathematics has enabled her to improve her golf score at the Wisconsin resort and it is expected that any student who can chat golf will have a pleasant time of it in her class next season.

Jack Kessel of 8135 Phillips avenue may be the dignified and efficient president of Kessel Bros., 4034 South Michigan avenue, but when he's on his vacation he is known as Jack the Berrypicker. He spent a couple of weeks in Michigan and vied with the professionals in the raspberry patch. Jack is a fast and furious picker and believes that he broke a picking record for Berrien county. Anyhow, his sunburned arms and neck have earned him the sobriquet of Happy Jack the Picker, and, although he handed out boxes of hand picked berries, his friends handed him back the raspberries for getting so tanned.

WALTER J. KRUEGER of 7915 South Michigan avenue, who doubles as the assistant cashier of the Cottage Grove State bank, 75th street and Cottage Grove avenue, is proud and happy these bright days. In recognition of his efficient services, the directors of that institution have created a bond and mortgage department, making Walter its manager. When it comes to matters such as bonds and investments, of which we unhappily know nothing, we recommend that you see Walt. He is one of the inventors of safe and sane financing. No more will he be assistant cashiering all over the place but will devote his energies and talents exclusively to his new department.

Charlie Blake writes that it has been a long time between drinks and that he is now running his father's monument business and that during July he sold a $200,000 mausoleum to William C. Grunow of the Grigsby-Grunow company, the radio manufacturers. It will be erected in Forest Home cemetery, Forest Park, and will be "the largest, finest and most costly mausoleum ever erected in the middle west, with the exception of that of Judge Elbert H. Gary." Below Charley's signature on the last page of the letter we note the steno marks, CEB-CRI., so it looks as if Chas. is a successful business man in a really serious way, at last.

WEARING a healthy and most becoming sun tan, E. G. Swanson, vice president and cashier of the South Side Trust and Savings bank, has returned from a delightful month's vacation in northern Wisconsin. The sparkling streams and lakes of the vicinity offered a great treat to Mr. Swanson, who spent many happy moments with his rod and reel. Dressed in old clothes, he would lie for hours on a shady bank or in a boat, waiting for the fish to nibble. Then he would pull them in—and how he pulled them in (according to his story). When he was not fishing Mr. Swanson was playing golf, and has so improved his game that he boasts that he is ready to take on anybody who will give him a reasonable handicap.

Smile and Live Century, Says Woman at 91

(Picture on page three.)

"Smile and you will live to be a hundred."

This is the advice given to young people of today by Mrs. Ara Dennis Burbank, who celebrated her 91st birthday anniversary last week at the home of her niece, Mrs. George A. Neafus, 5304 Cornell avenue.

"I have every hope of living to be 100 years old," Mrs. Burbank said, "for I will continue to smile and laugh. I take things as they come and never wear myself out by worrying."

Proves Her Youth and Age.

"To show you how old I am, let me tell you that when I was 8 years old my father placed me on his shoulder to see soldiers marching back from the Mexican war. When I was 17 I was chosen to present the company of Union soldiers which was organized in our town with a flag on the eve of their departure for the front during the civil war.

"To show you how young I am, let me tell you that I thoroughly approve of short skirts for the girls of today and I like the independent natures they have adopted by doing the things the men in my youth did. However, I do not approve of young girls smoking and drinking. Not because I am old fashioned in that respect, but because I do not believe that young men should smoke or drink, either, because those habits will affect their health."

According to Mrs. Neafus, her aunt reads the best current books, attends a movie at least once a week, and does fancy sewing.

"All my friends enjoy my aunt's company," Mrs. Neafus said, "because she is always smiling and telling funny stories about her experiences."

Wins Prizes at Bridge.

Mrs. Burbank is an excellent bridge player and often wins prizes at bridge parties. Since her nephew is a stock broker, she takes a keen interest in the daily happenings at the stock market, often defending her favorite stocks.

Mrs. Burbank keeps up a correspondence with many friends of her girlhood, all of whom are past 75 years old.

Mrs. Burbank was born in Niles, Mich. Hiram Ladd Burbank, whom she married in 1864, was a cousin of the great botanist, Luther Burbank.

WASHING MACHINE, BARGAIN, REPLACED FREE AFTER A YEAR

The Tribune will pay $2 for each story of the best bargain obtained in a neighborhood store, printed in the Metropolitan section. Address Bargain, Metropolitan Section, The Tribune. Make them short and snappy, writing on only one side of the paper, and print your name and address plainly.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—About two years ago I purchased a washing machine for $119 at a store in the 63d-Halsted street district. An allowance of $25 was made on my old machine, which incidentally the company has never called for. After the machine had been used for a year the wringer broke. I called up to make arrangements for having it repaired, but was about as surprised as a person could be when I was presented with a new $150 machine—an improved model—to replace the broken one.

MRS. E. BRACH,
3614 West 64th street.

Candle Shade Economy.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—I obtained my best bargain at an electrical shop on 63d street yesterday. For 50 cents apiece I bought three double candle shades—a style that was being closed out of regular stock. They had been priced formerly at $4.72.

MRS. ELLSWORTH ANDERSON,
7534 South Honore street.

Lifetime Sewing Machine.

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 6.—Twenty-five years ago, the first year I was married, we bought a sewing machine at a local store for $17.50. For these many years I have been making most of the clothes for my three children—little dresses for kindergarten and grammar school days; later, high school and college frocks. My faithful old machine has done heavy sewing, too, on rugs and window shades. But I am still using it. Only last week I made a sheer rayon voile dress and it stitched as perfectly as it did twenty-five years ago.

More than 200 Boy Scouts of the south shore district plan to attend a camporee at Camp Kiwanis-South, in the forest preserves near Palos park, next Saturday and Sunday. The outing is in charge of Field Scout Executive Richard L. Van Horn.

Dr. J. W. Russell, chairman of the activities committee, has announced a barbecue feast Saturday, followed in the evening by a campfire program. E. U. Goodman and Gerald Shipman, Scout executives of the south side, will aid in directing the two days of camping. Chief Forester Ransom Kennicott and President Anton J. Cermak of the county board have been invited to attend.

Outdoor Worship on Sunday.

Sunday morning outdoor church services will be held for Scouts of all faiths, according to the committee. A swimming meet Sunday afternoon, in which almost all the Scouts will take part, will be the feature of the outing.

Present Water Carnival.

A water carnival was held by Scouts of the south central district at Fuller park, 46th street and Princeton avenue, Friday night before an audience of more than 2,000. Flood lights illuminated the pool, which was in the center of a large circus ring erected by Park Director William M. Collins.

Included in the program were life-saving demonstrations by an expert of the American Red Cross; stunt swimming by Gene Lawrie, scoutmaster of Troop 447, former assistant swimming coach at the University of Illinois; and water sport demonstrations by sea scouts of Troop 400, which man the vessel Kearsarge.

The program was arranged by Ray W. Quisenberry and Earl A. Pulliam, assistant field Scout executives, with the cooperation of Mr. Collins.

Mooney, president of the South Woodlawn chamber of commerce, were the principal speakers at an open air meeting of the Triangle Improvement association Friday night at 73d street and Greenwood avenue. Both speakers stressed the importance of the community improvements.

Ready in Six Weeks.

A committee headed by Lawrence Termaat, president of the Triangle club, and Mr. Mooney held a meeting with members of the board of local improvements and were assured that the 71st street improvement would be completed within six weeks.

Arvid E. Peterson, president of the Triangle State bank, is chairman of the arrangement committee. According to Mr. Peterson, Richard W. Wolfe, commissioner of public works, will probably cut the tape which will officially open the new road to automobile traffic.

While residents of the community hold a parade and street dance the evening of the celebration, members of the civic organizations and south side officials will hold a banquet in one of the leading south side hotels.

TWO STATIONS BEING ERECTED BY GRAND TRUNK

There is still much work to be done before the subways and the elevations from 57th street to 71st street on the Grand Trunk railway will be completed, according to William C. Heggie, 3118 West Marquette road, field engineer in charge of the elevation. Through trains already are running on the elevated line, however.

The work will be entirely completed next winter, although the city ordinance gave the company until Dec. 31, 1931, to finish the job. The track elevation is a $1,000,000 project, Mr. Heggie said, and the average cost of each of the subways is $60,000.

Construction of a new $40,000 passenger station of the Grand Trunk at 63d street and Central Park avenue was started this week, and this also is scheduled for completion this winter.

The temporary wooden structure erected last year at the beginning of the track elevation work is being replaced by a building of brick with stone trim. The station will be long and narrow, fronting 127 feet on Central Park avenue and extending 31 feet on 63d street. The entrance and main waiting room, ticket office and baggage rooms will be on the ground floor. A platform will be on the upper floor and the plans call for elevators to carry baggage to the floor above. A smaller station consisting of a platform and stairway is now being built on the railroad at 59th street.

DEMAND OUTDOOR SWIMMING POOL IN MARQUETTE PARK

Members of the South Crawford-Springfield Improvement association will demand the installation of traffic signal lights at 59th street and Kedzie avenue, according to an announcement last week by Edward A. Hoberg, president of the association.

Mr. Hoberg said a committee representing his organization will meet with Police Commissioner Russell this week to explain the need for signals.

Mr. Hoberg announced that the members of the organization will urge upon George F. Donoghue, superintendent of the south parks, the construction of an outdoor swimming pool in Marquette park, 67th street and Kedzie avenue.

Stresses Significance of Day.

Several meetings have already been held by the grand knights and district deputies of the Knights of Columbus in Cook county and at one of these meetings State Deputy Edward Houlihan said in discussing Columbus day plans:

"The 12th of October is our day and we should celebrate it in a real Knights of Columbus way.

"Discovery day sums up and holds in mind the most tremendous story of human accomplishment. Other things that men have done for mankind are puny compared with the gift to civilization of half of the earth's surface. Measured by its contribution to the opportunities of the human race, it is universal, and while we simply accept it as we do the beneficences of Providence, let it not be said in derogation of our gratitude that in the enjoyment of this gift we have forgotten the giver. It is only befitting that this year the greatest tribute should be paid to our noble discoverer."

YOUNG AND OLD

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Celebrating her 91st birthday, Mrs. Ara Dennis Burbank, 5304 Cornelia avenue, is old enough to remember the return of the soldiers from the Mexican war and young enough to put her O. K. on short skirts. (Story on page one.)

SAND SCULPTORS OF SOUTH PARKS VIE FOR RIBBONS

The plans for the south parks sand modeling contest have been completed. For team competition in this contest there will be two divisions. The playground division for girls 10 years old and younger and the girls' division for girls from 10 to 13 years old. Six contestants will be allowed on the team of each division and will be allowed 45 minutes to model any design the instructor selects.

The parks will be divided into two sections. The first section includes Mark White square, Armour square, McKinley park, Sherman park and Gage park. This section will contest at Hardin square at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. The second section includes Fuller park, Cornell square, Hardin square, Davis square and Marquette playground. The contest will be held in Ogden park at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The winners in the two sections will meet in the finals Friday at a place to be selected later.

All teams of each section will be placed in a sand pit at the same time, each team being assigned a space twelve feet wide. In both divisions the use of a watering can, with water, will be allowed.

The competition will be left to the care of the park instructors, who will be allowed to accompany their team at the competition, but will not be allowed to help or give suggestions to the contestants.

Knight-Hawk Outing Today.

Members of the Knight-Hawk Social and Athletic club will hold their annual outing today in Dan Ryan woods, 87th street and Western avenue. A baseball game, other athletic events, and stunts are included in the day's program.

$859,000 PAVING JOBS APPROVED FOR SOUTH SIDE

Eleven Projects Will Be Finished by Spring.

South side street improvements estimated to cost $859,000 were confirmed in the county court during the last month, attorneys for the board of local improvements announced yesterday. The board will advertise for bids on the projects within a few weeks and all the work probably will be completed next spring.

The money will be spent for eleven paving jobs for which special assessments will be levied on south side property owners.

Chappell System Largest.

The largest improvement, known as the Chappel avenue system, will cost approximately $445,000. The following streets will be paved with concrete: Chappel avenue between 87th and 88th streets and 89th and 91st streets; Clyde, Merrill and Paxton avenues between 87th and 91st streets; 88th and 89th streets between Chappel and Paxton avenues; and 90th and 91st streets between Jeffery and Paxton avenues.

Approximately $130,000 will be expended in paving the following system of streets with asphalt: Merrill avenue between 87th street and the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad tracks; Clyde and Chappel avenues between 85th and 87th streets; 85th street between Jeffery avenue and the S., C. and S. railroad; 86th street between Jeffery and Merrill avenues.

Concrete paving of 62d street between Racine avenue and Halsted street will cost local property owners approximately $65,000.

Improvement of Morgan street between Vermont avenue and 129th street, and 129th street between Peoria street and the city limits will cost in the neighborhood of $49,000, according to estimates of engineers for the board. A concrete pavement will be laid.

Avenue E To Cost $48,000.

Avenue E will be paved with concrete between 104th and 106th streets at an approximate cost of $48,000.

Approximately $42,000 will be spent to improve 89th street between Indiana and South Park avenues. Paving will be done with asphalt.

One hundred and ninth street will be paved with asphalt between avenue F and Ewing avenue at an approximate cost of $27,000; $16,900 will be spent for improving Home avenue with asphalt between Damen and Hilldale avenues; 113th street between Halsted street and Union avenue will be paved with asphalt at a cost of $14,000; $13,500 will be spent to pave 107th street between Buffalo and Greenbay avenues with asphalt at an approximate cost of $13,500; and improvement with asphalt of 106th street between Talman avenue and the Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks will cost $9,000.

Addresses Kiwanians of Englewood on "Iron"

"Hard Facts About Iron" was the subject of an address by Jacob A. Teach, manager of the McClintic-Marshall company, at a meeting of the Englewood Kiwanis club Tuesday at the Englewood Y. M. C. A., 66th street and Union avenue. Raymond J. Crist, president, was the chairman of the meeting.

OBJECTORS HALT MOVE TO REPAVE STRETCH OF 66TH

The proposed repaving of 66th street between Parnell avenue and Halsted street has been indefinitely postponed because of the presentation of a petition, signed by a majority of the property owners on the street, to the board of local improvements last week.

Ald. James G. Coyle [17th] announced that the street must remain in poor condition until another ordinance is passed ordering the repaving of the thoroughfare or until a majority of the property owners petition the board of local improvements for the improvement. Ald. Coyle asserted that if the work is done later, new foundation probably will be necessary.

Walter Woods, president of the Standard Material company, 607 West 66th street, one of the persons circulating the petition, asserted that it would be a waste of money to improve the street. He blamed former city officials for the present condition of the street.

"If we could get material at a fair price," Mr. Woods said, "we would not oppose the repaving of 66th street. But as it is, we would be greatly overcharged for it. The politicians waste the people's money."

WOODLAWN HAS THIRD POPULAR BRANCH LIBRARY

The Woodlawn branch of the Chicago public library had the third largest circulation of all branch libraries in the city for the month of July. Legler, the main west side library, and the Chicago Lawn branch were the only others from which more books were drawn.

Students from the University of Chicago use the Wooldawn branch more than any other in the city. It has a select collection of books sent from the main library, as well as a collection of its own, amounting to approximately 30,000 volumes. This branch also has a collection of bound magazines dating to 1921 which is valuable to the students for reference work.

It is the only branch library in the city that has an attendant busy all day at the information desk.

BRIDGE OPENING TO BE MARKED BY CIVIC FESTIVAL

Business men in the South Chicago district are making arrangements for an extensive celebration on Sept. 28 to mark the completion of the new 106th street bridge which crosses the Calumet river. At a meeting Monday at the East Side Community hall, Avenue L and 103d street, Robert Sullivan, city engineer, stated that everything would be done to assure the completion of the bridge by that date.

Nicholas J. Bohling, East Side contractor and builder, has been selected as general chairman in charge of arrangements. Mr. Bohling said every civic and business organization in the Calumet district is cooperating to make the affair a success.

"We are planning to make the dedication exercises an outstanding event, not only for the South Chicago district but for the entire city," Mr. Bohling explained. "The recent dedication of the Clark street bridge was an interesting and elaborate affair but we hope to make ours even greater."

South Siders Begin Trek Home from "Wild" West

The "call of the wild," which had lured so many south siders to Wyoming, New Mexico or Arizona, now shows symptoms of subsidence. Among the first to trek back to seemingly "tame" Chicago after an adventurous two months at their place in Valley ranch, New Mexico, are Mr. and Mrs. John H. Scoville of the Del Prado hotel. The Scovilles returned Monday. Other south siders who will return shortly from the "great open spaces" are Dr. and Mrs. James H. Breasted, their daughter, Astrid, and their son, James, of the Del Prado hotel; Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Graf, 4810 Woodlawn avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Gorrel and family of 5757 Kimbark avenue. The Breasteds, Grafs and Gorrells are at the HF Bar ranch in Wyoming.

Women Plan Luncheon.

Members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Evangelical Zion church, 100th and Throop streets, will hold a luncheon and card party Wednesday in the Food Crafts shop, 616 South Michigan avenue. Mrs. Alfred J. Houle, 1038 West 103d street, is president of the organization.

South Sider Home from Trip to Scenes of War

Ten years ago Roland W. More, 7311 Crandon avenue, returned from "over there" after having participated in the world war. Mr. More, then an undergraduate at the University of Chicago, was one of a small group of south siders who went to France with the American field service before the United States entered the war.

Last week Mr. More returned again from "over there" after a stay of three months. But this time it had been to satisfy his curiosity as to what was now going on in the same regions as well as to re-live his war time experiences. He was accompanied on the venture by Mrs. More and their only daughter, Susanne.

Southtown Chapter O. E. S. Entertains Grand Officers

Grand representatives' night was observed by the member of the Southtown chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, Wednesday evening at the South Side Masonic temple, 64th and Green streets. Mrs. Otto A. Maers, 6028 Paulina street, who was recently appointed to the obituary committee of the grand chapter, was the special guest.

SOUTH SIDE FILLS EVERY NEED AT TRIBUNE OFFICE

Vacation Planning Now Is Big Service.

South side residents are finding the new TRIBUNE advertising and public service office at 1101 East 63d street, an inestimable help in scores of unexpected ways.

Hundreds of persons, every day since the office was opened a month ago, have taken advantage of the travel department in planning their vacations. Trained clerks have outlined the best roads for them, marked detours on understandable road maps, aided in the selection of hotels for overnight stops and given complete information about summer resorts.

For those who want to travel by water, information is supplied about boats, passage arranged for and aid given in the selection of routes, so they may get the most enjoyment out of their vacations.

Lost Children Returned.

Lost children, who had been brought into the office, have been aided in finding their parents, while an elderly woman, who was a stranger in the city and had lost the address of her son who lived in the vicinity, and who had strayed into the office because she recognized THE TRIBUNE sign on the window, was helped to her destination.

A small boy who wanted to know when the Cubs would be back in town was given a baseball calendar, a busy housewife who had a vacant room to let was aided in composing a want-ad, and a merchant was given the information he sought in regard to placing an advertisement in the Metropolitan section.

New Features Added.

A feature recently added to the office is the collection of answers to "blind" want-ads. Many of the south side business men are taking advantage of this as it saves them a trip downtown to get the replies.

There are many special articles by TRIBUNE writers which are on sale at the office in booklet form for a nominal cost. Some of the booklets are: "Advice to Women," by Antoinette Donnelly; "Better Golf," by Jock Hutchinson; "Birds and Birdhouses," by Bob Becker; "Government by Propaganda," by Arthur Sears Henning; "Health Pointers," by Dr. W. A. Evans; "How to Play Football," by Walter Eckersall, and "Chicago's Gangland," by James O'Donnell Bennett.

Cartoon Booklets on Sale.

In addition to these booklets, all of THE TRIBUNE cartoons, "Harold Teen," "Little Orphan Annie," "Andy Gump," "Gasoline Alley," "Moon Mullins" and "Winnie Winkle" are on sale at the office in book form.

Ed-So-Phil Club Prepares for New Season

The officers of the Ed-So-Phil club are making plans for the coming club season, which will start with a meeting on Oct. 3. The club does charity work in various institutions throughout Chicago, foremost of which are the Martha Washington Home for Crippled Children and the Park Ridge School for Girls. The summer luncheon and card party for members and guests was held last week. Left to right: Mrs. R. J. Vastine, treasurer; Mrs. T. J. Cheevers, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George Hohmann, third vice president; Mrs. E. G. Moritz, second vice president; Mrs. W. A. Turgeon, first vice president, and Mrs. Edgar J. Strawbridge, president. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

CITY ENGINEERS TO TELL PUPILS OF BIG PROJECTS

Plan Program Before Term Opens.

Arrangements are being made by school officials and Richard W. Wolfe, commissioner of public works, for a series of talks to be given during the next school year in all of the senior and junior high schools, and before parent-teacher associations on improvements in Chicago during the last few years.

The speeches will be given by members of the speakers' bureau of the city department of public works.

Mr. Wolfe announced that the story will be told by the engineers, who are in charge of such projects as the airport development, river straightening, traffic control and the latest developments in the lakes-to-the-gulf waterway.

Complete arrangements for the speaking program will be made upon the return of William J. Bogan, superintendent of Chicago schools, from his vacation within two weeks. Then a meeting of school officials and members of the department of public works will be held to outline the program.

Loran D. Gayton, city engineer, who has headed the speakers' bureau since its inception last October, will be in charge of the new program.

Among the subjects expected to be included in the speech program are: "Chicago—a Seaport," "The Construction and Extent of the City's Water Tunnels," "The Repair of Streets and Alleys," "River Straightening and Its Effect on Chicago's Future," "The Building of the City's Bridges," "The Installation and Maintenance of Sewers," and "How Chicago Protects Its Water Supply."

MUSICAL CLUB PICKS 50 BOYS FOR STAR BAND

Fifty boys who were graduated in June from various high schools all over the United States have been brought to Chicago by the Apollo Musical club, through the generosity of its patrons, to form an All American band. The boys were selected from 6,800 applicants representing nearly every state in the union. The original plan was to represent each state, but this was impossible because of the need of instrumentation.

These fifty winners were chosen by means of detailed application blanks which were mailed early in June to every high school bandmaster and principal in the country. The principle behind the questions on the applications was threefold, attempting to bring out the boy's qualities in leadership, scholarship and music.

Get Musical Instruction.

An additional qualification which stood in the boy's favor was a desire to obtain further education but a lack of financial means to do so. The boys were brought to Chicago July 15 and lodged at the Allerton house, where they will be guests of the Apollo club for ten weeks, during which time they are being given individual and group instruction in music by several instructors under the direction of Capt. J. D. Henderson, director of the All American band project for the Apollo club, and in addition are given a business course including shorthand, typewriting and bookkeeping.

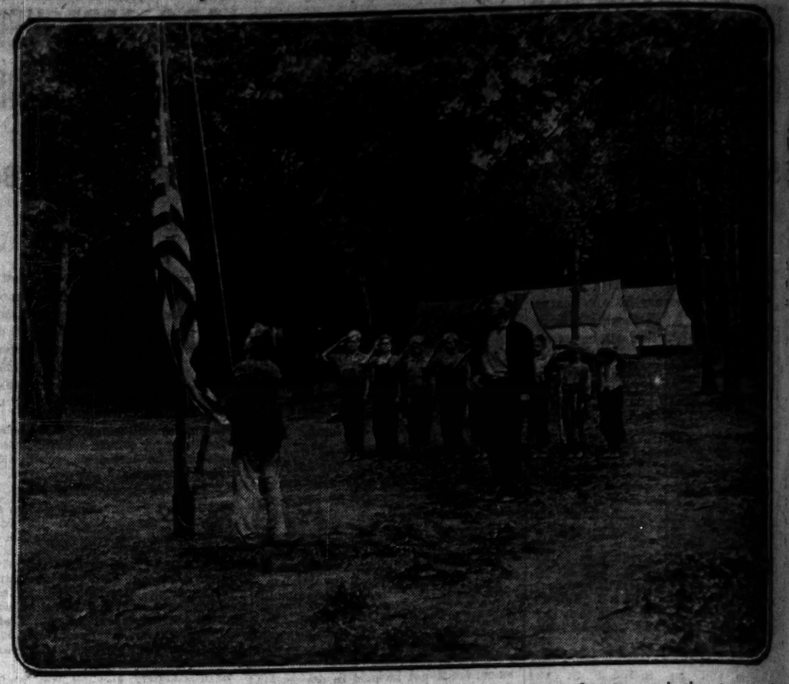
Thus members of the Apollo club believe the boys will have two advantages over the average boy in securing part time employment at the college or university of their choice, which will enable them to educate themselves.

12 to Chicago Schools.

Twelve of the boys have signified their intention of attending school in Chicago, according to A. E. Albaugh, director of the Apollo club endowment for the band.

The project, according to Mr. Albaugh, is the Apollo club's contribution toward publicity for the Chicago World's Fair. The boys will be asked to write their home town newspaper editors, giving their impressions and reactions of the city.

WAR VETERANS GIVE SCHOOLBOYS AN OUTING



Boys of Oak school, Oak Forest, who have made good records in conduct are enjoying two weeks of camping as a result of arrangements made by the Forty and Eight, composed of members of the American Legion. The camp is located near The Tribune-Forty and Eight veterans' convalescent camp. The picture shows the flag lowering ceremony at the boys' camp. H. L. Lenburg, instructor, is shown standing in front of the boys and saluting. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

BENTON PLACE, IN LOOP, GETS FIRST MARKER

Benton place—between Lake and Randolph streets and running between Wabash avenue and State street—has recently been marked for the first time. George R. Benton, a Chicagoan with offices at 417 South Dearborn street, was instrumental in having the sign placed.

The street was named after the Chicago man's great grandaunclc, Thomas Hart eBnton, one of the picturesque figures in American political history, for thirty years a United States senator from Missouri, and for a time the law partner of Andrew Jackson at Murfreesboro, Tenn.

It was this last phase of Thomas H. Benton's career that has particularly interested his Chicago descendant. A few weeks ago, George R. Benton visited the old law office in the south and found it just as it had been when occupied by the firm of Jackson & Benton.

H. T. Covington, Pioneer of Southwest Side, Dies

Harris Thorpe Covington, 65 years old, a pioneer resident of the southwest side, died at his home, 6616 Peoria street, on Aug. 11. Mr. Covington was born in Kentucky and moved to Chicago when he was 15 years of age. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anna B. Covington, four daughters, Mrs. John F. Wolff, Mrs. William J. Scott, Doris C. Nelson, and Kathleen Covington; two sons, Albert and Harris Covington; four brothers, Robert C., John H., Thomas H., and William S., and three sisters, Mrs. Anna Clark, Mrs. Lulu Cady, and Mrs. Willis Smith. Services were held at the chapel at 63d and Harvard streets on Tuesday. Burial was Wednesday at Goodland, Ind.

Michael Cody, Veteran of Surface Lines, Is Dead

Michael Cody, 50 years old, who was an employe of the Chicago Surface lines for more than twenty years, died Tuesday night after a long illness. Funeral services were held from his residence, 7024 Kimbark avenue, to St. Lawrence church Saturday morning. He was buried in Holy Sepulchre cemetery. Mr. Cody, who was born in Ireland and who has lived on the south side for more than 30 years, is survived by his widow, Mrs. Annie Cody; his four sons, Manreen, Vincent, Frank and Bernard, and his five daughters, Catherine, Anna, Margaret, Eileen and Joan.

Mrs. Belle Coleman Dies After Prolonged Illness

AQUINAS HIGH TO BE FINISHED BY FALL OF 1930

The new Aquinas Dominican High school, under construction at 72d street and Clyde avenue, by the Sisters of St. Dominic of Adrian, Mich., will be completed for occupancy in September, 1930. The new school will be equippew with a gymnasium, cafeteria and kitchen and many additional classrooms and will double the present capacity of 400 students.

The rebuilding program is being carried through with the removal of the convent from the northeast corner of 72d street and Clyde avenue, opposite the high school, to the southeast corner. When this building is remodeled into a four story structure it will accommodate thirty sisters, and it will be ready for occupancy this month. The sisters have temporary quarters at 2105 East 72d street.

This building was originally built by the Catholic Extension society nineteen years ago and is one of the landmarks of the south shore section. In 1915 it was purchased by the Dominican sisters and formed the nucleus for the present institution, which was organized in 1917, but which was not enlarged to its present capacity until 1926.

CHICAGO LAWN ASKS REMOVAL OF SPUR TRACK

Claims Street Cars Block Central Park Ave.

Residents of the Chicago Lawn district took steps to compel the Chicago Surface lines to remove the spur track on Central Park avenue, between 62d and 63d streets, last week when William F. Stelzer, president of the South Hamlin Avenue and Vicinity Property Owners' association, brought the matter to the attention of Ald. Thomas F. Byrne [15th].

Central Park avenue will be a 25 foot wide thoroughfare when ground operations in connection with the Grand Trunk track elevation are completed. The elevation work will be completed within two weeks, according to William G. Heggie, field engineer for the railroad.

Spur Removed Two Months Ago.

According to Mr. Stelzer, the Surface lines have maintained a spur track on Central Park avenue for many years. It was removed, however, a few months ago, when the Grand Trunk railroad started elevating its tracks, which are immediately adjacent to the street.

Mr. Stelzer pointed out that the residents of the community are opposed to the spur and will do everything in their power to stop the street car officials from replacing it.

Would Block Other Traffic.

A street car standing on the street, Mr. Stelzer said, would practically close the thoroughfare to other traffic. It would also slow up fire department trucks traveling to fires in the vicinity.

The spur, he pointed out, was built when Chicago Lawn was the city limits. Development of other communities along 63d street west of Chicago Lawn has compelled the Surface lines to extend its tracks further west. The spur is used at the present time for the switching of 63d and Central Park cars.

Mr. Stelzer will suggest that the Surface lines construct the spur at 63d and Cicero avenue, near the Municipal airport.

Property owners in the vicinity of 63d street and Cottage Grove avenue have finally consented to allow the department of public works to erect a comfort station at that intersection.

RADIO AMATEURS TURNING MORE TO TELEVISION

'Ham' Operators Abreast of All Progress.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Amateurs in the field of radio are keeping abreast of all the developments in the technique of broadcasting and receiving and are turning more and more to television, according to W. E. Downey, assistant chief of the radio division of the department of commerce, who is perhaps the best informed man in this country on the work of the "ham" operators.

Many of them are keeping in constant touch with the Byrd expedition in the Antarctic, according to Downey, and scores of them are receiving messages from the Graf Zeppelin on its around the world flight.

So important has the work of these experimenters become, Downey pointed out, that it will be one of the topics to be discussed at the international radio conference at The Hague on Sept. 18. They may even have representation at the parley.

Reviews History of Amateurs.

The history of radio amateur activity is reviewed by Mr. Downey in an especially prepared resumé, as follows:

"Amateur acivity in radio can be said to have begun with the start of the radio art itself. There was, however, little noticeable activity in the United States until after 1900, and more particularly in 1909, when the S.S. Republic succeeded in obtaining, by the use of her wireless, assistance to save all of her passengers and crew after colliding with the S.S. Florida.

"In 1910 an act was passed by the United States government requiring certain steamers to be equipped with radio.

"On July 5, 1912, the International Radio Telegraph convention was signed at London which designated certain bands of wave lengths for various services and on Aug. 13 of the same year the act to regulate radio communication was passed by congress. This act was the first authority for control over amateur and point to point communication. Regulation 15 under section 4 of this act applies specifically to amateurs and provided that no private station not handling bona fide commercial traffic could operate on a wave length exceeding 200 meters, except by special permission of the secretary of commerce.

Hoover Backs Amateurs.

"The American Radio Relay league was organized in 1914 by a small enthusiastic group of amateurs. Its purpose was to band all amateurs together so that each amateur could talk to and know all about the other.

"President Hoover, shortly after he was appointed secretary of commerce, evidenced his interest in the amateur by requesting that the department be advised as to how it could be of best service to them and to further show his interest, he stated that the department would award a cup annually during that administration for the best radio equipment in a major degree manufactured by the amateur, under such conditions as their directors might lay down.

"The entrance of the United States into the world war made necessary the suspension of all amateur communication, but the army and navy, recognizing that the amateurs were well trained by their experience, enlisted 3,000 to 4,000 of them, and it has been said that they were among the most efficient operators in active service.

Kept Contact with McMillan.

"It will be recalled that communication with the McMillan expeditions was carried on by amateur stations. This would not have been possible otherwise.

"During the years that have gone by the amateur has embraced every opportunity to be of service. This is brought forcefully to mind in the international radio convention of 1927 wherein he is definitely mentioned for the first time in such a document and given an international place in the wave length spectrum.

"The growth of the amateur in numbers from the records of the radio division of the department of commerce indicates that at the end of the fiscal year 1913 there were 1,224 licensed amateurs and in 1928 there were 16,928."

Short Wave Auto Sets Banned by Michigan

DETROIT.—A new law in Michigan provides a fine of $1,000, imprisonment for six months, or both, for equipping or using an automobile with a short wave receiver unless the car is used and owned by a police officer or a police permit has been granted.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

Today we are broadcasting over again the famous prize fight between Pancho Villa, the tiny Filipino, and Jimmy Wilde, the pride of Wales and England, the idol of London's National Sporting club—for the flyweight championship of the world. It is the 18th of June, in 1923, at the Polo grounds, in New York City.

[Gong!]

There's the gong! Round one!

Both men are on their toes and out of their corners in a flash. They begin mixing it in the center of the ring. Good defense on both sides and lots of snappy and brilliant footwork. The brown boy lands a left to Wilde's head but it's a light blow. They're exchanging left hand punches. They don't mean much; each boy will depend on his right for the real punches. They've gone into a clinch. They're hammering each other about the body—Hey! Villa is tearing in—he lands a pair of hard left and rights to the head—now a right cross to the head. Wilde keeps in there with him—he doesn't seem to mind the punches—they've clinched again—now Referee Patsey Haley is breaking them apart—they're almost lightning fast, ladies and gentlemen, it's hard to keep track of the punches.

[Gong!]

That's all of round one. It was an even round, that first one, with neither boy having any particular advantage in there.

[Gong!]

There's the bell! Round two! Speedy getaway from the corners again and they're in the center of the ring, ready to battle. Owowowowow! Villa pastes a hard righthander to Jimmy's jaw, and he's got 'im dizzy! Jimmy's gone into a clinch and he's holding on, while the little Filipino is savagely attacking his body. Rights and lefts, quicker than we can tell you about them, to that slim white body! He's GOT WILDE GROGGY! THE CHAMPION IS STAGGERING AROUND THE RING! VILLA IS PASTING HIM WITH EVERYTHING BUT HOME PLATE! HE'S WALLOPING HIM ALL AROUND THE RING! Wilde comes into a clinch again! Now Patsey Haley breaks them apart, and Villa is after the champ again with those pokes to the head. THIS MAY BE THE FINISH! Wilde is trying hard! He's trying to come back and stave off the finish until the end of the round! He needs the smelling salts right now! Ohhh!

(Gong!)

And that's all of round two, ladies and gentlemen, but that last swing by Pancho put Jimmy Wilde on the mat, and his seconds came out and carried him back to his corner. His seconds are working over him in his corner, and he'll probably be able to stagger out for the third, but the finish is getting pretty close.

[Gong!]

Round three! Yep, Jimmy's getting up! He's coming out of his corner unsteadily, and Pancho goes three-quarters of the way across the ring to meet him! Jimmy's ready for fight! And he's trading punches with Pancho over there near his own corner. All the steam's gone out of Jimmy's pokes, I guess. The brown boy is taking everything without a whimper—he's pushing right in—waiting for a chance to sneak that right hand over against the jaw again! They're just sparring and waiting, Villa is not putting up any attack this time. He's on the defensive—he wants to tire out Jimmy before he puts over the little giant killer! Socko and socko!

[Gong!]

That's all of round three, ladies and gentlemen. Jimmy hasn't gone down yet, but he's tiring quickly, and it still remains only a question of time. Instead of tearing in and carrying the fight to the Welshman, Pancho Villa elected in that last session, to stay back and wait for the Welshman to tire himself out with punches that the brown boy easily stayed away from.

[Gong!]

Round four! Out they come for the fourth round, and they're slugging! Just standing up there in the center of the ring and trading punches to the body and the head. The brown boy is backing up. They've gone into a clinch! Haley pats them on the shoulder and they break away—now they're sparring—Wilde is coming in—Pancho is backing up! Jimmy's on the offensive.

[Gong!]

That's all of round four, ladies and gentlemen. It still looks like Villa's fight whenever he gets ready to go out and take it. Jimmy is just about worn out—there's no more juice left in his punches, and Pancho is taking them all over the face and body.

There's the whistle! Seconds out of the ring!

[Gong!]

That's the bell! Round five! Wilde is coming out his corner slowly. The speed has gone out of this fight now! Both men are pretty tired. Even 110 pound gets tired after four rounds of what they've been through! Villa is saving that right hand again; he's using the left almost alone. O! There's a left to the stomach that has Jimmy almost doubled up as he comes into a clinch!—it hurt him that time—now they've broken again, and Villa—uummmh! Villa landed a hard left to the face.

(Gong!)

That's the end of round five. Both men retire to their corners, and Jimmy's seconds rush in to see what they can do for that injured optic of Jimmy's. It's swollen shut and his face is lathered with blood. Pancho Villa is almost unmarked in his corner, but the brown skin is darker in spots to mark the places where Jimmy's been landing with that right hand of his. Jimmy is showing a lot of grit, sticking in there with Villa, when he knows he's lost the fight. This must be a typical example of real Welsh stubborness. The seconds are getting Jimmy in shape for the next frame. They've given him a whiff at the bottle, and his bruised face screws up wryly at the odor. There's the signal—seconds out of the ring. Away go the pails and towels!

(Gong!)

Round six! Villa is coming out of his corner with a determined look on his face. He's landing lefts and rights to Jimmy's body! He's going to end it right now—that's what those punches are saying. Jimmy keeps his guard up and comes back weakly. Owow! The brown boy lands a left to the face—JIMMY STAGGERS BACK TO A NEUTRAL CORNER! VILLA IS TEARING IN AFTER HIM! He's driving blows at his body and head—there'll be no stopping Pancho now. Jimmy is motioning to the referee—Pancho is hitting him with the back of his hand and he doesn't like it, but Patsy motions the fighters to go on—Villa is going after him with lefts and rights to the body! WILDE IS STAGGERING BACKWARD! I GUESS IT'S ALL OVER NOW! THE LITTLE WELSHMAN IS GROGGY! HE CAN'T STAND UP BUT HE WON'T FALL DOWN! HE WON'T GO DOWN! VILLA IS BEATING HIM WITH BOTH FISTS BUT HE WON'T DROP! VILLA IS DRIVING HIM ALL AROUND THE RING. WILDE IS STOOPING OVER WITH HIS ARMS WRAPPED AROUND HIS HEAD! HE'S GOING TO KEEP ON! HE'S GAME . . . O, BUT HE'S GAME! Villa's on top of him now with punches—rights and lefts on the head! Wilde is still on his feet—he's unsteady—a good sock will end it right now—

(Gong!)

That's all of round six! And what a round! Wilde just dropped into his seat when his seconds pushed it out. He's done for now. He can't go into the next round! The crowd is shouting to Patsy Haley to stop it right now! Wilde's seconds are arguing with him to toss in the towel, but the little Welshman intends to fight it out until he drops. His seconds are wiping the claret from his face and body—from his nose, from a gash on his cheek and from that cut over his right eye. Both his eyes are almost closed.

It's nonsense for him to go back into the ring. There's the whistle—seconds out of the ring——

(Gong!)

There's the bell! Round seven! Wilde is staggering out! He can hardly raise his arms to defend himself. Villa has begun the shower of blows again to face and body! Rights and lefts, and rights and lefts that send the little Welshman staggering from pillar to post. He's reeling all around the ring, with Villa right after him all the time. He's taking terrible punishment, but he's too stubborn to fall down—his body's giving in—he can't hold his arms up—they're falling—his arms are betraying him—that little fighting tike is giving up—the mind says go on, but those arms won't respond. They're down! There it comes! Ohhhh! A right inside swing to the jaw, and Jimmy Wilde is on the mat—HE'S DOWN! PATSY HALEY IS COUNTING HIM OUT.

JEAN GOLDKETTE . . . . . .

Out of the old music called jazz has come a music of character. Out of the same music has grown an orchestral expression of the New World. Jean Goldkette has developed the music of the modern dance to a point of symphonic perfection. The band plays with a vitality that captures the evasive spirit of youth. It plays with versatility that encompasses both the Negroid spirit of the Congo cancan and the delicate air of a Colonial minuet. Simple melodies are developed into inspiring constellations of notes. The visions of Victor Young, orchestrator, take form in the studios of W-G-N. They are illuminated by Goldkette and broadcast. Time: 1:30, 2:25, 11:00.

HERBERT JOHNSON . .

Tonight Herbert Johnson will be heard in a brief piano recital. This capable young artist is one of the few Americans to reach such distinction as has Johnson. Critics acclaim him as a master of touch—as a brilliant technician—as the possessor of a sturdy musical background. 8:45.

LARRY LARSEN . . .

Larry Larsen, organist, has selected a few of the lighter favorites for his programs today. Music that everybody knows, and music that everybody likes come in rollicking style from the Goldkette organ. It is the organ specially designed to meet the specifications of Jean Goldkette. Hear Larsen this afternoon and evening at 2:00 and at 6:30.

COSMO d'ALMADA . .

Cosmo d'Almada, internationally famous baritone, and native of the United States, sings one of his last recitals before his departure for an engagement with an Italian troupe in Europe. The singer, of Spanish-American lineage, is booked for an engagement for a tour of Germany and the larger cities on the Mediterranean. Formerly Cosmo d'Almada has sung with opera companies from coast to coast, and was brilliantly successful during his concert tour of Italy. 8:45.

BIRTH RATE HIGH IN WARD 15; FEW INFANT DEATHS

City Studies Relation of Housing to Children.

The chance of newborn residents of Chicago living to be 3 years old depends largely on where they live, how much fresh air and sunshine they get, and who their parents are. Youngsters in the less congested districts of the south side have a better chance of surviving to kindergarten age than children born in noisy, crowded, smoky districts.

These facts were revealed in a recent report of the department of health compiled under the direction of Commissioner Arnold H. Kegel. The statistics are those of 1928 and are the first prepared by any large city to show the relation of infant birth and death rates to housing conditions, density of population, and racial characteristics, according to Dr. Kegel.

Residents of the 15th ward, on the southwest side, are the most consistent producers of new citizens, the report shows, and a low infant death rate is reported for that ward. According to the report last year 26.4 children per 1,000 population were born and 55.05 babies per 1,000 births died.

Population Only 7,000 a Mile.

Officials of the department pointed out that in the 15th ward there are only 7,000 inhabitants a square mile and a good deal of sunshine is available. The predominating nationalities are Polish, German, and Slavic.

The 18th, 19th, and 9th wards, which have a population of 5,000 per square mile, of north European extraction, likewise have large birth rates and low infant mortality.

In the 10th and 12th wards, however, the infant death rate is higher, according to Dr. Kegel, who pointed to the manufacturing character of the wards, despite the fact that in these wards the population is not dense. There are only 3,000 per square mile in the 10th ward, 9,000 in the 12th, and 18,000 in the 13th, compared with 40,000 and 50,000 in other sections of the city.

In the 8th ward, the Woodlawn and Chatham districts, birth rates are lower than in the wards where foreign born residents predominate, Dr. Kegel said.

High Death Rate in First.

In the downtown district and near south side, included in the First ward, the birth rate is the lowest in the city, and the infant death rate extremely high. Dr. Kegel explains that the Negroes, Italians, and Chinese, who predominate in this district, suffer great losses in infant mortality and have a large rooming house population where comparatively few babies are born. In this ward the birth rate is 8.5 per 1,000, and the death rate 88.88 per 1,000 births.

The stockyards district of the 13th ward has one of the largest infant death rates in the city. That ward has a birth rate of 15.4 and a death rate of 113.43 per 1,000 births.

The 14th ward, also in the stockyards district but somewhat farther removed, has a birth rate of 18.7 and an infant death rate of 96.40.

In the wards of denser population, the 17th ward has 23,000 per square mile, but, since it is the residence of families of adequate income, has a low infant mortality. True to form, however, the Americans produce only 14.5 babies per 1,000 population. The death rate is 54.13 per 1,000 births, slightly less than the average figure.

Few Deaths in Hyde Park.

The wealthier classes living in the hotel and apartment sections of Hyde Park, although they are crowded 23,000 to a square mile, observe modern hygienic methods and have a small death rate of 50.20. Births in this district are 14.2 per 1,000.

In Englewood, a district containing Jewish, Dutch, and Negro residents, the infant death rate is brought up by the presence of the latter, according to Dr. Kegel, while the birth rate is comparatively high because of the presence of the Dutch and Jewish residents. More than 14 babies per 1,000 population were born there last year, while the total of 61.06 per 1,000 born died in infancy.

In the more congested district of the 11th ward where 30,000 Germans, Poles, and Lithuanians live per square mile, both the birth and death rates are higher than in the sections populated by native Americans. There 19.5 births per 1,000 and 74.04 deaths per 1,000 births were recorded.

The most congested districts of the south side, occupied almost entirely by Negroes, are the Second, Third and Fourth wards, where housing is probably the worst in the city. In the Fourth ward, 45,000 are crowded per square mile. The birth rate is 12.3 and the death rate 74.19.

Among the 48,000 residents of the Third ward there were 16.9 births per 1,000 last year and 82.56 deaths per 1,000 births. The largest infant death rate is found in the Second ward, as well as an extremely small birth rate. In that ward there are 54,000 residents per square mile, 11.5 births per 1,000 population, and the enormous death rate of 125.55 per 1,000 births.

TRAFFIC SIGNALS ASKED ON STATE FROM 69TH TO 79TH

Three south side civic organizations are urging the installation of traffic signals at every intersection on State street between 69th and 79th streets. Aroused by the frequent accidents on the street, members of these organizations assert that stop and go lights are the only solution to the problem.

The organizations urging this improvement are the East Hamilton Park Improvement association, the South Park Manor Improvement association, and the Park Manor Improvement association. The presidents of these organizations will appoint committees this week to meet with Ald. William D. Meyering [8th] and Ald. O. E. Northfup [19th] to urge them to introduce an ordinance in the city council which will order the immediate installation of the lights.

DESCRIBES GAGS RACKETEERS TRY ON HOUSEWIVES

Business Bureau Finds Picture Game Common.

BY THOMAS WREN.

While some high pressure racketeers are busy with ideas for defrauding Chicago business men through worthless advertising space in publications that never appear and soliciting donations for charities which do not exist, others of their followers work on the gullibility of Chicago housewives.

FLINT GRINNELL.

This announcement is made by Flint Grinnell of the Better Business bureau, which is engaged in an expose of all classes of racketeers. He said there are approximately seventy-five of them now operating various bogus rackets in the city.

"One scheme used by the high pressure gentry is to coax the dollars out of the housewife's budget in the well known picture enlarging scheme," said Grinnell.

Give 'Em All Lucky Numbers.

"An agent appears at the door and exhibits a handful of envelopes and suggests that one be drawn. A selection is made, and it is the lucky envelope, and the housewife hands over a picture for enlargement without cost.

"The housewife signs a slip of paper and later to her amazement learns she has to pay an exorbitant price for the enlargement of a picture which often is not worthy of a frame. However, she has signed a contract and must abide by its terms. All envelopes contain the lucky numbers, so-called."

Grinnell says that probably no home has escaped the "college student magazine racket," which has been worked throughout the country.

"These solicitors are supposed to be young persons working for a scholarship at some college, and if they can procure the largest number of magazine subscriptions they will be awarded the prize," said Grinnell.

Gray-Haired College Boys.

"Many of these college boys are gray of hair and don't resemble in the least the average college student.

"At this time of the year there are usually truckfuls of what appear to be sailormen roving about the city, with a cargo of furs.

"One of them generally approaches a prospective customer and, after looking furtively from side to side, announces in a subdued tone that he is a sailor on leave and has been able to smuggle in some fine furs.

"From under his blouse he pulls a pelt and holds up to sight what appears to be a fairly good piece of fur. He quotes a price that seems cheap. Later the purchaser learns the fur is that of either cat or dog that has been 'doctored' and that the price was exorbitant."

Grinnell said the men are not sailors and the furs not smuggled. He declared the racket has been worked from coast to coast and from the great lakes to the Gulf of Mexico.

Women Peddle Fake Lace.

"It is interesting," he said, "to find that the women traveling with the clan represent themselves as poor immigrant women, who have just arrived in the country and through dire necessity are forced to dispose of lovely lace heirlooms, which they had brought from the old country.

"These so-called heirlooms are purchased by the fakers at wholesale prices from manufacturers in Cincinnati, O., and other eastern cities.

"Probably the most vicious racket aimed at the housewife today is what is called the homework scheme. Operators of these rackets advertise for inexperienced women to do light sewing, embroidery, painting of post cards, etc., at home. These fakers lead the housewife to believe she will be able to remain at home and also earn additional money.

"Upon answering the advertising the applicant learns she is expected to send in a sum of money for instructions. If this is done she is asked for additional money for samples. When she sends in her work the package bounces back from the postoffice with the statement, 'Moved: Left no address.'"

Oldest Is Charity Appeal.

Grinnell states that one of the oldest schemes for talking women out of their money and into the possession of worthless goods is the well known charity appeal racket. Perpetrators of this racket, he explained, represent themselves as working for some charitable institution. The latter is usually placed far away from the town in which the racket men operate to prevent an immediate checking of the statements.

"Many Chicago women have fallen victims to the lure of possessing encyclopedias without cost," said Grinnell.

"The purveyor of these books approaches his customer with the glad news that she had been recommended to him as a woman of fine repute and a person who will appreciate his proposition. It is the old game of contract signing and after it is done the book purchaser learns she has to pay $62.50 upward for some loose leaf service."

VOICE of the SOUTH SIDE

CAN'T PRONOUNCE DEVER.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—I'm not trying to detract from former Mayor Dever, but for heaven's sake why call the new boulevard Dever drive? No one pronounced his name right while he was mayor and had a chance to drum into us the correct pronunciation, and if they call the boulevard Dever there'll be some riots, bigger and better than the race riots of years ago, with the cleaver clique on one hand and the clever gang on the other. Give us simple names that every one knows how to pronounce. Why not Plain boulevard? SIMPLE GUY.

ANOTHER HUBBARD.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—I agree with Mrs. Dean about naming that new boulevard Hubbard road all right, but not for Elijah K. Hubbard. Gurdon S. Hubbard, his brother and a first citizen of Chicago in many ways, is the one who should be honored, to my notion. He built the first brick building in Chicago and he donated its first fire engine and was the first meat packer here, too. Call it Hubbard road, but for Gurdon Hubbard, please. OLD SETTLER.

CALL IT CANNON DRIVE.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—I second "Windsor Park's" proposal that the new boulevard be named Cannon drive, "Uncle Joe" Cannon, for half a century one of the great figures in the national government, whose service honored Illinois, whose voice always spoke out for the convictions behind it, unafraid of the faddists and the reformers—and Illinois and Chicago have done nothing adequate to perpetuate his name. Besides, the name is simple and short. Let's call it Cannon drive. STOGIE.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Why all the discussion about a name? If the south park commission is good enough to construct a boulevard, which residents in the vicinity of the proposed route say will mean so much to the future development of that section of the city, let park officials call the new road Southeastern boulevard or any other name they like. What difference does it make, anyway? I say give us the boulevard and to the devil with the name! T. W. S.

BEGIN ADDITION TO FIELDHOUSE IN RIDGE PARK

Work on the $125,000 addition to the Ridge Park fieldhouse, 96th street and Longwood drive, was started Monday. The addition, which will include new locker rooms, club rooms, lodge hall, garage, carpenter shop, auditorium, stage, gymnasium and swimming pool, is expected to be ready in about eight months, according to Fred Dieffenbach, president of the Ridge park board.

Mr. Dieffenbach pointed out that all of the exterior work on the new structure will be completed before cold weather sets in, so that work on the building will not be stopped throughout the winter months.

While no serious thought has been given to the idea, Mr. Dieffenbach believes that the Ridge park board will sponsor a fitting celebration to mark the completion and formal opening of the new addition next spring.

YOUNG MINISTER MAKES GUIDING YOUTH HIS IDEAL

St. Luke's Lutheran Builds First Unit.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

With the trend of population away from the rural sections and toward the great cities, church pioneering has, in proportion, shifted the setting for much of its activities. An instance is to be found in St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran church, 77th street and Constance avenue. In a young and fast growing neighborhood, the young church has a young pastor in the Rev. Theodore E. Conrad. The congregation is made up largely of young people.

THE REV. T. E. CONRAD.

The church, starting three and a half years ago in a section given over to new brick apartments and homes, has developed from a handful of persons meeting in a rented hall to the point where a model parish house—as the first unit of the plant in prospect—has been erected at the rear of the Constance avenue lot.

The $50,000 parish house, dedicated in April, 1928, has been so planned that when the church is built later, the present unit will—by the tearing out of a wall—dovetail perfectly with the house of worship. Meantime, considering that the structure is to be part of the combination building, the congregation has succeeded remarkably well in providing a place of churchly appointments and appearance.

Chapel in Present Structure.

The completed first unit of the plant consists of two floors and a basement. The first floor is given over entirely to a chapel. In the basement there is provision for the Sunday school and social activities. The second floor houses an apartment used for the parsonage and also includes a large room for the use of the primary department of the Sunday school.

Born at Elgin, Ill., son of the Rev. T. A. Conrad, now secretary-treasurer of the Augustana Pension and Aid fund, the leader of St. Luke's church finds himself in a field for which he has been enthusiasm.

The Rev. Mr. Conrad, following his ordination at Des Moines, Ia., came to the pastorate about a year ago. He is a graduate of Gustavus Adolphus college, St. Peter, Minn., and of Augustana Theological seminary. Mrs. Conrad is also a graduate of Gustavus Adolphus college.

Seeks to Be Spiritual Home.

The policy of the church, according to its pastor, is "to provide a true church home for the community, caring for the spiritual needs of those with whom it comes in contact.

"We believe," says the Rev. Mr. Conrad, "in the teaching of creed in order that we may know exactly what we believe. Our formulation of that creed is attained by a summary of the outstanding works of the Triune God, as revealed to men in the Holy Bible. We have no use for a conception of divine truths as they may come from human minds alone, in which it is held that every man's opinion is correct, however contradictory these opinions may be among themselves.

"A feature which we particularly stress in such indoctrination is in regard to the religious education of youth. We feel that the most important part of that education is cared for by requiring youth to attend divine services. We find that the church that is solid in its principles of rearing youth is the church that is respected and loved as the years pass by."

Sunday School Started with Two.

A canvas of the Southfield district was made in 1922 by the Rev. D. A. Lofgren, field missionary for the Illinois conference of the Evangelical Lutheran Augustana synod. The first service was held in 1924 in the chapel of the Augustana Home for the Aged, 76th street and Stony Island avenue. The Sunday school was started with only two children—Carl Johnson and Evelyn Benson—enrolled.

Leonard F. Nelson was the first Sunday school superintendent. He was succeeded in 1925 by Raymond J. Lewis, who is still in charge.

For a time Gilbert Bengston served as student pastor. The South Shore Mission society was organized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hedstrand, 7855 East End avenue, for the purpose of supporting the services being held. On Nov. 10, 1925, the congregation was organized with thirty communicant members as St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran church. Services were held at a bungalow at 1810 East 77th street until April, 1928.

Pastor at Post a Year.

William Siegel of Rock Island, Ill., served as student pastor during the summer of 1926. Cecil G. Johnson, another student pastor, served during the following winter. July 1, 1927, the Rev. William Siegel returned as the first ordained pastor of the congregation. Failing health caused him to resign in August, 1928. He was succeeded by the Rev. Mr. Conrad.

The St. Luke's church board is composed of these deacons: Raymond J. Lewis, Warren E. Hall, C. H. Engelbrecht, Carl Hultquist, G. Felldin, and C. A. Skafgaard; trustees: John F. Nelson, Harry Nelson, C. Roy Nylen, August Kreas, William Barfknecht, and Adolph Kirbach.

William Barfknecht is church treasurer; Myrtle Wallin, financial secretary; C. Roy Nylen, organist.

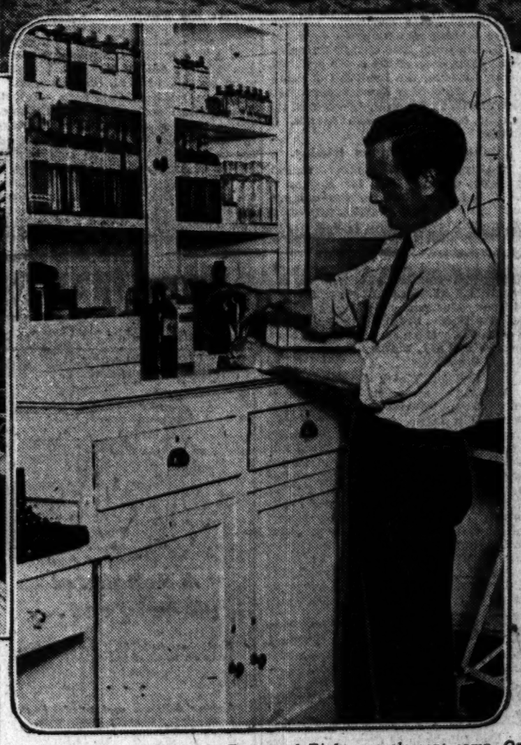
BEATING BACK TO HEALTH AT TRIBUNE-FORTY AND EIGHT CAMP



The flag under which they fought more than ten years ago floats above the war veterans at The Tribune-Forty and Eight convalescent camp at Orland, Ill. Soldiers, a flag, and sunset mean the impressive ceremony of retreat, although the veterans at the camp execute the flag lowering with informality that's a far cry from attention, and, perhaps, inspection. Pigs mean pastime and pork to the camp veterans. John Miles, D. S. C., is at the left in the picture, and Nicholas Hilaridis is with him. In the picture below the boys are taking it easy in the open air and sunshine. Left to right: Sidney F. Love, superintendent of the camp; Chris Webster, O. B. Kennedy, J. Boland, E. Rickhoff, and C. Belinka.

Veterans of The Tribune-Forty and Eight convalescent camp, Orland, Ill., are shown in the top picture working among the flowers and vegetables of their own flourishing garden. The chickens, like the pigs, serve a double purpose. In the chicken yard they mean fascinating work. On the table they mean something else again. Philip Doyle is in the foreground of the chicken yard picture and O. B. Kennedy is in the rear. Below: Sidney F. Love, camp superintendent, at the medicine chest.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

BY FRED PASLEY.

EDWARD R. CONRAD of 1222 West 83d street and prominent in Beverly Hills fraternal circles has not been sitting in at a single pinochle session despite the fact Mrs. C. is away on a two months' vacation. Ed has boils. The unsuspecting housewives have been singing their praises of Ed early and late to their disgruntled husbands, who admit the affliction has increased Ed's standing in the community.

Edward C. Zimmerman, who holds the world's record of 2 hours and 20 minutes from St. Joe to Chicago by automobile, is in the market for a new straw hat. It may be sent charges prepaid to his home address, 5448 Cornell avenue. The size is 7¼ and he prefers a striped crown band. Zimmie, chief engineer of Our Town pump, drove up to Manistee, Mich., last Saturday and left his new Dockstader at Duncan kelly in a beanery in Holland. He advises that this offer to present him with a new straw will not be good after Sept. 1.

LAKE GENEVA has been blessed this season by the presence of Miss Irene McEnroe of 8549 Carpenter street. Miss McEnroe is the popular and talented math. teacher at Carl Schurz High school. Her proclivity for mathematics has enabled her to improve her golf score at the Wisconsin resort and it is expected that any student who can chat golf will have a pleasant time of it in her class next season.

Jack Kessel of 8135 Phillips avenue may be the dignified and efficient president of Kessel Bros., 4034 South Michigan avenue, but when he's on his vacation he is known as Jack the Berrypicker. He spent a couple of weeks in Michigan and vied with the professionals in the raspberry patch. Jack is a fast and furious picker and believes that he broke a picking record for Berrien county. Anyhow, his sunburned arms and neck have earned him the sobriquet of Happy Jack the Picker, and, although he handed out boxes of hand picked berries, his friends handed him back the raspberries for getting so tanned.

WALTER J. KRUEGER of 7915 South Michigan avenue, who doubles as the assistant cashier of the Cottage Grove State bank, 75th street and Cottage Grove avenue, is proud and happy these bright days. In recognition of his efficient services, the directors of that institution have created a bond and mortgage department, making Walter its manager. When it comes to matters such as bonds and investments, of which we unhappily know nothing, we recommend that you see Walt. He is one of the inventors of safe and sane financing. No more will he be assistant cashiering all over the place but will devote his energies and talents exclusively to his new department.

Charlie Blake writes that it has been a long time between drinks and that he is now running his father's monument business and that during July he sold a $200,000 mausoleum to William C. Grunow of the Grigsby-Grunow company, the radio manufacturers. It will be erected in Forest Home cemetery, Forest Park, and will be "the largest, finest and most costly mausoleum ever erected in the middle west, with the exception of that of Judge Elbert H. Gary." Below Charley's signature on the last page of the letter we note the steno marks, CEB-CRI., so it looks as if Chas. is a successful business man in a really serious way, at last.

WEARING a healthy and most becoming sun tan, E. G. Swanson, vice president and cashier of the South Side Trust and Savings bank, has returned from a delightful month's vacation in northern Wisconsin. The sparkling streams and lakes of the vicinity offered a great treat to Mr. Swanson, who spent many happy moments with his rod and reel. Dressed in old clothes, he would lie for hours on a shady bank or in a boat, waiting for the fish to nibble. Then he would pull them in—and how he pulled them in (according to his story). When he was not fishing Mr. Swanson was playing golf, and has so improved his game that he boasts that he is ready to take on anybody who will give him a reasonable handicap.

Auburn Park Lions to Have Outing at Jackson Park Crib

The first meeting of the fall and winter season of the Auburn Park Lions club will be an all day outing at the Jackson park crib, four miles out in the lake, on Sept. 4, David Nelson, president, announced yesterday. Fishing will be the major entertainment of the day, to be followed by a chicken dinner in the evening.

Chicago Lawn Women Plan for Garden Show

(Picture on page three.)

"Smile and you will live to be a hundred."

This is the advice given to young people of today by Mrs. Ara Dennis Burbank, who celebrated her 91st birthday anniversary last week at the home of her niece, Mrs. George A. Neafus, 5304 Cornell avenue.

"I have every hope of living to be 100 years old," Mrs. Burbank said, "for I will continue to smile and laugh. I take things as they come and never wear myself out by worrying."

Proves Her Youth and Age.

"To show you how old I am, let me tell you that when I was 8 years old my father placed me on his shoulder to see soldiers marching back from the Mexican war. When I was 17 I was chosen to present the company of Union soldiers which was organized in our town with a flag on the eve of their departure for the front during the civil war.

"To show you how young I am, let me tell you that I thoroughly approve of short skirts for the girls of today and I like the independent natures they have adopted by doing the things the men in my youth did. However, I do not approve of young girls smoking and drinking. Not because I am old fashioned in that respect, but because I do not believe that young men should smoke or drink, either, because those habits will affect their health."

According to Mrs. Neafus, her aunt reads the best current books, attends a movie at least once a week, and does fancy sewing.

"All my friends enjoy my aunt's company," Mrs. Neafus said, "because she is always smiling and telling funny stories about her experiences."

Wins Prizes at Bridge.

Mrs. Burbank is an excellent bridge player and often wins prizes at bridge parties. Since her nephew is a stock broker, she takes a keen interest in the daily happenings at the stock market, often defending her favorite stocks.

Mrs. Burbank keeps up a correspondence with many friends of her girlhood, all of whom are past 75 years old.

Mrs. Burbank was born in Niles, Mich. Hiram Ladd Burbank, whom she married in 1864, was a cousin of the great botanist, Luther Burbank.

Fred Schumann Wins Cup in Convention Golf Match

Fred Schumann, 4428½ Drexel boulevard, has added another silver loving cup to his collection of golf trophies. This prize he won at the Illinois Cleaners and Dyers' state convention held in Decatur, Ill. The cup was awarded to Mr. Schumann for his score of 102 in the class B qualifying match and a golf sweater and hose set was given him as eighth prize in the finals on his score of 104.

Church Group Meets.

Members of the St. Cyril Altar and Rosary society held their regular monthly meeting Thursday evening in the church auditorium, 64th street and Dante avenue. Mrs. Fred W. Laenhardt, 6436 Dorchester avenue, president, was chairman.

WENTWORTH AVE. HONORS MAYOR, TALL AND JOLLY

Long John for 50 Years a Picturesque Figure.

This article is the tenth of a series explaining the sources of the names of streets and suburbs of the south side.

There was once a citizen of Chicago who was a continuous delight to newspaper men, for he was one of those rare personages who are never failing sources of news. The fact that he managed and later owned one of the early newspapers of the city did not seem to make his name or deeds any less desirable for print in rival papers. John Wentworth was his name, and it was for him that Wentworth avenue, extending south from 22d street to 84th street, about a quarter mile west of State street, was named.

In many respects "Long John" Wentworth was to Chicago in the '40s and '50s what Mayor Jimmy Walker is to New York today. His good nature, humor, and kindliness made him universally popular, yet he was able to command and hold respect while every one from judges to messenger boys called him "Long John." The nickname was applied to him even after he became a congressman and mayor. Standing 6 feet 6 inches in height, he would have been a noticeable figure anywhere without his other qualities. He was in demand for every occasion, for if "Long John" were present the success of the affair was assured.

Owned Land Where Street Is.

The man himself was so much more important than the street named for him that his individual history rather overshadows that of the street. Yet it is known that while accumulating power and influence John Wentworth also accumulated land and wealth. Included in his property was a large piece of unoccupied prairie south of 22d street and about one mile west of the then straggling Cottage Grove avenue. It was known as the "Long John tract," and when part of it became the Union stockyards and the Dexter trotting park, in the '60s, a street was opened through this strip of land, beginning at 22d street, and appropriately named Wentworth avenue. From time to time the street has been lengthened until today it extends to 84th street and has on it one of the important surface car lines of the south side.

Following his graduation from Dartmouth college, John Wentworth came to Chicago from his home town of Sandwich, N. H., to take over the management of the Chicago Democrat in 1836. He purchased the paper and turned it into a daily in 1840, thus owning the first daily Democratic newspaper in the northwest.

Elected to Congress in 1844.

His political career began shortly afterward, for he was elected to congress in 1844 and served two terms until 1848, when he was defeated for renomination. However, he returned to congress for one term in 1853. In 1857 he was elected mayor of Chicago, and again in 1860.

Following his two terms as mayor he was elected a delegate to the state constitutional convention and also a member of the board of education. He was appointed police commissioner in 1863, and in 1880 served as vice chairman of the Republican national convention that nominated Garfield for President. His death, at the age of 73, occurred in 1888, yet even today John Wentworth is remembered and spoken of as Chicago's most celebrated citizen as well as most popular man.

OUTLYING AREAS JOIN FORCES IN TRACTION FIGHT

Demand Extensions Be Specified.

Protection of the interests of outlying districts of Chicago in the settlement of the traction problem is the aim of the Property Owners' Traction association, a group including leading business men, bankers, and property holders from all parts of the south side.

The first meeting of the new organization was attended Monday by more than 100 south side business leaders. Officers are president, E. H. Burke; treasurer, Joseph Flaherty; secretary, Edward Qualkinbush; and vice presidents representing the various sections of the south side: W. C. Tegtmeier, Englewood; Col. H. C. Kellogg, Clearing; Charles S. Ruby, South Chicago; Edward J. Nelson, Beverly Hills; J. A. Malooly, Woodlawn; G. A. Kluge, Stony Island; C. A. Evans, Hyde Park; Ben Stevenson, Chatham; and H. H. Baum, central manufacturing district.

Asserts Tangle Hurts Business.

"The people of Chicago feel that the present inadequate transportation system is not only stunting the growth of the city, but is hurting business in general," Mr. Burke said yesterday. "They want to see the traction proposition taken out of politics, and run as it should be, on a strictly business basis. Furthermore, they want to see the traction problem settled now.

"We do not favor any particular company or companies. We are not sponsoring any particular extension or extensions of the surface lines, elevateds, buses, or subways. However, we do expect to see a comprehensive system of extensions both on surface, bus and elevated lines given to the people, the streets and routes of these extensions to be consistent with the growth of Chicago.

"We further expect the city council and traction companies to agree on a reasonable franchise that will be fair to both companies and the people of Chicago.

"If such a fair and reasonable franchise is offered in a referendum, this organization will do everything in its power to help acquaint the public and particularly the business interests of Chicago with the conditions set up in the franchise, and will use all its influence to bring out every possible vote in favor of such a franchise. On the other hand, should a franchise be offered which is not fair to companies and the people, we will use every force at our command to defeat it."

Demand Naming of Extensions.

The statement of purpose adopted by the new group at its first meeting includes as one of the planks the definite assurance prior to granting the franchise as to where, when, what and how extensions are to be made.

The organization also favors continuance of the present rate of fare until definite consolidation of the companies and until a transit commission appointed by the mayor will fix the rate. It recommends use of the city traction fund impartially for the benefit of all sections of the city.

The following are members of the executive committee: Mr. Burke, Mr. Baum, Col. Kellogg, T. A. McGuiry, Mr. Kluge, N. J. Dougherty, Mr. Flaherty, Mr. Ruby, Mr. Stevenson, Mr. Qualkinbush, E. R. Engel, Edward Weinberg, T. A. Rooney, Mr. Tegtmeier, Charles C. Cross, E. L. Bergren, Mr. Malooly.

John B. Anderson, J. A. Woodrow, Frank Davis, Z. E. Smith, M. A. Hoffman, Carl A. Rune, John T. Hall, Daniel J. O'Connor, E. N. Hyde, Dr. J. J. Sugrue, Frank A. Flavin, Fred E. Downey, Henning E. Johnson, Joseph Heinsen, Mr. Evans, J. B. Clarke, Harry McDonagh, James Galligan, A. J. Hoss, P. W. Barrett.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR OF ENGLEWOOD TO HOLD CIRCUS

Proceeds to Send Drill Team to State Meeting.

Members of the Englewood commandery, Knights Templar, have completed arrangements for a circus week at White City, 63d street and South Park avenue, starting Monday, Aug. 26, and ending Saturday night of that week.

Arrangements are being made to accommodate 10,000 people at the two daily performances throughout the week. The program will include everything that one sees in the large circuses throughout the country. Side shows, menagerie, parades, and aerial stunts will be the feature attractions.

Hold Popularity Contest.

In connection with the circus week the commandery will sponsor a popularity contest for the young women of Engelwood. "Lady Ideal" will be the title given to the winner and in addition she will receive an automobile.

Many nominations for this contest have already been made by local banks, business concerns, neighborhood hospitals and civic and commercial organizations throughout the community.

Frank M. Hallenbeck is serving as general chairman of the affair and temporary headquarters have been established at 6919 Halsted street. J. E. Irving is general manager of the circus.

Send Team to Peoria.

Proceeds from the sale of tickets for the circus will be used to defray the expense of sending the commandery's 100 man drill team and 75 piece band to the 73d annual encampment of the grand commandery, Knights Templar of Illinois, at Peoria, Sept. 9 and 10.

Those already entered in the "Lady Ideal" contest are: Miss Elsie Borring, 7919 Yale avenue, representing the Bain banks; Miss Fern Klings, representing the Masonic lodges of Blue Island; Mrs. Jeanette Maccolm, 1529 East 73d street, representing Onward chapter, No. 877, O. E. S.; Mrs. Irene Ahrens, 1743 East 67th street, representing the Acacia Furniture company; Mrs. Ida Wortendyke, 7552 Harvard avenue, representing the Commonwealth Trust and Savings bank; Miss Florence McKay, 10250 Wood street, representing the First National Bank of Englewood; Miss Gertrude Makee, 435 West 65th street, representing the Mayo Photograph studio; Miss Geraldine Wasson, 4600 Sheridan road; Miss Margaret O'Connor, 4942 Winthrop avenue; Miss Izett Murray, 5404 Lincoln street, representing McKinley chapter, No. 574, O. E. S.; Mrs. Caroline Bueschel, 6006 Richmond avenue, representing the Englewood chapter, No. 731, O. E. S.; Mrs. Goldie Shoup, 6103 Troy street, representing Compass chapter, No. 905, O. E. TINY SPLASHERS' PICTURES WIN PRIZES

Mrs. Charles Hendricks, 6341 Woodlawn avenue, this week won the first prize of $5 in The Tribune's play picture contest for amateur photographers of the south side. Her picture (below) shows Betty Hendricks and Marjorie Nortman at Jackson park beach. "A Little Bit of Sunshine," showing Shirley Alma Horst (right), won the second prize of $3 for Mrs. Alma Horst, 2442 East 75th street. The young lady in the center is Helen Aitchison, 2 years old. For this picture the third prize of $2 was awarded to Mrs. Margaret Aitchison, 6840 Perry avenue. An extra prize of $2 was awarded to Mrs. Will Rhodes, 6128 University avenue, for a picture of Thomas Lee Rhodes trying to make up his mind whether to wade into the lake.

CAN'T PRONOUNCE DEVER.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—I'm not trying to detract from former Mayor Dever, but for heaven's sake—why call the new boulevard Dever drive? No one pronounced his name right while he was mayor and had a chance to drum into us the correct pronunciation, and if they call the boulevard Dever there'll be some riots, bigger and better than the race riots of years ago, with the cleaver clique on one hand and the clever gang on the other. Give us simple names that every one knows how to pronounce. Why not Plain boulevard? SIMPLE GUY.

ANOTHER HUBBARD.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—I agree with Mrs. Dean about naming that new boulevard Hubbard road all right, but not for Elijah K. Hubbard. Gurdon S. Hubbard, his brother and a first citizen of Chicago in many ways, is the one who should be honored, to my notion. He built the first brick building in Chicago and he donated its first fire engine and was the first meat packer here, too. Call it Hubbard road, but for Gurdon Hubbard, please. OLD SETTLER.

CALL IT CANNON DRIVE.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—I second "Windsor Park's" proposal that the new boulevard be named Cannon drive. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, for half a century one of the great figures in the national government, whose service honored Illinois, whose voice always spoke out for the convictions behind it, unafraid of the faddists and the reformers—and Illinois and Chicago have done nothing adequate to perpetuate his name. Besides, the name is simple and short. Let's call it Cannon drive. STOGIE.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Why all the discussion about a name? If the south park commission is good enough to construct a boulevard, which residents in the vicinity of the proposed route say will mean so much to the future development of that section of the city, let park officials call the new road Southeastern boulevard or any other name they like. What difference does it make, anyway? I say give us the boulevard and to the devil with the name! T. W. S.

Consent to Comfort Station.

Property owners in the vicinity of 63d street and Cottage Grove avenue have finally consented to allow the department of public works to erect a comfort station at that intersection, according to an announcement last week by Joseph Moody, engineer for the department.

PLAN OUTING FOR 200 BOY SCOUTS OF SOUTH SHORE

Leaders Arrange Busy Week End in Camps.

More than 200 Boy Scouts of the south shore district plan to attend a camporee at Camp Kiwanis-South, in the forest preserves near Palos park, next Saturday and Sunday. The outing is in charge of Field Scout Executive Richard L. Van Horn.

Dr. J. W. Russell, chairman of the activities committee, has announced a barbecue feast Saturday, followed in the evening by a campfire program. E. U. Goodman and Gerald Shipman, Scout executives of the south side, will aid in directing the two days of camping. Chief Forester Ransom Kennicott and President Anton J. Cermak of the county board have been invited to attend.

Outdoor Worship on Sunday.

Sunday morning outdoor church services will be held for Scouts of all faiths, according to the committee. A swimming meet Sunday afternoon, in which almost all the Scouts will take part, will be the feature of the outing.

Present Water Carnival.

A water carnival was held by Scouts of the south central district at Fuller park, 49th street and Princeton avenue, Friday night before an audience of more than 2,000. Flood lights illuminated the pool, which was in the center of a large circus ring erected by Park Director William M. Collins.

Included in the program were lifesaving demonstrations by an expert of the American Red Cross; stunt swimming by Gene Lawrie, scoutmaster of Troop 447, former assistant swimming coach at the University of Illinois; and water sport demonstrations by sea scouts of Troop 400, which man the vessel Kearsarge.

The program was arranged by Ray W. Quisenberry and Earl A. Pulliam, assistant field Scout executives, with the cooperation of Mr. Collins.

Woodlawn Kiwanians Hear Lecturer Speak on Canada

"The Romance of Canada" was the subject of an address by Capt. J. Milton State at a meeting of the Woodlawn Kiwanis club Wednesday at the Wedgewood hotel, 64th street and Woodlawn avenue. Earl W. Keath, 6224 Greenwood avenue, president of the organization, was chairman.

PUSH PLANS FOR CELEBRATION OF 71ST ST. PAVING

Fete Discussed by Triangle Improvement Body.

William J. Hubrich, president of the Stony Island Business Men's association, and Eugene J. Mooney, president of the South Woodlawn chamber of commerce, were the principal speakers at an open air meeting of the Triangle Improvement association Friday night at 73d street and Greenwood avenue. Both speakers stressed the importance of the community improvements.

Plans for an extensive celebration to mark the completion of the paving and widening of 71st street, from Cottage Grove avenue to Stony Island avenue, which will be sponsored by all civic organizations in the vicinity of 71st street, were also discussed.

Ready in Six Weeks.

A committee headed by Lawrence Termaat, president of the Triangle club, and Mr. Mooney held a meeting with members of the board of local improvements and were assured that the 71st street improvement would be completed within six weeks.

Arvid E. Peterson, president of the Triangle State bank, is chairman of the arrangement committee. According to Mr. Peterson, Richard W. Wolfe, commissioner of public works, will probably cut the tape which will officially open the new road to automobile traffic.

Officials to Attend.

Presidents of the civic organizations, which will cooperate to make the celebration a success, will speak. Other speakers will be Ald. William D. Meyering [8th], H. H. Haylett, managing vice president of the greater south side chamber of commerce; Andrew C. Metzger, county commissioner, and Mr. Wolfe.

While residents of the community hold a parade and street dance the evening of the celebration, members of the civic organizations and south side officials will hold a banquet in one of the leading south side hotels.

To commemorate the 437th anniversary of the discovery of America an elaborate celebration will be staged by the Chicago Knights of Columbus on Columbus day, Oct. 12, at the Chicago Stadium.

FRANK J. ENRIGHT.

Arrangements for the demonstration are being supervised by Frank J. Enright, president of the Chicago chapter of the Knights of Columbus. North side K. of C. councils and their grand knights have been assigned an important part in the staging of the Columbus day celebration.

Members of the following south side councils will be included in the pageant cast: Archbishop McHale, Archbishop Quigley, Auburn Park, Blue Island, Calumet, Chicago, Chicago Heights, Daniel Dowling, De La Salle, Englewood, Father Peres, Fort Dearborn, Garcia Mareno, Genoa, Illiana, La Rabida, Lemont, Leo XIII., Loyola-Hyde Park, Madonna, Pinta, Ridge, St. Augustine, St. James, St. Joseph's, St. Philip Neri, St. Rita, San Salvador, Santa Maria, and Thomas Aquinas.

South Side Grand Knights Are Active.

Michael J. Howlett, past grand knight of Americus council, has been appointed general chairman. He will be assisted by the following grand knights of south side councils:

William T. Mugg,	Daniel F. Murphy,
Albert W. Staniewski,	Everett J. Starschak,
Joseph W. Lentz,	John J. Ruberry,
James F. Kane,	Austin B. O'Malley,
Stephen J. Kelly,	William A. Reich,
Walter A. Schaefer,	Michael L. Heinen,
Edward J. Ryan,	E. L. Wilson,
Thomas Ridley,	Frank J. Small,
Barry C. Morton,	William J. Rossbach,
Thomas M. Kennedy,	Peter J. McNaughton,
George E. Ramsden,	Thomas J. Flanagan,
Richard P. O'Connor,	Donald Grace,
Thomas J. Whalen,	Martin R. Quinn,
Alex F. McDonald,	Joseph Rooney,
Bernard A. Conlon,	John P. Kilboy,
William D. O'Hara,	John F. Keefe.

The celebration will consist of a massive pageant depicting the landing of Columbus and a speaker of national prominence will deliver the principal address. It is expected that approximately 25,000 Chicago knights and their friends will attend the stadium celebration.

Martin H. Carmody, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, will deliver an address on Columbus. Many other novel and entertaining attractions will complete the programs.

Stresses Significance of Day.

Several meetings have already been held by the grand knights and district deputies of the Knights of Columbus in Cook county and at one of these meetings State Deputy Edward Houlihan said in discussing Columbus day plans:

"The 12th of October is our day and we should celebrate it in a real Knights of Columbus way.

"Discovery day sums up and holds in mind the most tremendous story of human accomplishment. Other things that men have done for mankind are puny compared with the gift to civilization of half of the earth's surface. Measured by its contribution to the opportunities of the human race, it is universal, and while we simply accept it as we do the beneficences of Providence, let it not be said in derogation of our gratitude that in the enjoyment of this gift we have forgotten the giver. It is only befitting that this year the greatest tribute should be paid to our noble discoverer."

SAND SCULPTORS OF SOUTH PARKS VIE FOR RIBBONS

Preliminaries, Finals Set for This Week.

The plans for the south parks sand modeling contest have been completed. For team competition in this contest there will be two divisions. The playground division for girls 10 years old and younger and the girls' division for girls from 10 to 13 years old. Six contestants will be allowed on the team of each division and will be allowed 45 minutes to model any design the instructor selects.

Both Contests Tuesday.

The parks will be divided into two sections. The first section includes Mark White square, Armour square, McKinley park, Sherman park and Gage park. This section will contest at Hardin square at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. The second section includes Fuller park, Cornell square, Hardin square, Davis square and Marquette playground. The contest will be held in Ogden park at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The winners in the two sections will meet in the finals Friday at a place to be selected later.

All teams of each section will be placed in a sand pit at the same time, each team being assigned a space twelve feet wide. In both divisions the use of a watering can, with water, will be allowed.

Park Instructors in Charge.

The competition will be left to the care of the park instructors, who will be allowed to accompany their team at the competition, but will not be allowed to help or give suggestions to the contestants.

$859,000 PAVING JOBS APPROVED FOR SOUTH SIDE

Eleven Projects Will Be Finished by Spring.

South side street improvements estimated to cost $859,000 were confirmed in the county court during the last month, attorneys for the board of local improvements announced yesterday. The board will advertise for bids on the projects within a few weeks and all the work probably will be completed next spring.

The money will be spent for eleven paving jobs for which special assessments will be levied on south side property owners.

Chappell System Largest.

The largest improvement, known as the Chappel avenue system, will cost approximately $445,000. The following streets will be paved with concrete: Chappel avenue between 87th and 88th streets and 89th and 91st streets; Clyde, Merrill and Paxton avenues between 87th and 91st streets; 88th and 89th streets between Chappel and Paxton avenues; and 90th and 91st streets between Jeffery and Paxton avenues.

Approximately $130,000 will be expended in paving the following system of streets with asphalt: Merrill avenue between 87th street and the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad tracks; Clyde and Chappel avenues between 85th and 87th streets; 85th street between Jeffery avenue and the S., C. and S. railroad; 86th street between Jeffery and Merrill avenues.

Concrete paving of 62d street between Racine avenue and Halsted street will cost local property owners approximately $65,000.

Improvement of Morgan street between Vermont avenue and 129th street, and 129th street between Peoria street and the city limits will cost in the neighborhood of $49,000, according to estimates of engineers for the board. A concrete pavement will be laid.

Avenue E To Cost $48,000.

Avenue E will be paved with concrete between 104th and 106th streets at an approximate cost of $48,000.

Approximately $42,000 will be spent to improve 89th street between Indiana and South Park avenues. Paving will be done with asphalt.

One hundred and ninth street will be paved with asphalt between avenue F and Ewing avenue at an approximate cost of $27,000; $16,900 will be spent for improving Home avenue with asphalt between Damen and Hilldale avenues; 113th street between Halsted street and Union avenue will be paved with asphalt at a cost of $14,000; $13,500 will be spent to pave 107th street between Buffalo and Greenbay avenues with asphalt at an approximate cost of $13,500; and improvement with asphalt of 106th street between Talman avenue and the Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks will cost $9,000.

OBJECTORS HALT MOVE TO REPAVE STRETCH OF 66TH

The proposed repaving of 66th street between Parnell avenue and Halsted street has been indefinitely postponed because of the presentation of a petition, signed by a majority of the property owners on the street, to the board of local improvements last week.

Ald. James G. Coyle [17th] announced that the street must remain in poor condition until another ordinance is passed ordering the repaving of the thoroughfare or until a majority of the property owners petition the board of local improvements for the improvement. Ald. Coyle asserted that if the work is done later, new foundation probably will be necessary.

Walter Woods, president of the Standard Material company, 607 West 66th street, one of the persons circulating the petition, asserted that it would be a waste of money to improve the street. He blamed former city officials for the present condition of the street.

"If we could get material at a fair price," Mr. Woods said, "we would not oppose the repaving of 66th street. But as it is, we would be greatly overcharged for it. The politicians waste the people's money."

WOODLAWN HAS THIRD POPULAR BRANCH LIBRARY

The Woodlawn branch of the Chicago public library had the third largest circulation of all branch libraries in the city for the month of July, Legler, the main west side library, and the Chicago Lawn branch were the only others from which more books were drawn.

Students from the University of Chicago use the Wooldawn branch more than any other in the city. It has a select collection of books sent from the main library, as well as a collection of its own, amounting to approximately 30,000 volumes. This branch also has a collection of bound magazines dating to 1921 which is valuable to the students for reference work.

It is the only branch library in the city that has an attendant busy all day at the information desk.

BRIDGE OPENING TO BE MARKED BY CIVIC FESTIVAL

Business men in the South Chicago district are making arrangements for an extensive celebration on Sept. 23 to mark the completion of the new 106th street bridge which crosses the Calumet river. At a meeting Monday at the East Side Community hall, Avenue L and 103d street, Robert Sullivan, city engineer, stated that everything would be done to assure the completion of the bridge by that date.

Nicholas J. Bohling, East Side contractor and builder, has been selected as general chairman in charge of arrangements. Mr. Bohling said every civic and business organization in the Calumet district is cooperating to make the affair a success.

"We are planning to make the dedication exercises an outstanding event, not only for the South Chicago district but for the entire city," Mr. Bohling explained. "The recent dedication of the Clark street bridge was an interesting and elaborate affair but we hope to make ours even greater."

South Siders Begin Trek Home from "Wild" West

The "call of the wild," which had lured so many south siders to Wyoming, New Mexico or Arizona, now shows symptoms of subsidence. Among the first to trek back to seemingly "tame" Chicago after an adventurous two months at their place in Valley ranch, New Mexico, are Mr. and Mrs. John H. Scoville of the Del Prado hotel. The Scovilles returned Monday. Other south siders who will return shortly from the "great open spaces" are Dr. and Mrs. James H. Breasted, their daughter, Astrid, and their son, James, of the Del Prado hotel; Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Graf, 4310 Woodlawn avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Gorrel and family of 5757 Kimbark avenue. The Breasteds, Grafs and Gorrells are at the HF Bar ranch in Wyoming.

Women Plan Luncheon.

Members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Evangelical Zion church, 100th and Throop streets, will hold a luncheon and card party Wednesday in the Food Crafts shop, 616 South Michigan avenue. Mrs. Alfred J. Houle, 1038 West 103d street, is president of the organization.

South Sider Home from Trip to Scenes of War

Ten years ago Roland W. Mors, 7311 Crandon avenue, returned from "over there" after having participated in the world war. Mr. More, then an undergraduate at the University of Chicago, was one of a small group of south siders who went to France with the American field service before the United States entered the war.

Last week Mr. More returned again from "over there" after a stay of three months. But this time it had been to satisfy his curiosity as to what was now going on in the same regions as well as to re-live his war time experiences. He was accompanied on the venture by Mrs. More and their only daughter, Susanne.

Southtown Chapter O. E. S. Entertains Grand Officers

Grand representatives' night was observed by the member of the Southtown chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, Wednesday evening at the South Side Masonic temple, 64th and Green streets. Mrs. Otto A. Maers, 6023 Paulina street, who was recently appointed to the obituary committee of the grand chapter, was the special guest.

WASHING MACHINE, BARGAIN, REPLACED FREE AFTER A YEAR

The Tribune will pay $2 for each story of the best bargain obtained in a neighborhood store, printed in the Metropolitan section. Address Bargain, Metropolitan Section, The Tribune. Make them short and snappy, writing on only one side of the paper, and print your name and address plainly.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—About two years ago I purchased a washing machine for $119 at a store in the 63d-Halsted street district. An allowance of $25 was made on my old machine, which incidentally the company has never called for. After the machine had been used for a year the wringer broke. I called up to make arrangements for having it repaired, but was about as surprised as a person could be when I was presented with a new $130 machine—an improved model—to replace the broken one.

MRS. E. BRACH,
3614 West 64th street.

Candle Shade Economy.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—I obtained my best bargain at an electrical shop on 63d street yesterday. For 50 cents when I bought three double candle shades—a style that was being closed out at regular stock. They had been priced formerly at $4.72.

MRS. ELLSWORTH ANDERSON,
7534 South Honore street.

Lifetime Sewing Machine.

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 6.—Twenty-five years ago, the first year I was married, we bought a sewing machine at a local store for $47.50. For these many years I have been making most of the clothes for my three children—little dresses for kindergarten and grammar school days; later, high school and college frocks. My faithful old machine has done heavy sewing, such as rugs nd window shades. But it has still using it. Only last week I made a sheer rayon voile dress and it stitched as perfectly as it did twenty-five years ago.

SOUTH SIDE FILLS EVERY NEED AT TRIBUNE OFFICE

Vacation Planning Now Is Big Service.

South side residents are finding the new TRIBUNE advertising and public service office at 1101 East 63d street, an inestimable help in scores of unexpected ways.

Hundreds of persons, every day since the office was opened a month ago, have taken advantage of the travel department in planning their vacations. Trained clerks have outlined the best roads for them, marked detours on understandable road maps, aided in the selection of hotels for overnight stops and given complete information about summer resorts.

For those who want to travel by water, information is supplied about boats, passage arranged for and aid given in the selection of routes, so they may get the most enjoyment out of their vacations.

Lost Children Returned.

Lost children, who had been brought into the office, have been aided in finding their parents, while an elderly woman, who was a stranger in the city and had lost the address of her son who lived in the vicinity, and who had strayed into the office because she recognized THE TRIBUNE sign on the window, was helped to her destination.

A small boy who wanted to know when the Cubs would be back in town was given a baseball calendar, a busy housewife who had a vacant room to let was aided in composing a want-ad, and a merchant was given the information he sought in regard to placing an advertisement in the Metropolitan section.

New Features Added.

A feature recently added to the office is the collection of answers to "blind" want-ads. Many of the south side business men are taking advantage of this as it saves them a trip downtown to get the replies.

CITY ENGINEERS TO TELL PUPILS OF BIG PROJECTS

Plan Program Before Term Opens.

Arrangements are being made by school officials and Richard W. Wolfe, commissioner of public works, for a series of talks to be given during the next school year in all of the senior and junior high schools, and before parent-teacher associations on improvements in Chicago during the last few years.

The speeches will be given by members of the speakers' bureau of the city department of public works.

Mr. Wolfe announced that the story will be told by the engineers, who are in charge of such projects as the airport development, river straightening, traffic control and the latest developments in the lakes-to-the-gulf waterway.

Complete arrangements for the speaking program will be made upon the return of William J. Bogan, superintendent of Chicago schools, from his vacation within two weeks. Then a meeting of school officials and members of the department of public works will be held to outline the program.

Loran D. Gayton, city engineer, who has headed the speakers' bureau since its inception last October, will be in charge of the new program.

Among the subjects expected to be included in the speech program are: "Chicago—a Seaport," "The Construction and Extent of the City's Water Tunnels," "The Repair of Streets and Alleys," "River Straightening and Its Effect on Chicago's Future," "The Building of the City's Bridges," "The Installation and Maintenance of Sewers," and "How Chicago Protects Its Water Supply."

H. T. Covington, Pioneer of Southwest Side, Dies

Harris Thorpe Covington, 65 years old, a pioneer resident of the southwest side, died at his home, 5616 Peoria street, on Aug. 11. BENTON PLACE, IN LOOP, GETS FIRST MARKER

Benton place—between Lake and Randolph streets and running between Wabash avenue and State street—has recently been marked for the first time. George R. Benton, a Chicagoan with offices at 417 South Dearborn street, was instrumental in having the sign placed.

The street was named after the Chicago man's great granduncle, Thomas Hart eBnton, one of the picturesque figures in American political history, for thirty years a United States senator from Missouri, and for a time the law partner of Andrew Jackson at Murfreesboro, Tenn.

It was this last phase of Thomas H. Benton's career that has particularly interested his Chicago descendant. A few weeks ago, George R. Benton visited the old law office in the south and found it just as it had been when occupied by the firm of Jackson & Benton.

RADIO AMATEURS TURNING MORE TO TELEVISION

'Ham' Operators Abreast of All Progress.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Amateurs in the field of radio are keeping abreast of all the developments in the technique of broadcasting and receiving and are turning more and more to television, according to W. E. Downey, assistant chief of the radio division of the department of commerce, who is perhaps the best informed man in this country on the work of the "ham" operators.

Many of them are keeping in constant touch with the Byrd expedition in the Antarctic, according to Downey, and scores of them are receiving messages from the Graf Zeppelin on its around the world flight.

So important has the work of these experimenters become, Downey pointed out, that it will be one of the topics to be discussed at the international radio conference at The Hague on Sept. 18. They may even have representation at the parley.

Reviews History of Amateurs.

The history of radio amateur activity is reviewed by Mr. Downey in an especially prepared resumé, as follows:

"Amateur activity in radio can be said to have begun with the staff of the radio art itself. There was, however, little noticeable activity in the United States until after 1900, and more particularly in 1909, when the S.S. Republic succeeded in obtaining, by the use of her wireless, assistance to save all of her passengers and crew after colliding with the S.S. Florida.

"In 1910 an act was passed by the United States government requiring certain steamers to be equipped with radio.

"On July 5, 1912, the International Radio Telegraph convention was signed at London which designated certain bands of wave lengths for various services and on Aug. 13 of the same year the act to regulate radio communication was passed by congress. This act was the first authority for control over amateur and point to point communication. Regulation 15 under section 4 of this act applies specifically to amateurs and provided that no private station not handling bona fide commercial traffic could operate on a wave length exceeding 200 meters, except by special permission of the secretary of commerce.

Hoover Backs Amateurs.

"The American Radio Relay league was organized in 1914 by a small enthusiastic group of amateurs. Its purpose was to band all amateurs together so that each amateur could talk to and know all about the other.

"President Hoover, shortly after he was appointed secretary of commerce, evidenced his interest in the amateur by requesting that the department be advised as to how it could be of best service to them and to further show his interest, he stated that the department would award a cup annually during that administration for the best radio equipment in a major degree manufactured by the amateur, under such conditions as their directors might lay down.

"The entrance of the United States into the world war made necessary the suspension of all amateur communication, but the army and navy, recognizing that the amateurs were well trained by their experience, enlisted 3,000 to 4,000 of them, and it has been said that they were among the most efficient operators in active service.

Kept Contact with McMillan.

"It will be recalled that communication with the McMillan expeditions was carried on by amateur stations. This would not have been possible otherwise.

"During the years that have gone by the amateur has embraced every opportunity to be of service. This is brought forcefully to mind in the international radio convention of 1927 wherein he is definitely mentioned for the first time in such a document and given an international place in the wave length spectrum.

"The growth of the amateur in numbers from the records of the radio division of the department of commerce indicates that at the end of the fiscal year 1913 there were 1,224 licensed amateurs and in 1928 there were 16,928."

Short Wave Auto Sets Banned by Michigan

DETROIT.—A new law in Michigan provides a fine of $1,000, imprisonment for six months, or both, for equipping or using an automobile with a short wave receiver unless the car is used and owned by a police officer or a police permit has been granted.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

Today we are broadcasting over again the famous prize fight between Pancho Villa, the tiny Filipino, and Jimmy Wilde, the pride of Wales and England, the idol of London's National Sporting club—for the flyweight championship of the world. It is the 18th of June, in 1923, at the Polo grounds, in New York City.

(Gong!)

There's the gong! Round one!

Both men are on their toes and out of their corners in a flash. They begin mixing it in the center of the ring. Good defense on both sides and lots of snappy and brilliant footwork. The brown boy lands a left to Wilde's head but it's a light blow. They're exchanging left hand punches. They don't mean much; each boy will depend on his right for the real punches. They've gone into a clinch. They're hammering each other about the body—Hey! Villa is tearing in—he lands a pair of hard left and rights to the head—now a right cross to the head. Wilde keeps in there with him—he doesn't seem to mind the punches—they've clinched again—now Referee Patsey Haley is breaking them apart—they're almost lightning fast, ladies and gentlemen, it's hard to keep track of the punches.

(Gong!)

That's all of round one. It was an even round, that first one, with neither boy having any particular advantage in there.

(Gong!)

There's the bell! Round two! Speedy getaway from the corners again and they're in the center of the ring, ready to battle. Owowowowow! Villa pastes a hard righthander to Jimmy's jaw, and he's got 'im dizzy! Jimmy's gone into a clinch and he's holding on, while the little Filipino is savagely attacking his body. Rights and lefts, quicker than we can tell you about them, to that slim white body! He's GOT WILDE GROGGY! THE CHAMPION IS STAGGERING AROUND THE RING! VILLA IS PASTING HIM WITH EVERYTHING BUT HOME PLATE! HE'S WALLOPING HIM ALL AROUND THE RING! Wilde comes into a clinch again! Now Patsey Haley breaks them apart, and Villa is after the champ again with those pokes to the head. THIS MAY BE THE FINISH! Wilde is trying hard! He's trying to come back and stave off the finish until the end of the round! He needs the smelling salts right now! Ohhh!

(Gong!)

And that's all of round two, ladies and gentlemen, but that last swing by Pancho put Jimmy Wilde on the mat, and his seconds came out and carried him back to his corner. His seconds are working over him in his corner, and he'll probably be able to stagger out for the third, but the finish is getting pretty close.

(Gong!)

Round three! Yep, Jimmy's getting up! He's coming out of his corner unsteadily, and Pancho goes three-quarters of the way across the ring to meet him! Jimmy's ready for fight! And he's trading punches with Pancho over there near his own corner. All the steam's gone out of Jimmy's pokes, I guess. The brown boy is taking everything without a whimper—he's pushing right in—waiting for a chance to sneak that right hand over against the jaw again! They're just sparring and waiting. Villa is not putting up any attack this time. He's on the defensive—he wants to tire out Jimmy before he puts over the little giant killer! Socko and socko!

(Gong!)

That's all of round three, ladies and gentlemen. Jimmy hasn't gone down yet, but he's tiring quickly, and it still remains only a question of time. Instead of tearing in and carrying the fight to the Welshman, Pancho Villa elected in that last session, to stay back and wait for the Welshman to tire himself out with punches that the brown boy easily stayed away from.

(Gong!)

Round four! Out they come for the fourth round, and they're slugging! Just standing up there in the center of the ring and trading punches to the body and the head. The brown boy is backing up. They've gone into a clinch! Haley pats them on the shoulder and they break away—now they're sparring—Wilde is coming in—Pancho is backing up! Jimmy's on the offensive.

(Gong!)

That's all of round four, ladies and gentlemen. It still looks like Villa's fight whenever he gets ready to go out and take it. Jimmy is just about worn out—there's no more juice left in his punches, and Pancho is taking them all over the face and body.

There's the whistle! Seconds out of the ring!

(Gong!)

That's the bell! Round five! Wilde is coming out his corner slowly. The speed has gone out of this fight now! Both men are pretty tired. Even 110 pound gets tired after four rounds of what they've been through! Villa is saving that right hand again; he's using the left almost alone. O! There's a left to the stomach that has Jimmy almost doubled up as he comes into a clinch!—it hurt him that time—now they've broken again, and Villa—uummmh! Villa landed a hard left to the face.

(Gong!)

That's the end of round five. Both men retire to their corners, and Jimmy's seconds rush in to see what they can do for that injured optic of Jimmy's. It's swollen shut and his face is lathered with blood. Pancho Villa is almost unmarked in his corner, but the brown skin is darker in spots to mark the places where Jimmy's been landing with that right hand of his. Jimmy is showing a lot of grit, sticking in there with Villa, when he knows he's lost the fight. This must be a typical example of real Welsh stubbornness. The seconds are getting Jimmy in shape for the next frame. They've given him a whiff at the bottle, and his bruised face screws up wryly at the odor. There's the signal—seconds out of the ring. Away go the pails and towels!

(Gong!)

Round six! Villa is coming out of his corner with a determined look on his face. He's landing lefts and rights to Jimmy's body! He's going to end it right now—that's what those punches are saying. Jimmy keeps his guard up and comes back weakly. Owow! The brown boy lands a left to the face—JIMMY STAGGERS BACK TO A NEUTRAL CORNER! VILLA IS TEARING IN AFTER HIM! He's driving blows at his body and head—there'll be no stopping Pancho now. Jimmy is motioning to the referee—Pancho is hitting him with the back of his hand and he doesn't like it, but Patsy motions the fighters to go on—Villa is going after him with lefts and rights to the body! WILDE IS STAGGERING BACKWARD! I GUESS IT'S ALL OVER NOW! THE LITTLE WELSHMAN IS GROGGY! HE CAN'T STAND UP BUT HE WON'T FALL DOWN! HE WON'T GO DOWN! VILLA IS BEATING HIM WITH BOTH FISTS BUT HE WON'T DROP! VILLA IS DRIVING HIM ALL AROUND THE RING. WILDE IS STOOPING OVER WITH HIS ARMS WRAPPED AROUND HIS HEAD! HE'S GOING TO KEEP ON! HE'S GAME . . . O, BUT HE'S GAME! Villa's on top of him now with punches—rights and lefts on the head! Wilde is still on his feet—he's unsteady—a good sock will end it right now——

(Gong!)

That's all of round six! And what a round! Wilde just dropped into his seat when his seconds pushed it out. He's done for now. He can't go into the next round! The crowd is shouting to Patsy Haley to stop it right now! Wilde's seconds are arguing with him to toss in the towel, but the little Welshman intends to fight it out until he drops. His seconds are wiping the claret from his face and body—from his nose, from a gash on his cheek and from that cut over his right eye. Both his eyes are almost closed.

It's nonsense for him to go back into the ring. There's the whistle—seconds out of the ring——

(Gong!)

There's the bell! Round seven! Wilde is staggering out! He can hardly raise his arms to defend himself. Villa has begun the shower of blows again to face and body! Rights and lefts, and rights and lefts that send the little Welshman staggering from pillar to post. He's reeling all around the ring, with Villa right after him all the time. He's taking terrible punishment, but he's too stubborn to fall down—his body's giving in—he can't hold his arms up—they're falling—his arms are betraying him—that little fighting tike is giving up—the mind says go on, but those arms won't respond. They're down! There it comes! Ohhhh! A right inside swing to the jaw, and Jimmy Wilde is on the mat—HE'S DOWN! PATSY HALEY IS COUNTING HIM OUT.

JEAN GOLDKETTE . . . . . .

Out of the old music called jazz has come a music of character. Out of the same music has grown an orchestral expression of the New World. Jean Goldkette has developed the music of the modern dance to a point of symphonic perfection. The band plays with a vitality that captures the evasive spirit of youth. It plays with versatility that encompasses both the Negroid spirit of the Congo cancan and the delicate air of a Colonial minuet. Simple melodies are developed into inspiring constellations of notes. The visions of Victor Young, orchestrator, take form in the studios of W-G-N. They are illuminated by Goldkette and broadcast. Time: 1:30, 2:25, 11:00.

HERBERT JOHNSON . .

Tonight Herbert Johnson will be heard in a brief piano recital. This capable young artist is one of the few Americans to reach such distinction as has Johnson. Critics acclaim him as a master of touch—as a brilliant technician—as the possessor of a sturdy musical background. 8:45.

LARRY LARSEN . . .

Larry Larsen, organist, has selected a few of the lighter favorites for his programs today. Music that everybody knows, and music that everybody likes come in rollicking style from the Goldkette organ. It is the organ specially designed to meet the specifications of Jean Goldkette. Hear Larsen this afternoon and evening at 2:00 and at 6:30.

COSMO d'ALMADA . .

Cosmo d'Almada, internationally famous baritone, and native of the United States, sings one of his last recitals before his departure for an engagement with an Italian troupe in Europe. The singer, of Spanish-American lineage, is booked for an engagement for a tour of Germany and the larger cities on the Mediterranean. Formerly Cosmo d'Almada has sung with opera companies from coast to coast, and was brilliantly successful during his concert tour of Italy. 8:45.

BIRTH RATE HIGH IN WARD 15; FEW INFANT DEATHS

City Studies Relation of Housing to Children.

The chance of newborn residents of Chicago living to be 3 years old depends largely on where they live, how much fresh air and sunshine they get, and who their parents are. Youngsters in the less congested districts of the south side have a better chance of surviving to kindergarten age than children born in noisy, crowded, smoky districts.

These facts were revealed in a recent report of the department of health compiled under the direction of Commissioner Arnold H. Kegel. The statistics are those of 1928 and are the first prepared by any large city to show the relation of infant birth and death rates to housing conditions, density of population, and racial characteristics, according to Dr. Kegel.

Residents of the 15th ward, on the southwest side, are the most consistent producers of new citizens, the report shows, and a low infant death rate is reported for that ward. According to the report last year 26.4 children per 1,000 population were born and 55.05 babies per 1,000 births died.

Population Only 7,000 a Mile.

Officials of the department pointed out that in the 15th ward there are only 7,000 inhabitants a square mile and a good deal of sunshine is available. The predominating nationalities are Polish, German, and Slavic.

The 18th, 19th, and 9th wards, which have a population of 5,000 per square mile, of north European extraction, likewise have large birth rates and low infant mortality.

In the 10th and 12th wards, however, the infant death rate is higher, according to Dr. Kegel, who pointed to the manufacturing character of the wards, despite the fact that in these wards the population is not dense. There are only 5,000 per square mile in the 10th ward, 9,000 in the 12th, and 18,000 in the 13th, compared with 40,000 and 50,000 in other sections of the city.

In the 8th ward, the Woodlawn and Catham districts, birth rates are lower than in the wards where foreign born residents predominate, Dr. Kegel said. In the south shore district of the 7th ward the density of American born apartment dwellers is 17,000 per square mile and the birth rate 19 per 1,000.

High Death Rate in First.

In the downtown district and near south side, included in the First ward, the birth rate is the lowest in the city, and the infant death rate extremely high. Dr. Kegel explains that the Negroes, Italians, and Chinese, who predominate in this district, suffer great losses in infant mortality and have a large rooming house population where comparatively few babies are born. In this ward the birth rate is 8.5 per 1,000, and the death rate 93.35 per 1,000 births.

The stockyards district of the 13th ward has one of the largest infant death rates in the city. That ward has a birth rate of 15.4 and a death rate of 113.43 per 1,000 births.

The 14th ward, also in the stockyards district but somewhat farther removed, has a birth rate of 16.7, and an infant death rate of 96.40.

In the wards of denser population, the 17th ward has 23,000 per square mile, but, since it is the residence of families of adequate income, has a low infant mortality. True to form, however, the Americans produce only 14.5 babies per 1,000 population. The death rate is 54.13 per 1,000 births, slightly less than the average figure.

Few Deaths in Hyde Park.

The wealthier classes living in the hotel and apartment sections of Hyde Park, although they are crowded 38,000 to a square mile, observe modern hygienic methods and have a small death rate of 50.20. Births in this district are 14.3 per 1,000.

In Englewood, a district containing Jewish, Dutch, and Negro residents, the infant death rate is brought up by the presence of the latter, according to Dr. Kegel, while the birth rate is comparatively high because of the presence of the Dutch and Jewish residents. More than 14 babies per 1,000 population were born there last year, while the total of 61.06 per 1,000 born died in infancy.

The sixth ward presents an American population, living fairly close together, but of adequate income, bringing the death rate down as well as the birth rate. In this, the university district, there are 28,000 residents per square mile, but since many of these are students the birth rate is only 12.4 and the infant mortality rate 44.44.

In the more congested district of the 11th ward where 80,000 Germans, Poles, and Lithuanians live per square mile, both the birth and death rates are higher than in the sections populated by native Americans. There 19.5 births per 1,000 and 74.04 deaths per 1,000 births were recorded.

Negro Birth Rate Is Low.

The most congested districts of the south side, occupied almost entirely by Negroes, are the Second, Third and Fourth wards, where housing is probably the worst in the city. In the Fourth ward, 45,000 are crowded per square mile. The birth rate is 12.3 and the death rate 74.19.

Among the 48,000 residents of the Third ward there were 16.9 births per 1,000 last year and 82.56 deaths per 1,000 births. The largest infant death rate is found in the Second ward, as well as an extremely small birth rate. In that ward there are 54,000 residents per square mile, 11.5 births per 1,000 population, and the enormous death rate of 125.55 per 1,000 births.

From these observations the department of health has concluded that the largest birth rates occur among Jews, Germans, and Scandinavians, and the largest death rates among the Negroes and the Poles. Negroes also have, along with the native Americans, the lowest birth rates, according to Dr. Kegel.

A circus and Punch and Judy show, the last program of the summer, sponsored by the Greene Recreation center and the Chicago council of the League of Women Voters, were given by the children at Greene school playground, 3537 South Paulina street, Wednesday afternoon.

TRAFFIC SIGNALS ASKED ON STATE FROM 69TH TO 79TH

Three south side civic organizations are urging the installation of traffic signals at every intersection on State street between 69th and 79th streets. Aroused by the frequent accidents on the street, members of these organizations assert that stop and go lights are the only solution to the problem.

The organizations urging this improvement are the East Hamilton Park Improvement association, the South Park Manor Improvement association, and the Park Manor Improvement association. The presidents of these organizations will appoint committees this week to meet with Ald. William D. Meyering [8th] and Ald. O. E. Northrup [19th] to urge them to introduce an ordinance in the city council which will order the immediate installation of the lights.

AQUINAS HIGH TO BE FINISHED BY FALL OF 1930

The new Aquinas Dominican High school, under construction at 72d street and Clyde avenue, by the Sisters of St. Dominic of Adrian, Mich., will be completed for occupancy in September, 1930. The new school will be equippew with a gymnasium, cafeteria and kitchen and many additional classrooms and will double the present capacity of 400 students.

The rebuilding program is being carried through with the removal of the convent from the northeast corner of 72d street and Clyde avenue, opposite the high school, to the southeast corner. When this building is remodeled into a four story structure it will accommodate thirty sisters, and it will be ready for occupancy this month. The sisters have temporary quarters at 2405 East 72d street.

This building was originally built by the Catholic Extension society nineteen years ago and is one of the landmarks of the south shore section. In 1915 it was purchased by the Dominican sisters and formed the nucleus for the present institution, which was organized in 1917, but which was not enlarged to its present capacity until 1926.

CHICAGO LAWN ASKS REMOVAL OF SPUR TRACK

Claim Cars Block Central Park Avenue.

Residents of the Chicago Lawn district took steps to compel the Chicago Surface lines to remove the spur track on Central Park avenue, between 62d and 63d streets, last week when William F. Stelzer, president of the South Hamlin Avenue and Vicinity Property Owners' association, brought the matter to the attention of Ald. Thomas F. Byrne [15th].

Central Park avenue will be a 25 foot wide thoroughfare when ground operations in connection with the Grand Trunk track elevation are completed. The elevation work will be completed within two weeks, according to William G. Heggie, field engineer for the railroad.

Spur Removed Two Months Ago.

According to Mr. Stelzer, the Surface lines have maintained a spur track on Central Park avenue for many years. It was removed, however, a few months ago, when the Grand Trunk railroad started elevating its tracks, which are immediately adjacent to the street.

Mr. Stelzer pointed out that the residents of the community are opposed to the spur and will do everything in their power to stop the street car officials from replacing it.

Would Block Other Traffic.

A street car standing on the street, Mr. Stelzer said, would practically close the thoroughfare to other traffic. It would also slow up fire department trucks traveling to fires in the vicinity.

The spur, he pointed out, was built when Chicago Lawn was the city limits. Development of other communities along 63d street west of Chicago Lawn has compelled the Surface lines to extend its tracks further west. The spur is used at the present time for the switching of 63d and Central Park cars.

Mr. Stelzer will suggest that the Surface lines construct the spur at 63d and Cicero avenue, near the Municipal airport.

MEN

Willing to Work

WHO WANT TO JOIN the Fastest Growing, Biggest Money Making Young Organization in America

THIS IS OUR SECOND MONTH IN BUSINESS

OUR MEN ARE EARNING $150,000 to $200,000 IN COMMISSIONS THIS MONTH

Last month we secured a stock of merchandise with a retail value of considerably more than a half million dollars at ten cents on the dollar. We have been furnishing this to salesmen at about 16 2/3% of the former wholesale cost. It is a line of merchandise in a new industry, but already one of the six largest in America—an industry whose sales are growing at the rate of $300,000,000.00 a year. It is a line of merchandise that sells to practically every man and woman. Our salesmen have been enabled to sell this merchandise at about 20% of the normal retail value and still make two or three hundred per cent profit.

Last Sunday we published the record of 26 men, each of whose average earnings in the two days were $36.00.

On last Saturday our sales were approximately 7,000 units. On Thursday before this ad was written our sales were approximately 5,000 units. We are having additional stocks of merchandise shipped in from Albany, N. Y.; Atlanta, Ga.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Jacksonville, Fla., and Norfolk, Va., where some of the stock we bought was in storage, in order to keep our men busy until September 1st. We could have sold these stocks in the warehouses where they were located, but are paying the freight charges ourselves in order that men here will not be idle before September 1st.

On September 1st we are starting the sale of a million units of another article of merchandise similar to the one we are now selling. This new article has a bigger retail value for the same money, and we have every reason to believe it will be immeasurably a bigger seller. We will give exclusive territorial franchises throughout the United States on this new deal.

We do not expect to put any more salesmen on to sell our first article of merchandise, but solicit applications for the new deal and invite the investigation of men who are willing to work in direct selling in order to make big money. Remember, we are only interested in workers. We have no place for swivel chair managers who want the other fellow to do all the work and give them all the profits. We will have a banquet the week-end before September 1st at which we will show the new million unit line of merchandise which we will sell beginning September 1st.

We have taken on a job lot of Electric Grills along with some other merchandise which we invite new men who wish to join our organization to close out this month.

These are the highest quality Electric Grills, made of very heavy aluminum. The normal retail value is about $20.00. They were formerly sold as a specialty at $17.95. We will furnish them in small quantities to salesmen at $7.50 each. Good men should readily sell them in dozen lots at $6.75 each, and should sell from one to two dozen or more daily.

These grills are a great convenience in preparing food such as pancakes, steaks, chops, or most anything that can be fried or broiled, and food prepared in this way has a flavor of goodness that it is impossible to duplicate by any other method of cooking.

This opportunity will be a bonanza to high caliber men and especially to men who know how to sell aluminum ware direct to the user.

We have a few other high grade merchandise specialties, including a lot of silverware of the highest grade, manufactured by two leading standard makers in America, which we will furnish to salesmen so they can resell it at 50% of the normal price and still make a good profit.

For further details and information regarding the banquet, at which we expect to have 500 to 1,000 salesmen, call or write

Higher Rents in 1930

Decrease in building, tightening of construction loans, together with the World's Fair, will create a shortage of apts. You cannot get a long lease at present rent. Try it. A co-operative apt. is your only protection, just as it has been in the past.

We have real bargains in 4, 5 and 6 room apts., not in elevator bldgs., but in three story walkups, in the same location. 2 blocks to Sheridan-rd. Service and operating cost is less than one-third of that of the tall bldgs. The payments are as easy as rent and they represent ownership of property, not rent receipts. Think this over. Don't be caught as you were in 1920.

LINCOLNWOOD APARTMENTS

OFFER THE HOME THAT YOU have wanted to find for years, in three, four or five rm. apartments.
This beautiful Evanston building is being completed in a charming wooded garden spot, new to apartments. Yet the location, a residential community of fine homes, does not sacrifice convenience. Transportation, shopping facilities, schools, and churches are within ready reach. The building offers many interesting features not usually found in apartment buildings—for instance:
A court sixty-five feet wide. Wood burning fireplaces, gas lighters. Raised dining rooms. Steel casement, plate glass windows in dining rooms. Kitchens electrically ventilated. Ornamental radiator covers in dining rooms and living rooms. Tile baths with showers and shower stalls.
Rentals are no more than you have paid for apartments offering much less in facilities and happy living when compared with the Lincolnwood.

TRIBUNE TOWER

The TRIBUNE TOWER is the coolest building in Chicago.

All the corridors are open to the outside air.

Every office is an outside office.

Every south, east, and west window has an awning.

The building is kept immaculately clean.

Windows stay up. It is quiet. The air is pure and there are no buildings to cut off light and breeze and radiate heat in your office.

Our offices are cheerful, delightful in summer and comfortable in winter.

If you are interested, let us try to meet your requirements.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS

The condition of the money market has not affected our ability to amply meet the requirements of Chicago home owners who might desire second mortgage loans.

Money rates have been high, and the charges against second mortgage loans are up. It may be that our rates are too low, but so long as we enjoy the favorable circumstances as we have in the past it has not been found necessary to raise them.

We are still charging 6% accruing interest, and a commission of 3½% for a 1 year loan, 6% for a 2 year loan, and 9% for a 3 year loan. These commissions are applied regardless of whether the borrower chooses to liquidate his loan in installments of 2% a month, or more.

We believe that we offer to home owners of Chicago and suburbs not only a unique plan of second mortgage financing, but one which is saving them a tremendous amount of financing charge.

PACKARD 6 SEDAN, 1927.—Without a doubt one of the finest and best conditioned cars of this type and model we have ever had to offer. It has not had a great deal of driving, the finish is perfect, tires most excellent and has spotlight. It is one of the 4 door 5 passenger model 4-26 cars and one that would appeal instantly upon inspection. Guaranteed mechanically: $1,175.

PIERCE-ARROW MODEL 81 SEDAN-LIMOUSINE.—A 1928 car that has had the care and attention of a competent chauffeur. The car was used about 15,000 miles, operates smoothly and quietly, and in our estimation is practically as good as new mechanically. Appearance is perfect. Included in the equipment are 6 wire wheels, Hoo-Dye shock absorbers, fender wells, etc. Guaranteed mechanically: $1,375.

1928 GRAHAM-PAIGE 629 SEDAN. This is a 4 door 7 passenger and a recent delivery; has 6 tires, side mountings, de luxe equipment, beautiful maroon finish, first class mechanically and backed by the Bird-Sykes guarantee; its appearance is perfect and practically identical with the latest cars. You owe it to yourself to come and investigate this particular car. It is a car that is exceptional in more ways than one and represents by far the greatest automobile value ever offered for $1,250.

PAIGE STRAIGHT 8 BARGAIN. Here's a model 885 7 passenger sedan with the 4 speed transmission that has just come into our possession. It was given the finest care imaginable; the finish, a conservative shade of green, is like new; and the condition of the interior would lead you to believe the upholstery had never been sat upon. The tires are A1; has lots of equipment, including Lorraine spotlight; and we will guarantee it mechanically. $825.

1928 GRAHAM-PAIGE 5 PASS. SEDAN. This popular 610 model was given but a few thousand miles of service and traded to us in new car condition mechanically. The paint is without mars, scratches, and the nickel is just like new. Interior is immaculate. Tires, of course, are almost new. Has cowl lights and full equipment, speed mascot, etc. A wonderful value at $675.

CHRYSLER 1929, MODEL 75, 5 PASS. SEDAN. Turned in to us after having had about 4,000 miles of driving. It is in such superb condition we doubt if even an expert could distinguish it from new. Everything is included in the way of equipment. Those who have been waiting for one of these popular models now have a genuine opportunity. $1,175.

GRAHAM-PAIGE 5 PASS. SEDAN DEMONSTRATOR. One of our 1928 and 1929 most popular model because of its good looks, brilliant performance and 4 speed transmission which affords a great range of speeds with economy. It is fitted with cowl lights, has almost new tires and in the necessary condition to carry the Sykes guarantee. Because only one is available we suggest early inspection: $1,125.

PAIGE 6-65 1927 SEDAN. A 5 passenger that will surely please you. It's in the original finish, which actually shows no signs of wear, and the entire car is as bright and shiny as when new. Color is a beautiful shade of green, has seat covers, almost new tires, de luxe motormeter, step plates, bumpers, 4 wheel brakes, etc., and guaranteed. Only one person can buy it, so do not delay. $575.
